Charles Coley Reminds Group Of Dance Rules

Charles Coley, chairman of the Dance Committee, yesterday announced the rules and regulations that will govern the Germans Club dance Friday night.

The rules, adopted by the Dance Committee, state that the conduct of all dances in the University will be completely under the control of the committee.

All clubs, classes or groups sponsoring dances must get permission from the committee—represented by assistant to the Dean of Student Affairs, Ray Jefferies—and pay a $2 fee. These dances may only be held on Fridays or Saturdays, except by special permission.

All chaperones must be approved by the Dance Committee.

Any group giving a dance not considered up to Dance Committee standards will forfeit the right to give a dance for a period decided upon by the committee.

The committee also has the power to keep any person from dances who is guilty of misconduct.

Misconduct includes: drinking, giving wrong identification and bringing intoxicating beverages on the dance floor.

The committee also has jurisdiction over all concerts held in conjunction with dances.

UNC Leaders Will Speak To NSA Group

Two student body leaders will speak Thursday night at an informal meeting of the National Student Association Committee.

Ed Levy, NSA coordinator, yesterday invited UNC students to attend this meeting to hear about the NSA from such persons as Don Furtado, student body president; and Curtis Gans, editor of The Daily Tar Heel.

The NSA meeting has been set for 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Roland Parker I.

Levy said yesterday that every member of the UNC student body is a member of NSA and, as such, should want to learn the objectives and actions of this group.

It is my desire as National Student Association coordinator of the University of North Carolina to acquaint the student body with this organization which it consciously or unconsciously supports," Levy said.

GM Special Events Group Plans Game Reception

The Graham Memorial Special Events Committee will hold a reception for Duke and Carolina students prior to the Duke football game Nov. 22.

This reception is one of many activities throughout the year sponsored by this GM committee to meet the needs of students at both graduate and undergraduate level.

One of the committee's major jobs this year will be to coordinate plans for a special committee to work on bettering faculty-student relationships.

Other activities for the year include free dance and bridge lessons, musical concerts a special Christmas program, and a talent contest.

Chairman of the committee is Edna Faye Pugh, a senior sociology major and member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority. This year she was ADPI rush chairman and is a member of Angel Flight, the AFROTC sponsored squadron. She is also a member of WUNC-FM staff and the Panhellenic Council.

Discussing the aims of the committee, Miss Pugh said, "We are not here for a particular group of students, rather we are here to serve the student body."

In an appeal for suggestions, she said the only way the Special Events Committee can provide the campus with activities its students like is for the students to indicate their interests.

The first meeting of the Carolina Forum will be addressed by the Rev. Henry Hill Crane, a Methodist minister from Detroit, Mich., in Hill Hall Friday at 8 p.m.

The subject of his speech will be "The Fate We Race." The Rev. Mr. Crane will point out three major alternatives confronting the American people and discuss the role that religion should play in the face of the situation.

The Carolina Forum, which is sponsoring the Rev. Mr. Crane's speech, is an official agency of the UNC student government which provides speakers on government, labor, industry and education.

Special Committee Named To Study Brooks' Charges

A special committee, appointed by Student Council Chairman Jim Long, met last night in the first of a series of sessions to examine two problems concerning the elections laws and the council's powers in this area.

John Brooks, member of Legislature, appeared before the council Tuesday night. He urged an investigation of questions pertaining to the reapportionment of Legislature and pertaining to the right of a duly-elected legislator to hold his seat until his term of office has expired.

After Brooks had presented these two questions, Long appointed a special committee to study the issues and make recommendations to the Student Council.

Regarding the reapportionment, Brooks questioned the fairness of the recent action of Legislature, which, he said, did not apportion its seats strictly according to population. This was the criteria set up in the Student Constitution, he said.

Brooks also asked the council to define student rights as regards the possibility for a legislator to lose his seat before his term has expired.

This has occurred when a legislator, elected in the springs, must relinquish his seat because his district loses one representative in fall Legislature reapportionments. Commenting the council, Brooks said yesterday he was pleased the Student Council is considering civil cases in addition to Campus Code cases.

Brooks said both are difficult problems which need to be answered. He commented that if the council answers these problems, this will be a step forward in student government.

When Student Legislature assembles tonight, six bills will be awaiting action.

The meeting will be at 7:30 in the Phi Hall, 4th floor, New East. Bills coming up include:

(1) A bill concerning change in the selection of jurors, Gary Greer (SP). This was passed out of the Ways and Means Committee, but came back to it for amendment to give a more realistic approach toward selecting the jurors.

(2) A bill for the restoration of the basic NSA declaration concerning academic freedom—Greer (SP). This was passed unfavorably by the Ways and Means Committee.

(3) A bill for appropriations for a TV set in Whitehead—Rudy Edwards (SP).

(4) A bill to provide a filing clerk for Legislature—Dave Biron (UP). This will come from the Rules Committee.

(5) A bill to establish a definite policy for the publishing of the Yackety Yack by student government and to appropriate funds necessary for the enactment of this policy—John Brooks (SP). This will come from the Rules Committee also.

Meeting yesterday afternoon, the Traffic Advisory Commission approved proposals giving various traffic committees names more aptly describing their functions and a more detailed explanation of their role in campus traffic affairs.

These proposals will probably reach the Student Legislature shortly for legislative approval as an attempt is made to establish a more effective and efficient traffic control system.

The Traffic Advisory Commission itself would receive the name of Motor Vehicles Advisory Commission with nine members: six workers and the chairman appointed by the president of the student body and chairman of the Traffic Board and Student Traffic Council. (These last two have proposed new names.)

The new Motor Vehicles Advisory Commission would have investigative powers over any traffic problem which might arise and the power to make appropriate recommendations to the proper bodies.

It would make periodic reports of its investigations to the Student Legislature.

The Traffic Board would issue summons and collect and present to the Student Traffic Council all pertinent information concerning a case. Its new name under the changes would be the Traffic Council Investigation Staff.

The Student Traffic Council would receive the name of Traffic Court and have the right to levy graduated parking fines.
