

TRACKIN' THE TARHEELS

A group of young men representing the University of North Carolina did willfully and with malice aforethought invade this city of Knoxville on Oct. 31, 1958, with full intent of crushing the morale of a similar group representing the University of Tennessee.

The Tar Heels touched-down at Knoxville Airport yesterday at about 3 o'clock. From there busses carried them into the city to the Hotel Farragut, where the team promptly took a short nap.

At 4:30 a squad meeting was held where the strategy to be used against the Volunteers was explained in detail by Coach Jim Tatum and cohorts. After supper, the Tar Heels attended a flick emmasse, returned to the hotel, and turned in for a good night's rest.

KICKOFF SET FOR 2 O'CLOCK

Today at 12:00 the Tar Heels will leave for Shields-Watkins Field, and at 2:00 the Blue and White takes the field against the Vols of Tennessee.

Today the Tar Heels will be trying to do two things a Carolina team has failed to come up with since the golden era of Choo-Choo Justice: 1—riding high on a 4-game winning streak, the Heels attempt to make it 5 in a row. 2—Carolina will be attempting to beat the Volunteers for the first time in nine years.

Carolina fans from all over remember the way the Vols spoiled Carolina's Homecoming but good last year. Bobby Gordon and Co. completely routed the hapless Tar Heels to the tune of 35-0. It was a day on which Carolina could do nothing right, and Tennessee could do no wrong.

TAR HEELS SEEK REVENGE

Smarter from this humiliation, the Heels would like nothing better than to shove that disgrace down the Vols' throats here today. Most folks feel they have the horses to do it.

Desire and morale are highest ever in the Carolina camp, but not to the point of overconfidence. The players, coaches, and everyone else associated with the team realize that Tennessee is not a team to be taken lightly. The Volunteers' paltry 2-3 record makes them more dangerous than if they were undefeated. The experts say their offense is ready to break loose on any given Saturday, and today could be it.

BOWDEN WYATT TO SHIFT LINEUP

Tennessee coach Bowden Wyatt has said he plans to shift his squad around plenty for this contest, using sophs at many new positions. One soph he may not be able to shift anywhere is the team's signal caller, tailback Bill Majors. Majors, at the time of this writing, was still a question mark, and a very big one.

The Tar Heels, with the exception of Ed Lipski who now seems fully recovered from a minor practice injury, are in top shape personnel-wise.

The Vol defense could break loose today, but they have it to do. The fact that Carolina has allowed only 13 points in its last 4 games (a national top-spot) coupled with an item that the Vols have scored only 34 points all year would seem to make this highly doubtful.

CAROLINA'S OFFENSE HAS GAINED MOMENTUM

After a slow start, Carolina's offense has gained momentum considerably. While the defense paved the way for 1-touchdown wins over Southern Cal and South Carolina, the offense has exploded for 53 points in the last two games.

Today's big war which pits the traditional single wing of Bowden Wyatt against Jim Tatum's almost pro-type split T, shapes up as an interesting game. The Tar Heels will be out to make it extremely interesting for their followers.

Cross-Country Team Faces South Carolina

By BING SOMERS

The UNC cross-country team, still minus Wayne Bishop and lugger an almost unbelievable 1-3 record along, invades the border state today for a dual meet with South Carolina.

This is the initial away meet for the Tar Heels who are hoping for a change of luck. Picked as conference favorites along with Duke and Maryland, Carolina has been rudely manhandled by opponents in 3 of four meets. Only Virginia seems to have read the pre-season script falling by 20-41.

Despite the fact, however, that Clemson, Maryland, and even State have upended the Tar Heels, Carolina must still be slightly favored in this meet. Teamwise, the Gamecocks shouldn't present too much of a problem, but their number one man can cause plenty of worry.

Latham Top Runner

That would be Billy Latham who last year finished first in the ACC meet at Wake Forest. With Bishop out indefinitely, he must now be regarded as the number one runner in the conference. Still, it takes more than one man to win a meet and South Carolina's depth is questionable.

Frosh Upset Terps, 20-0

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Carolina's freshman football team gave highly favored Maryland a Halloween surprise party in Kenan Stadium yesterday by defeating the unbeaten Terps 20-0.

The Tar Babies combined a solid offense with an equally potent defense to shutout the Terrapins who had scored a total of 89 points in their two previous games. The Carolina frosh scored in every period except the last to rack up their second win of the season against one loss.

Terps Lose Ball

For Gene Alderton's Terps the loss could be summed up in four words, fumbles and intercepted passes. The visitors lost the ball three times on pass interceptions and twice on fumbles.

Maryland moved the ball well on occasions, but when they got inside the Carolina 20 the going got considerably tougher. Late in the first half the Terps had the ball on the Tar Heel 7 but could not get more than three yards in four plays.

The Terrapins won the toss and elected to receive to start the game. After moving the ball for one first down to the Carolina 48, Maryland quarterback Dick Novak had his first pass of the contest intercepted by Gil Carson.

Carson scores on 26 yard run. From their own 41 the Tar Babies launched a scoring drive that ended with Carson going 26 yards around left end for the first touchdown of the game. Gene Shuford ran for the extra points, and after 9:09 of the first quarter the Tar Babies held an 8-0 lead which they never relinquished.

Maryland took the kickoff and marched down the field to the Carolina 19 behind the passing and running of Lonnie Barnhart. Here, however, the Tar Babies got tough and made the Terps give up the ball on downs.

Farris makes second touchdown. Once again the Carolina frosh started a drive which gave them another score. Behind the passing of Ray Farris the Tar Babies moved for five first downs before the Carolina quarterback scored the second touchdown on a sneak. Gene Shuford's attempt to run for the extra point failed, but the frosh held a 14-0 lead.

Roland Mase took Bill Lopp's kickoff and returned it to the Maryland 38. The Tar Babies held the Terps at this point and forced them to punt. After making two first downs the Carolina team almost scored again on a 42 yard pass from Ward Marslender to John Rumco but Rumco could not hang onto the ball in the end zone.

Maryland then marched from their own 20, where they took a Carolina punt, all the way to the Tar Heel 4. With fourth and four Dick Novak ran the ball but was tackled by Farris and Gary Truver on the 3 to preserve the shutout.

McMillan caps drive. Neither team could add to its scoring in the remaining minutes of first half, so the Tar Babies took a 14-0 lead into the dressing room.

After stopping a Maryland drive on their 15 in the opening moments of the third quarter, the Tar Babies started to drive for their final touchdown.

Mixing up his plays perfectly Farris moved the Tar Babies deep into Maryland territory. Benton McMillan capped the drive by hauling in a 7 yard Farris aerial for the third score of the game. Breck Regan's kick for the extra point was blocked and the score remained 20-0.

The final quarter was a defensive battle with neither team being able to keep a sustained drive going. Tar Baby coach Bud Carson emptied his bench in the final minutes to allow everyone to have a chance to play.

Booters Top Emory, 15-1

By JIM PURKS

Carolina's varsity soccer team soundly defeated an inexperienced Emory University soccer team here yesterday, 15-1.

The Tar Heels romped for six goals in the first half and nine in the second to win easily, with the second string playing most of the game.

Only a goal on a direct kick early in the first quarter by Emory's Wayne Hampton saved the Emory team from being white-washed.

Today's game marked the first intercollegiate contest for the Emory squad as soccer was only adopted at the Atlanta school this year.

Most of the players on the Emory team have had very little soccer experience, with most of their experience coming from soccer competition in Emory's intramural program.

Carolina jumped to an early lead when Mike Thompson scored after Emory's goalie bobbled the ball in front of the nets after stopping a shot by Rick Grausman. A few minutes later, Joe Perkins scored his second goal of the season for the Tar Heels when he took a setup pass from right wing Coleman Barks and booted the ball in.

After Hampton scored for Emory to make the score 2-1, Coleman Barks retaliated for Carolina, Mike Thompson hit paydirt for the Tar Heels again, followed by a goal by Rick Grausman, giving the team a 5-1 lead.

Coach Marvin Allen put his second string in toward the end of the quarter. Joost Polak, playing Thompson's position, then scored his first goal of the season and gave the Tar Heels a five-game lead.

The second quarter saw no scoring action, although the Tar Heels pounded at the Emory goal, giving their courageous goalie fits.

In the third quarter, John Ghanim practically put on a one-man show at offense, scoring three goals before Coach Allen took the first string out. Scoring along with Granim was Joe Perkins. With Carolina leading 10-1, a shot by left wing Scott Welton went off the foot of an Emory defenseman to boost the Tar Heels to a 10 goal lead.

Varsity Takes On Tennessee Today

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Special to The Daily Tar Heel KNOXVILLE, TENN. — Today Jim Tatum's red-hot Carolina Tar Heels try to make it 5 in a row as they tangle with the always tough Tennessee Vols here at 2 o'clock.

Tennessee brings a deceptive 2-3 record in to today's contest. Scouting reports have shown they are much stronger, and the Tar Heel coaching staff has tried to alert their players to this fact.

Carolina enters the fray with exclusive rights as the hottest team in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Tatum's Tar Heels have bowled over 4 straight opponents after dropping their first two games.

Carolina's tough defense will have its job cut out for it today when they face a single wing team for the first time this season. The Heels currently lead the ACC in both passing defense and total defense, but the Vols may not be impressed with such credentials.

Tennessee is the same old team, so to speak, as they have comparatively small but extremely fast players at every position. The Vols run entirely from the single wing, and their offense is expected to break loose at any time. They have been held to only 34 points in 5 games so far.

Although the Tar Heels should be in top shape to a man for the big game, such is not the case with the Volunteers. The key man injured is signal-calling tailback Billy Majors, brother of the famous John, who was injured in the Florida State game. Majors' status is still unknown, and whether he will play today or not is still in doubt.

Goff To See Action Today

Daley Goff dons the blue and white for the first time this season after being layed off the first 5 games with an injured ankle. Goff, last season's leading ground-gainer, is expected to boost the Tar Heel offense to its full potential. Today, however, he will probably play only on defense.

Scouting reports show that Tennessee likes to stick to its fine running game whenever possible. The Tar Heels would like to force the Vols into the air, and with the tough blue line putting the pressure on, they might very well do it.

Carolina, on the basis of its recent spurt, will be slightly favored in today's battle, but the oddsmakers are sweating because a highly interesting game is expected, one that could go either way.

Duke Meets Ga. Tech

DURHAM — (AP) — Duke and Georgia Tech, two perennial football powers that are having their bumps this season, meet here Saturday in a renewal of one of the South's most colorful rivalries.

The game is rated a toss-up. A crowd of 35,000 is expected for the kickoff at 2 p.m.

Duke, with a 3-3 season record, is expected to rely principally on the running of halfbacks Wray Carlton and George Dutrow. Two seniors who have been rugged on off tackle plays and end runs.

The problem was not that Marty had fallen in love with a shirt. After all, he was a Philosophy major.

The trouble was... Marty was in love with two shirts.

With Shirt No. 1, the Van Heusen Century, the serious Marty spent hours in heavenly bliss. He worshipped the revolutionary soft collar that won't wrinkle ever. It was Century's one-piece construction that drove him wild. (Other collars never did anything for our boy Marty, except wrinkle madly. You see, other collars are three pieces, fused or sewn together.)

With Shirt No. 2, the amazing Van Heusen "Vantage," the gay, frivolous Marty lived the life of carefree abandon. He could wear it and wear it—wash it—drip-dry it, or have it tumble-dried automatically—and wear it again in a matter of hours. It was the most money-saving love he ever had.

But when Marty was with one shirt, he missed the other. It was terrible. Like so many others with the same problem, Marty wrote to us. And so it came to pass that the Van Heusen "Century-Vantage" was born. This shirt combined the advantages of each into one great shirt—a wash and wear, no-iron, all cotton broadcloth shirt with the soft collar that won't wrinkle ever! And just $5! Have you a problem?
