

The bowl situation, as of now, is as controversial as ever and Carolina is still right in the middle of it. Some say an impressive win over Duke would put the Tar Heels opposite LSU in the Sugar Bowl. The Orange Bowl still has one team to go, they need a squad to throw at Oklahoma. The thing is considerably fouled up, as there are many teams that would like to go and can't for various reasons.

For instance, a team with Negroes on it can't play in the Sugar Bowl. Some of the teams who have Negroes can't play against a segregated school. So it has finally come down to a question of who can go, instead of who should go.

A VICTORY MAY MEAN A BOWL

It appears from here that a Carolina victory over Duke would almost assure the Heels of a bowl berth, although the exact game is still up in the air. Thus, this season differs greatly from last season in that the Tar Heels must be up for the last game and they were way down for the finale last year.

There has been concern expressed that Carolina may have given too much at Notre Dame and has nothing left. This I doubt. There were many bruises and bumps suffered at Notre Dame, but most of the players have healed well enough and squad morale is still very high.

TAR HEELS WILL BE UP

If it were any other game, they might be down. But not for Duke. The members of this Tar Heel team remember how sweet last year's victory was after the sting of 7 straight losses at the hands of the Blue Devils. For this one, they'll be up.

Duke finds itself in a very different position than last year. This year they will probably be underdogs and come into the contest with everything to gain and nothing to lose. They also come in with a most deceptive 4-5 record.

SCORED ON CHINESE BANDITS

The Dukes have dropped three contests by the margin of a field goal. Number 1 ranked LSU is the only team that has really thrashed them, and even at that the Devils became the only team to score against the Chinese Bandits.

No one except LSU has scored more than 2 TD's against Duke. They even managed to effectively bottle up the pin-point passing of Wake Forest ace Norman Snead last week in posting a 29-0 win over the Deacs. Does this mean trouble for Cummings? We think not. Cummings is more experienced and has a better line in front of him.

The Blue Devil halfbacks, Wray Carlton and George Dutrow, have been called the best in the conference. We think Carolina's halfbacks can compare favorably with anyone's and certainly the Tar Heel line has been tough on halfbacks in general. The Heels will have a definite edge at fullback with Don Kiochak doing the running.

Duke has been a predominately running team all year. So have many of the teams that have faced the Tar Heels forward wall. Almost every team Carolina has played has been forced to go to the air because they couldn't move on the ground. Duke will have to, and their passing game may beat them.

PREDICTIONS

With a .777 average for the season, we close out with some picks that will be laughed at, made fun of, and ridiculed. Oh well, remember Mississippi Southern?

Carolina 27, Duke 14. The Tar Heels have a superior team all around and the Devils won't be able to stop the passing of Cummings or move against the Carolina line.

Boston College 15, Clemson 13. An upset, and mainly picked by wishful thinking. Should Clemson lose, they'll be out of bowl consideration. Don Allard to beat them in the air.

Maryland 20, Virginia 15. Closer than it looks on the outside, Virginia has a good chance of winning. But the differences in the line will tell, as the Cavaliers bite the dust again.

Auburn 20, Wake Forest 6. Even Norman Snead's passing can't make a dent in the top defensive unit in the nation. Auburn to win easily with its newly found offense and always tough defense. wall. Almost every team Carolina has played has been forced to explode and they want this one bad. State colses out the year with an upset win over Warren Giese's boys.

We sincerely hope that the students from Carolina won't go over to Durham and start anything by painting statues or something. And it would really be a shame if the Duke bonfire went off ahead of schedule.

5 Seniors End Careers

LAST GAME—Captain and Goalie Jim Rattay is one of five Carolina seniors who will see their last action today when Marvin Allen's soccer squad meets Duke on Emerson Field.

By JIM PURKS

DURHAM—Carolina's varsity soccer team winds up the season here today when it faces arch rival Duke on the Blue Devils' home field.

Recovered from a 2-1 loss at the hands of Maryland, perennial champions in soccer, the Tar Heels are determined to defeat the Blue Devils and end the season successfully.

Going into the game today, the squad has a 7-2 record, with losses coming at the hands of Washington & Lee and Maryland.

Clinch Second Place

A win today would clinch second place for Carolina in the conference, marking considerable improvement over last year's record when the Tar Heels were beaten by all their conference foes except Duke, whom they tied.

Last year, it took a thrilling goal by Mike Thompson with 30 seconds remaining in regulation time for the Tar Heels to tie Duke, 5-5, in Chapel Hill.

The year previously, Duke eased to a 2-1 victory over Carolina in Durham.

Final Game For Seniors

Today's contest will mark the final game in a Tar Heel uniform for several of Coach Marvin Allen's players. On offense, Rick Grausman at left wing, and Coleman Barks at

Football Practice

Carolina's football forces went through a light but long workout Thursday spending most of their time on defense and punt and kick-off runbacks.

The freshmen ran Duke plays at the varsity defense as the team continued preparations for this Saturday's traditional battle with the Blue Devils at Kenan Stadium.

Coach Jim Tatum stressed kick-off and punt runbacks during the session, calling attention to the fact that a Carolina back has not run a kick off for a touchdown since 1951.

A capacity crowd of about 44,000 is expected for the Duke game. The Carolina Athletic Department announced, however, that some 4,000 tickets still were available.

SAE Defeats Law School 15-0
To Become All-Campus Champs

SAE fraternity, winners of the blue division, scored once in each half here yesterday to roll over Law School 15-0 and gain the all-campus intramural tag football championship.

Ed Brunson scored the first SAE Touchdown in the first half, being on the receiving end of a pass from Jim Kelly. Kelly added the extra point, and the SAE's led 7-0 at intermission.

Ben Keyes crossed the goal line with the second SAE score in the second period, again on a pass. The point was no good.

Later in the half, Ed Brown nabbed a Law School back in his own end zone for a 2-point safety, sewing up the win for his teammates.

SAE made excellent use of plays off a short pass variation. They concentrated on moving the ball, and it payed off.

In shutting out the Law School, Grad division champs, SAE defensive standouts were Sandy Ainsely and Ed Brunson. Law School standouts were Frank York and Jim Kiser.

In coming to this final game, SAE had to defeat their own brothers in the division. Law School whipped Joyner, the Dorm champ, to obtain their place.

SAE thus has earned the right to represent Carolina against the University of Virginia tag football champion next year on the morning of the varsity football game between the two schools. Next year this event will be held in Kenan Stadium.

University Volleyball League Set

Once again the members of the UNC faculty have lain aside their problems of students to come out and try their hand at volleyball.

There are six teams in the league, and they have taken on the names of a color. These are the red, white, green, yellow, grey, and blue teams. The captains or team managers are Walter Rabb, Dr. Bo Shepard, Pete Mullis, Dr. Henry House, Dr. Bill Peacock, and Dr. Carl Blyth respectively.

Some other outstanding players are President Friday, Chancellor Aycock, and many other athletic faculty members.

Each team is composed of 8 members giving a grand total of 48 players. Also each team will play 10 games in their regular season.
