

Wade Smith Included

Four ACC Football Players Named To All-Scholastic Squad

Four outstanding Atlantic Coast Conference football players have been named to the 1958 American Peoples Encyclopedia's Atlantic Coast Conference All-Scholastic Backfield.

Selected on the basis on their playing ability on the gridiron and their outstanding scholastic records were: Wade Smith of the University of North Carolina; King Dixon of the University of South Carolina, and Doug Cline and Harvey White of Clemson College.

"These four outstanding Atlantic Coast Conference players once again point out the fact that good athletes are also good — and frequently superior-scholars," Carroll Chouinard, editor-in-chief of the American Peoples Encyclopedia said.

To be named to the All-Scholastic Backfield, each player must have a "B" or better average in his current course of studies, with final selection to the squad based on his playing ability as reported by conference observers.

Editor Chouinard pointed out that the Atlantic Coast's All-Scholastic Backfield included two students in pre-medicine courses and one each in chemical engineering and arts and sciences.

Here's the roster of the Atlantic

Coast Conference's outstanding scholar-athletes:

Wade Smith of the University of North Carolina: 5-foot, 10-inches; 170 lbs., a junior majoring in pre-medicine. During the season he scored 5 touchdowns, carried the ball 102 times for 449 net yards. In the Southern California game he set up a touchdown with a 27-yard run.

King Dixon of the University of South Carolina: 5-foot, 8 inches; 170 lbs., a senior majoring in arts and sciences. Active in track at U. S. C. as well as outstanding on the gridiron, Dixon caught 3 touchdowns passes against Wake Forest. He was co-captain of the 1958 squad, and makes the All-Scholastic squad for the second year.

Doug Cline of Clemson College: 6-foot, 2-inches; 210 lbs., majoring in chemical engineering, this Clemson fullback played outstanding football in both the Virginia and North Carolina games.

Harvey White of Clemson College: 6-foot, 2-inches, 205 lbs., a junior studying pre-medicine. Making the All-Scholastic squad for the second year, White was particularly outstanding in the Vanderbilt game when he gained 105 yards in 14 carries; completed 8 out of 12 passes for 60 yards and scored both touchdowns.

Similar selections of outstanding scholar-athletes are being made in the Big Ten, Big Eight, Southern, Southeastern, Southwestern and Ivy League conferences by editors of the American Peoples Encyclopedia.

Tomorrow night's game between the Tar Heels of Carolina and the Wolfpack of N. C. State shapes up as mass warfare on the hardwood, a dream game, the irresistible force meeting the immovable object.

If the polls come out as they should, N. C. State will be number 1 and Carolina will be number 2. Irregardless as to what the polls rate the two teams, there is no doubt in anyone's mind that the winner of the battle will be sitting atop the loftiest position in basketball, number 1 in the nation.

The favorite? One has to say State, although they certainly don't want to be in such an unenviable position. The clubs appear evenly matched with the Pack holding the home court advantage.

How big is this home-court advantage? Well, there are games few and far between when a team is fortunate enough to beat Case on his home court. The Carolina students will be grossly outnumbered because they were unable to obtain tickets. The ticket office asked for, and got, about 230 tickets which were sold like hotcakes the moment they went up for sale. The game is, and has been for several days, a complete sell-out in the 12,400 capacity William Neal Reynolds Coliseum.

One thing, in favor of the Tar Heels will be balance, the best they have had in recent years. Stopping one man on the Carolina team does absolutely no good, for there are others of equal ability to take up the slack.

Such, it seems, is not the case at State. It almost boils down to this: Stop Richter, Stop State. True, the Pack has Lou Pucillo and other good shots, but without the big man having a big night they are under par.

Example the fact that in the only State loss, to Kansas State, Richter was under wraps all night. Against Louisville in the Dixie Classic Richter got only 4 points and State had to scrap every inch to win in overtime.

In its last game, against Duke Saturday night, State College was once again pushed almost to the limit by the sophomore laden Blue Devils. The final score was 67-60 and it is more than interesting to note that this was the largest margin of victory the Pack has had over a conference team all season.

It cannot be forgotten, however, that State almost always wins the close ones. State is a pressure team in every sense of the word. Frank McGuire's young Tar Heels have also stamped themselves as a cool, calm, and collected crew. They solved the Wake Forest freeze with almost ridiculous ease, winning 44-34. They also beat Cincinnati 90-88 in a game in which both teams shot over 50% from the floor.

And speaking of the Wake freeze, what kind of strategy will two of the smartest coaches in basketball throw at each other tomorrow night? Our prediction is that the weather in the Coliseum will be cold as a mother-in-law's heart (yes, the freeze again.) We also believe there'll be more pressing going on than in a Chinese laundry (by State).

It is true that the Tar Heels didn't crack against the Wake popticle treatment. But admittedly State has a much better team than Wake Forest, and Case may feel that his superior manpower can win such a game.

The State-Carolina Game: Basketball At Its Best

RALEIGH — In college athletic circles, fans like to brag about the Army-Navy football games as the king of them all when it comes to color, rivalry and excitement.

In the Atlantic Coast Conference, the Duke-Carolina football game takes on the same enthusiasm. But in basketball, nothing can top the State-Carolina game.

Wednesday night the two long-time rivals will meet for the 12th time this season. A sellout crowd of 12,400 is assured for the contest, and if Reynolds Coliseum were larger there would be more.

There's no national or tournament championship riding on the outcome of the game, but you can't tell that to the players. This is a "must" game for both teams, just as the return engagement at Chapel Hill will be.

Both teams are ranked among the nation's best. In the latest game poll, State was ranked second by both wire services while the Tar Heels placed third in one and fourth in the other. Now that Kentucky has been knocked from the undefeated list, the State-Carolina winner could well determine the nation's number one team.

Two of college basketball's best coaches will be matching wits in a strategic masterpiece, while talented players from both teams will be matching shots.

State's Lou Pucillo, one of the best little men in the game, will be fighting Carolina guard York Larese for backcourt honors, George Stepovich of the Wolfpack and Lee Shaffer of the Tar Heels will battle for the rebounds, while State's John Richter and UNC's Dick Keyple will stage a pivot duel which includes both scoring and rebounding.

There will be noise and plenty of it. The only persons oblivious to the stomping feet and clapping hands will be the players. Each will have a definite assignment, and concentrating on that task will close out any sounds.

There will be cheerleaders from both schools matching yells, wholesale booing of officials by the partisan throng, and hundreds of reporters, sportscasters and photographers recording every vivid detail of the action.

It's a spectacle... a game never to be forgotten... a post-season thriller at mid-season... an indoor Mardi Gras. That's the State-Carolina game which comes up Wednesday night at 8:15. It's college basketball at its best.

Tigers Enjoying 1st Division

By KEN ALYTA CLEMSON, S. C. (AP) — Clemson's basketball Tigers approach the halfway point of the Atlantic Coast Conference season inhaling the heady and unaccustomed air of the first division.

Press Maravich led his forces out of town for the Tuesday night game at Duke the proud but somewhat confused coach of a team that has survived a holiday season slump to come on again.

The Tigers, never higher than sixth in five previous ACC campaigns, played their finest game in Maravich's three seasons here in mastering Maryland's defending champions 55-46 Saturday night.

That feat brought the Tigers up to fourth place in the conference with a 3-4 record for league games and boosted their overall totals to 5-8.

In reviewing his team's about face after the earlier slump, Maravich commented, "I wish I knew what makes the boys tick. They played a marvelous game against Maryland."

He was deep in gloom after they had come up with poor performances just two weeks ago in losing Charlotte Carrousel tournament games to George Washington and Pittsburgh.

Advertisement for Julian's Sport Shop with 'SALE' text and 'REDUCTIONS UP TO 40%' repeated multiple times.

Evening Specials

at Dairyland's Famous Dairy Bar

From 5 p.m. - 10 p.m. Every Day This Week Except Sunday

Advertisement for 'OUR FAMOUS HAMBURGER with Coffee, Coke or Milk 29c' with an image of a burger.

Our Famous Cheeseburger

with Delicious, Thick Milkshake Choice of Flavors Both Only 43c

Advertisement for Milkshakes (19c) and Sodas (24c) with an image of a milkshake.

Grilled Cheese and Ice Cream Soda—Choice of Flavors 39c

FREE Dessert With Any Plate Lunch All Specials Good from 5 p.m. - 10 p.m. Watch For These Specials Each Week

Dairyland Farms Inc. logo and address: GLEN LENNOX

Milton's January Colossal advertisement featuring a button-down shirt and a cardigan, with text: 'Basic traditional button-downs in white, blue or olive beige, regularly $4.50 and $5.00, now 1 for $3.50 or 3 for $10.'

MURALS advertisement with a dog illustration and text: 'Dog tired? Because of various campus activities and the upcoming final examinations, there will be no mural activities this week.'

ACC Standings table with columns for Team, Conf., and All.

CORRECTION: The Daily Tar Heel reported in Sunday's paper that the winning streak for the Carolina swimming team is 24. Actually, it is 25 straight for Pat Earey's crew, stretched out over 3 seasons.

Advertisement for 'Chicken Antonio' at Antonio's restaurant, featuring a chicken illustration and text: 'Here is a treat for your taste. We are adding chicken on our menu. We call it "CHICKEN ANTONIO."'

Sell Us Your Old Texts advertisement with text: 'And we'll fill our window with money - Saving Specials For Next Term.'

The Intimate Bookshop advertisement with address: 205 E. Franklin St. Open Till 10 P.M.

DAILY CROSSWORD puzzle with clues and a grid.

Comic strip panels by Schulz (Peanuts) and Kelly (Pogo) with dialogue bubbles.