Russia Wants Talks

By WILLIAM N. OATIS
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., (AP)—Anastas I. Mikoyan, Soviet first deputy premier, said yesterday his country still wants a summit conference on world problems and the West cannot sidestep one forever. Mikoyan, who will see Secretary of State Dulles a second time in Washington tomorrow, expressed interest in Dulles' statement that free elections were not the only way to reunify Germany. But he complained that Dulles "did not come up with a constructive alternative" to the Soviet plan for confederation of East and West Germany by mutual agreement, before or after a peace treaty.

Washington speculation had been that Dulles' statement, at a news conference Tuesday, was a hint at a shift in the U.S. line aimed to provoke Mikoyan's interest and a change in the Soviet line. The short, mustached Soviet leader conceded that the statement was an interesting one. But he added that the Soviet proposal for confederation of East and West Germany was excellent—"No one has so far come up with a better one."

He answered questions for 40 minutes from among 290 representatives of press, radio and television on his first visit to U.N. headquarters.

Earlier, he spent 40 minutes in a private talk with the U.N.'s Swedish Secretary General, Dag Hammarskjold, and then toured Council chambers and the General Assembly hall with Hammarskjold as guide.

He went from there to a hotel luncheon with Mikhail A. Menshikov, Soviet ambassador to Washington. Mikoyan left New York for Washington by train late last night and he will see President Eisenhower Saturday.

At the news conference, he was asked if he thought an expected Spring meeting of the big powers on the Berlin and German questions would be of foreign ministers or heads of government.

"You know," he replied, "that for a long time we have advocated a conference at the highest level. We stick to this position."

"Our partners sidestep this conference either by raising the issue of the level or by raising the issue of the agenda . . . the years keep running by. But I do not think HAVANA, — (AP)— Fidel Castro warned the United States sharply yesterday against meddling with Cuba's revolutionary justice. The rebel chieftain declared that if Marines were sent to this island nation "200,000 gringos will die."

Gringo is a term used by some Latin Americans, often in a derogatory terms for U.S. citizens. About 12,000 live in Cuba.

Castro referred to the Marines, without elaboration, at the close a bitter diatribe before 60 to 70 persons who surrounded him in the Havana Hilton Hotel lobby as he headed to a Rotary Club luncheon.

His threat presumably was prompted by statements of some U. S. Congressmen that the State Department should act to halt the executions which have followed the fall of Fulgencio Batista's dictatorship.

The reported toll of the firing squads rose today to 195. "We are trying those who killed 20, 30 or 40 persons," Castro said, "and they ask us to be humane!"

The bearded civil war hero who now commands Cuba's armed forces drew applause with a reiteration of his charges that the United States helped Batista with arms shipments and the assignment of a U. S. military mission here. "We are more democratic than President Eisenhower," Castro declared. "We are more democratic than John Foster Dulles. There is more liberty here than in the United States. There is no country in the world with more liberty than Cuba."

Discussing tortures under the Batista regime, Castro said there is none in the revolutionary army and that its morale is high.

On the go himself day and night since the new year's day triumph, Castro let it be known he is tired of being crowded. He said 200 or 300 people otherwise unidentified, were constantly crowding him and limiting his effectiveness.

"I have many things to do, to watch out for mistakes here and there, to see that laws are not confused, but I can't do them," he told newsmen. ". . . If these people keep it up, because of them the revolution will fail."

Castro's critics of the United States were echoed in Santiago by his brother Raul, commandant of revolutionary forces in Oriente province.

"The executions of war criminals are an act of justice and not a bloodbath," Raul Castro told a news conference in Santiago.

He said the revolutionary processes were administered so that, after fair trials, gunmen of tyranny could never again "unmercifully torture men, women and children."

Many times, he said, the victims had been buried alive.

He said the U.S. government helped provide "the war implements that the deposed dictatorship used to decimate the population of Cuba."

The U. S. government denied siding with Batista. The State Department said it had repeatedly objected to what it called the Batista government's misuse of military aid provided for defense of the western hemisphere as a whole.

The arms shipments were halted last spring. As to the executions, the State Department held to a policy of non-intervention. Asst. Secretary of State Roy Babottom, who is in charge of Latin American affairs, declared "we are not going to intervene in what is essentially Cuba's affairs."

3 Dormitories Plan To Open Social Rooms

Mangum, Lewis and Ayeoek dormitories will open their social rooms to coeds this weekend.

The Interdormitory Council in conjunction with the office of the dean of women has announced that these social rooms have passed inspection and faculty sponsors have been obtained by the presidents of the dormitories.

Jim Scott, chairman of the IDC Coed Visiting Agreement Committee, said other dorms would not open social rooms since they do not have sponsors. "We don't feel that the dormitories who have gone ahead and lined up sponsors should be held up by those who haven't," Scott said.

The three dorms' social rooms will open from 7 to 12 p.m. today and from 2 until 12 p.m. on Saturday.

All the men's dormitories have passed the inspection preparatory to opening them. In a few, improvements were recommended. Scott praised the work of Jerry Chichester who, with Building and Grounds Director J. S. Bennett, saw to it that facilities were provided in the dorms. Chichester is the chairman of the IDC dorm improvements committee.

"We hope faculty members and their wives will take this opportunity to join in student activities," said Scott speaking of the difficulty many dorms were having in obtaining sponsors for their social activities. "Faculty sponsors and wives would be responsible only in an advisory capacity for dorm social functions and physical facilities. They need not be present in social rooms at all times. They would be asked to chaperone dances and help with receptions such as Parents Day," Scott said.

Ticket Issue Begins Reaching Settlement

By RUSTY HAMMOND

The controversy arising over the ticket situation for this week's State-Carolina basketball game has been at least partially settled.

The Coliseum Box Office in Raleigh revealed yesterday that 230 tickets were sent to Chapel Hill to be distributed among 7,000 students at the request of the Carolina ticket office.

A source at the State College Coliseum, who refused to give her name or tell exactly where the tickets were sent, said that in addition to the 230 student tickets, about 100 tickets to the big game were sent or use as complimentary seats.

She also said that usually the box office at State sends as many tickets to Chapel Hill as are requested by the box office here. She said that the Carolina ticket office could probably have gotten up to 500 tickets had the request been made.

The biggest game in the nation, between the number 1 and 3 teams, was won by Carolina 72-68 in an overtime period. The game was a complete sellout.

Woolen Gym earlier announced that one of the reasons no more tickets were asked for is that 230 "good" seats were all that could be obtained. These seats were located in a far corner of the spacious coliseum. There are no really bad seats in the gigantic building, however, so using that as an excuse seems to have little, if any, value.

Carolina Ticket Office Director Vernon Crook stated yesterday that "We later received 100 complimentary tickets in addition to the 230 for the students." He also said that more tickets could have been obtained (probably 500) if they had been asked for.

Crook was unable to recall the date that the State tickets went on sale at the Carolina ticket office, and the Daily Tar Heel was not notified about it.

He explained that the ticket office never knows far in advance how great the demand for tickets to a given game will be, thus it is never known exactly how many tickets to ask for.

Tickets to the South Carolina and Clemson games in the Charlotte Coliseum (Jan. 30 & 31) and the Duke game at Durham (Feb. 6) are now on sale at the ticket office. Crook said that if the students don't, Crook

Traffic Council Hands Down One Probation

One probation was handed down at a Traffic Council session Tuesday night.

Three students were told if they did not get their cars registered within 48 hours they would have to forfeit use of the cars for the rest of the year.

Three warnings and one official reprimand were also handed down by the council. One case was dismissed.

Campus Code Discussions Scheduled

Meetings to discuss the Campus Code will be held in all the women's dorms during the week of Feb. 8-14.

The meetings will be sponsored and conducted by members of the Social Values Committee, a newly formed organization on campus.

The purpose of this committee is to have women students on campus re-evaluate objectively the meaning of the Campus Code.

In the opinion of the committee, freshmen particularly could benefit from discussion of this sort, because it is a new topic for them.

The committee is also working on plans to discuss the Campus Code more thoroughly with the incoming second semester women.
