Norfolk Schools Will Integrate

NORFOLK, Va. — The Norfolk School Board announced yesterday that the city's six closed schools will open Monday on an integrated basis.

Three high and three junior high schools have been closed since September to avoid integration. However, the state laws under which their doors were locked have been nullified by state and federal court decisions.

The reopening will bring the first Negro children in Virginia history—17 in all—into white public school classrooms.

The school board's announcement came immediately after the city council assured it of operating funds. An earlier council resolution to cut off school monies, felt before federal court orders.

The schools affected are Maury, Granby, and Norview High Schools and Norview, Blair and Northside Junior Highs. A total of 10,000 white children are affected. However, only about 75 per cent of that number are expected to return to school Monday since many are attending school elsewhere or have dropped it altogether.

HARRY ASHMORE
... Little Rock editor

Gazette Editor Harry Ashmore To Speak Here

Newspaper editor Harry Ashmore of Little Rock, Ark., will visit the University this weekend to address the advanced management training program of the School of Business Administration.

Ashmore, author and executive editor of the Arkansas Gazette, will discuss "Equality of Opportunity" on Saturday with members of The Executive Program, which includes 40 top officials from business and industry.

The program's director, Prof. Willard Graham, said that Ashmore's talk will be part of the "Great Ideas" series offered to the executives in addition to their intensive study of business topics.

Intellectual growth through study of philosophy, politics, religion and sociology has been stressed in the Executive Program, which covers a six-months' period. The participants spend alternate weekends during the winter in Chapel Hill, and have a week's stay also during October and April, prior to their "graduation weekend."

In addition to Ashmore's talks Saturday, the group will have a second "Great Ideas" study on Feb. 14. "Freedom and Progress" will be discussed by Prof. Friedrich A. Hayek of the University of Chicago, professor of social and moral science and author of "The Road to Serfdom."

Elections Chairman Resigns

Elections Board Chairman Bob Furtado has announced his resignation from that post.

"Because of an increased academic load I will find it necessary to devote my full efforts to my studies, and for this reason I regretfully submit my resignation as chairman of the Elections Board."

All students who are interested in assuming the chairmanship of the Elections Board have been requested to leave their names with Miss Staples at the Student Government Office.

JOB IS DEMANDING

Student Body President Don Furtado said the job of Elections Board "is a demanding one, for it requires long hours of carefully coordinated effort on the part of members of the Elections Board in order to prepare for a campus-wide election."

Its importance is obvious when we consider the fact that improper election procedures and preparations may destroy the entire elections process."

FURTADO COMMENTS FURTADO

Don Furtado also commended Bob Furtado for his "capable job, both under the administration of Sonny Evans and of myself."

No date for Spring Elections has been officially announced.

Leaders Admit Investigation Is Underway

By CHUCK FLINNER

Stolen examinations are being investigated by the Attorney General staff of the Student Government.

Dick Robinson, the Attorney General, said no charges have been brought against anyone but the staff is investigating the matter. "There have been no trials or convictions yet, and we can't give any information." He refused to say when the trials would be held.

The men's honor council has reportedly scheduled a series of meetings on the matter. Hugh Patterson, chairman, was not available for comment.

Student Body President Don Furtado refused to comment on the stolen exams. Referring to a story in a recent Durham paper Furtado said, "The Durham Morning Herald story has done enough damage already. We don't want any further information released. There is nothing definite and the matter is still under investigation."

Reporter Bill King and the city editor of the Durham Morning Herald did not remember the story referred to by Furtado. King said, "We have done a series of cheating stories in the past but I can't remember any thing recently."

Paul Woodard, a member of the attorney general's staff, when asked about the investigation reported that he had been asked if he would be available as counsel for the defense for honor council trials. "There is nothing definite and I don't know any names or particulars about the case," he added.

Tom Rand of the attorney general's staff told The Daily Tar Heel, "We were asked not to tell anything about it."

Another member of the staff reported, "I haven't been contacted at all. I don't know anything about it."

Several other student officials could not be reached for comment.

Nothing To Do?

For students who complain that there's nothing to do at the beginning of the new semester, here's how to rid yourself of the "boredom." Work on The Daily Tar Heel.

The newspaper needs new staff members to write news, columns, sports, and do artwork. Most of the work done on the paper is completed between 2 and 5 p.m. daily. This time is usually convenient for students who have classes in the morning hours.

Students interested in work on The Daily Tar Heel may come to the newspaper office in Graham Memorial any afternoon.

A staff meeting will be announced soon.

INTERNATIONAL STUDENT RELATIONS

Big UNC Expansion Forecast

The Chapel Hill News Leader The brightness of Chapel Hill's future was illuminated last night at a meeting in Morehead Planetarium.

Some 100 persons crammed the faculty lounge of the University building to hear that:

- (1)—The University expects almost 16,000 students by 1975 and plans to meet the terrific demand by building — with necessary approval, of course—$35,000,000 in new and renovated campus structures.
- (2)—The Carrboro Mills' two buildings are being sold to an unidentified firm, with the announcement due within the week.
- (3)—The Research Triangle area will probably employ about 25,000 persons in the next 10-15 years.

The meeting was sponsored by the Community Council.

Following reports from J. Arthur Branch, UNC business manager George Watts Hill, of the Research Triangle, Collier Cobb Jr., of the local industrial search group, and Frank Umstead, chairman of the District Planning Board, the gathering—composed of Chapel Hillians from all walks of life—fired a steady stream of probing questions. The chain of rosy forecasts left no doubt that the community will be booming for years to come.

UNC WILL BOOM

Possibly the most staggering of the pronouncements came from Branch, who outlined the University's projected expansion over the next 10 years. Building needs, based on a forecast of around 16,000 regularly-enrolled students by 1970, included:

Projects already approved: addition to Phillips Hall, addition to Peabody Hall, a 32-unit married student project containing 238 one- and two-room apartments; addition to the student nursing school, and a multi-story dorm for men located back of Kenan Stadium to house 700 students.

Other projected construction, by years:

- 1959-61: construction of new Public Health, Geology, Geography, Botany, and Student Union buildings and another 700-student dormitory.
- 1961-63: renovation of New East and Davis Hall; construction of new buildings for Swain Hall, Health Affairs, Hill Hall, a foreign language building, an undergraduate library, and a third dormitory for 700 students.
- 1963-65: renovation of Murphy and Caldwell halls, maintenance shops and storeroom, and a fourth dormitory for 700.

1965-67: renovation of the Medical Building, Nursing Building and the main library; another Phillips Hall addition, additions to the School of Dentistry and Manning Hall, and a multi-purpose building for an armory and maybe basketball.

Student enrollment should hit minimums of 8,012 by 1959; 9,466 by 1962; 11,151 by 1965; and 13,523 by 1970. The maximum figure for 1970 was 16,319. The current enrollment is 7,500.

Mr. Hill told of the future of the Triangle project, noting that the area itself would provide no housing facilities and that Raleigh, Durham, and Chapel Hill would have to absorb the expected influx.

In this regard, Mr. Hill said:

"I hope our residents won't hike prices and rents when the people do arrive, but make them feel at home." He said that a good environment was the main selling factor for new firms.

He said that firms are now "coming to us" showing interest in the research idea. He said that some 300 firms have been visited.

PLANNING FROM 1923

Mr. Umstead traced the history of Chapel Hill zoning provisions from the first local ordinance in 1923 to the present.

He illustrated a plight of the planning board by saying that "much of our time has been spent in undoing past things and too little on future planning." In regard to special hearings, he urged persons involved in rezoning matters to "help us by limiting your expression of feeling to affected areas and by not 'cluttering up' these hearings."

Mr. Umstead said that the board has an area in mind for a 8-10 unit fraternity court and is working on a zoning law to govern frat-sorority locations "we hope on a court basis."
