

ACC Season Produced Many Promising Sophs

By RUSTY HAMMOND
With the basketball season at last dead and buried, the fact stands out that the Atlantic Coast Conference produced some of the brightest young stars in the nation this season.

Team by team, here's the run-down on the outstanding sophomores around the league:

The Intimate has a shelf of books on ancient civilizations, in addition to other titles in the paper-backs and on the Bargain Shelf. It's always good hunting at the Intimate Bookshop.

Guire came up with probably the best sophomore duo in the nation in Doug Moe and York Larese. Moe averaged better than 12 points per game and Larese better than 14. Each made every all-conference team, and each had a high-point night of 32. Two other bright hopes for the future Tar Heels were Lou Prown and Jim Donahue.

Clemson College's only sophomore of note was Ed Krajack, brother of George. The younger Krajack moved into a starting role toward the end of the season and will be counted on next season.

Duke Produced Most
The biggest single market for sophomore has to be Durham, where Duke's Hal Bradley often started a complete team of sophomore. The two outstanding members of this dangerous combination were Carroll Youngkin and Howard Hurt. Youngkin made many all-conference teams and Hurt was second team. Youngkin was the league's third best scorer and second best rebounder. Also featured in the Duke attack were sophs Fred Kast, Doug Albright, John Frye and Merrill Morgan.

N. C. State's brightest sophomore, guard Mark Reiner, quit school at mid-season. His running mate Stan Niewierowski returned however, and played quite a lot. Other State sophs who shared the Wolfpack's ACC championship were Bruce Hoadley, Bob DiStefano and Bob McCann. All of these players will be depended on heavily next season since State graduates four of its starters.

South Carolina's outstanding contribution to the sophomore ranks was Bury Hudson, brother to Walt, who furnished good relief help.

McKenzie Booted
Virginia came up with two fine sophomores, but one didn't finish the season. Jay McKenzie was among the league's top five scorers until he was kicked off the team for disciplinary reasons. The other soph was forward Walt Densmore. Wake Forest chipped in with two good sophs, center Jerry Steele and backcourt whiz Alley Hart. The Deacs will probably use both a lot more next year.

Only Maryland of all the eight conference schools failed to produce an outstanding sophomore, being content to go with the proven talent they already had.

All in all, it was a banner year for sophomores in the ACC with three of them (Moe, Larese and Youngkin) making all-conference. Much more will be written into basketball history by these young men next season.

ACC Indoor Track Meet Here Sat.

The distance running events, the classic Weil mile and the two-mile, promise some of the classiest competition in the sixth annual Atlantic Coast Conference Indoor Games here Saturday.

Burr Grim of Maryland, who streaked off with wins in both events last year, will not be back, leaving the field open to new candidates.

Maryland Tops
In the Weil mile, the talent-studded Maryland team, which won the Indoor Games last year, offers two more hot candidates in John Clagitt and Franci Colavita. Two others considered among the favorites are Gary Weisiger of Duke and Cowles Lipfert of North Carolina.

The Weil mile has a long and distinguished history and, appearing on the Saturday night program at 8:25 o'clock, always is one of the indoor meet's most interesting and thrilling races.

Mason Chronister of Maryland won the first running of the Weil mile in 1929, with Jimmy Davis of North Carolina taking first place with a record breaking run the next year. Clyde Garrison of N. C. State was a two-time winner (1953 and 1954) while Jimmy Beatty of North Carolina won it three times. Beatty came through in 1955, 1956 and 1957.

Maryland's Grim last year tied the old mark set by North Carolina's Davis in 1940, 4:12.5. A handsome special trophy, established in 1939 by the late Lionel Weil, goes to the winner of the Weil mile.

Bishop Favored
In Saturday's two-mile run, scheduled at 9:20 p.m., North Carolina has the number one favorite in Wayne Bishop. Experts are predicting that Bishop will break the two mile record of 9:24.5 set by North Carolina's Beatty in 1956. Billy Latham of South Carolina and Jerry Nourse of Duke are among the other favorites in the long run. The Indoor Games, portions of which will be televised over WUNC-TV, shape up as probably the fastest in history, in the opinion of Dale Ranson, chairman of the ACC track committee.

Considers New Job
ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Navy officials have given the University of Wisconsin permission to talk to Middle coach Ben Carnevale about it vacant basketball coaching job. An academy spokesman said the conference would take place after the NCAA tournament. Carnevale admitted he is interested in talking to the Badgers, but he said "right now there is nothing on my mind but B.U."

SAE Leads Murals Points Race

In the sports of wrestling, basketball and table tennis, SAE has the lead in points. They took a first place in wrestling and table tennis and a second place in basketball.

Along with SAE in the point leaders for wrestling, were DKE second and Beta third. The point leaders in basketball are: Sigma Nu, Chi Psi and Phi Delta in the fraternity white division. In the fraternity blue division Kap Sig was first with SAE second and Phi Delta third. Leaders in the dormitory division were Mangun, Joyner and Winston in that order. In the grad division Law School took top honors with the Peacocks and Grad History close behind. In table tennis the point leaders were: SAE and DKE in the fraternnity white division, SAE and Phi Delta in the fraternity blue division, and Cobb and Aycock in the dormitory division.

At the present time it looks as if SAE will give everyone a good race for the point leadership.

Three Carolina Fencers To Travel To Nationals

Bob Peebles, Carroll Raver and Mike Collins, three top members of the crack Carolina fencing team, have been named by coaches Pebley Barrow and Dave Evans to represent UNC in the NCAA Fencing Championships.

The National Individual Fencing Championships conducted by the NCAA will be fenced at Annapolis, Md., this year on March 27 and 28 at the Naval Academy.

Team captain Raver, a sophomore from Reigerstown, Md., will enter the foil competition. In epee the Carolina man will be Peebles, a soph from Falls Church, Va. Rounding out the UNC contingent will be Collins in sabre, a junior from High Point.

In the course of the two days of the tournament each man will fence all the other entries in his weapon. Approximately 40 colleges are expected to enter and fencing will be conducted on 15 strips at the same time. If all the 40 colleges have entries in all three weapons this would mean 2,340 bouts in all. In each weapon there will be over 700 bouts and five strips will fence simultaneously.

The Tar Heel fencers have two more meets this season, the next at the Citadel on April 4 and the last a 3-way event at Johns Hopkins on April 18. So far as a team they have gone undefeated having whipped VMI twice and AMA and the Citadel once.

The men selected will train intensively during the remaining time before the tournament as each will be required to fence nearly 40 bouts in his weapon in the two days of the tourney.
