

Eight Paintings On Display In Morehead

Eight recent paintings by Robert Broderson, assistant professor of art at Duke University, are showing on the campus in Morehead Building's North Gallery in an exhibition running through April.

This is the fifth in a series of one-man shows of the work of artists on the faculties of colleges and universities throughout the State sponsored by the University Art League.

Broderson, a native of Connecticut, took up painting as a career after World War II, in which he served with the Air Force. He came to Durham after a brief stay at Louisiana College, and received his B. A. degree in fine arts from Duke University.

In 1952, after completing a master of fine arts degree at the State University of Iowa, he joined the staff of Duke's Department of Aesthetics, Art and Music. He has taken time out for travel abroad and a year as visiting instructor in painting and drawing at the University of North Carolina in 1955.

Broderson has been exhibiting his paintings since 1949 in North Carolina as well as in regional and national shows throughout the East and Midwest. His "representational" paintings, which have identifiable subjects but tend toward symbolism and abstract expressionism, have

Critics Praise Book By UNC Professor

Critics are praising another potential bestseller by Prof. Floyd Hunter—Top Leadership, U. S. A. The ambitious man will benefit more from Prof. Hunter's book than from the popular books of Norman Vincent Peale and Dale Carnegie, declares a national-syndicated book reviewer.

Describing Prof. Hunter as a "back patting and shiny looking author," Clark Kinnaird of King Features Syndicate declares that the book can "be more helpful to the man of ambition than 'The Power of Positive Thinking' or 'How to Win Friends and Influence People.'"

This is the second book by Hunter who is a member of the faculty in the School of Social Work at Chapel Hill. The book is published by the University of North Carolina Press. His first book was "Community Power Structure," revealing how top leadership in a large city wielded its power; it attracted widespread attention.

Dr. Hunter names 100 top leaders in the United States. One of the leaders, Robert M. Hanes of Winston-Salem has died since the book went to press. Hanes was the only North Carolinian, now living in North Carolina, mentioned as one of the "finalists" in the Hunter sweepstakes of top leadership in the nation.

Another Tar Heel, Gordon Gray, now living in Washington, D. C. where he handles security matters in the Government and has his office in the White House, also is on the final list of Americans judged to be foremost in leadership.

Prof. Hunter has sought to find out the persons who have the most determining influence on national government, commercial, educational and other key policies.

Some big leaders in their conversations with Hunter downgraded their influence, while others fluence than actually they seem to possess, in Prof. Hunter's opinion.

"Paid employees" of national associations who have lobbying and public relations functions sometimes give the impression of having paramount influence. But the real leadership is often "behind the scenes" and not reposed in the professional workers who are executive secretaries of national organizations. "Some national leaders—not a majority—look upon the associations and their secretaries with contempt," writes Prof. Hunter.

Committee Interviews 12 For Scholarships

Twelve North Carolina boys who are seniors in high school were interviewed here Saturday for the Herbert Worth Jackson scholarship valued at $2,400 for four years.

The coveted scholarship will be awarded to one of the boys on the basis of scholarship and character. The name of the new Jackson scholar will be announced later this week.

The University Scholarship Committee recently selected the 12 finalists from 120 applicants. The award winner was chosen Saturday by a special committee composed of Herbert Worth Jackson Jr., Prof. James R. Caldwell of the Social Science Department and Edward French, assistant to the director of admissions.

The interviews were held by the committee in the Institute of Government.

Current scholarship holders here are the following: Kenneth Hall, senior; Everett James, junior; Ferguson Norton, sophomore, and Don Miller, freshman.

Vying for the four-year scholarship Saturday were the following

L&M FILTERS
LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO.

"L&M is kindest to your taste," says James Arness. "There are two good reasons why I know you'll like 'em. They're truly low in tar, with more exciting taste than you'll find in any other cigarette."

LOW TAR: L&M's patented filtering process adds extra filter fibers electrostatically, crosswise to the stream of smoke... makes L&M truly low in tar.

MORE TASTE: L&M's rich mixture of slow burning tobaccos brings you more exciting taste than any other cigarette.
