Beauty Contest, Dance Highlight CU Events Here

General activities for today, honoring the Consolidated University, have been announced by Student Council Chairman Erwin Fuller. Consolidated University Student Council members from the three schools will meet in the Library Assembly Room at 10 a.m. Twelve to eighteen busloads of women from Woman's College will arrive in the Bell Tower parking lot between 1 and 1:20 p.m. Council members will welcome the visitors. Chairman Fuller urges Carolina students to be "friendly, yet gentlemanly, to the female visitors." The WC students will sit in the west endzone and not in the UNC student section as in previous years. Tickets will be honored only at the listed gate, but seat exchanges between students can be worked out by the students themselves after admittance to the game. The other two members of the Consolidated University system will be saluted at half-time by the Marching Tar Heels with the playing of "Hi Neighbor." WC women then will be serenaded with "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" after which an animated steam shovel will salute State College to the tune of "Whistle While You Work." Candidates for CU Queen will be presented as the band forms a crown and renders "A Pretty Girl is Like a Melody." NC State's band also will perform at halftime and will cooperate with the Marching Tar Heels in pre-game activities. Following the game, a "get-acquainted" reception, sponsored by the CUSC, will be held on the lawn in front of GM (not at Woollen Gym as listed on posters) from 4:30 to 6 p.m. for the combined student bodies. UNC and WC women will serve free refreshments to all, accompanied by the music of a combo provided by GMAB's House Committee of which Stewart Priddy is chairman. In the event of rain, the reception will be held in the Tin Can. Students may dance to the music of Bobby Haas and "The Embers" at the Graill Dance in Woollen Gym tonight from 8 to 11 p.m. The CU Queen will be presented at 9:30. Admittance is $1 for all men. Women will be admitted free. This is a coat-and-tie affair.

After-Games Rules Outlined

October 3, 1959

Students of the University of North Carolina:

With the traditional football game between North Carolina and North Carolina State only a few hours away, we would like to outline to you a list of agreements reached by the two institutions. These agreements were reached because of the clean rivalry that has developed between the two schools in the past and the desire to maintain this wholesome atmosphere in the future. The agreements are as follows:

1. The student body of the school that sustains the defeat will remain in the stands at the conclusion of the game, and the students of the victorious school will be permitted to converge upon the goalpost and remove it if they so desire.

2. No opposition to this activity will be rendered by the police.

3. Police action will occur only if the student bodies of the two schools clash seriously.

We strongly urge you to adhere to these agreements, believing that if they are carried out they will greatly promote the type of sportsmanship and spirit that should exist between the student bodies of our respective schools.

We are sure your actions this afternoon will reflect much credit on the team and the University.

Sincerely,

Charlie Gray

2 Die In Ecuador Rioting

GUAYAQUIL, ECUADOR — Two persons were killed and four injured in riots touched off by rowdies trying to strip scantily clad drum majorettes in Ecuador's largest city Thursday night. A Navy shore patrol unit came to the defense of parading teenagers who were being manhandled by hoodlums making lewd remarks. The Navy was outnumbered and some of the high steppers, wearing revealing slit skirts and fancy white boots, were nearly undressed before police and troops quelled the outbreak.

Armed soldiers fought the mob 2½ hours, stepping in after National and Civil Police had been virtually routed. A store owner reportedly shot and killed two looters among the crowds that used the occasion to break into shops. Witnesses said police and soldiers did not fire into the mob, although some shots were fired into the air.

A police patrol car was overturned and gasoline soaked rags were tossed on it, but they did not burst into flame. Two of the injured were policemen. None of the parading girls suffered any serious injury, except to dignity. The disturbance was considered an indication of Guayaquil's dissatisfaction with the government. Some contend the government, though most taxes are collected in the banana-rich coastal regions around Guayaquil, gives preference in allocating tax money to Quito, the capital. The government also is blamed for not solving the plight of Guayaquil's unemployed, who took advantage of every opportunity to transform parades and public meetings into riots so they can loot.

Guayaquil was the scene of rioting four months ago, sparked by a student demonstration, that left many dead and injured. The parading girls were students in the National College of Guayaquil, the equivalent of a U. S. high school. The march was staged as a rehearsal for the role the school planned to take in a Rotary club benefit tomorrow in the national stadium. School authorities came under fire for allowing the girls to parade without taking security precautions.

Dept. of States, is quite a sportsman and has been looking forward with great anticipation to seeing today's football game with N. C. State, it is reported.

CU Championship Goes To Winner Of Battle

By ELLIOTT COOPER

The Beaten and the Unbeaten meet in Kenan Stadium this afternoon at 2 o'clock to decide the Consolidated University football championship for 1959.

Rocking and rolling from back-to-back defeats administered by Clemson and Notre Dame, Carolina will be out to achieve its first win of the season at the expense of arch rival N. C. State.

In addition to bringing their first victory, a win for the Tar Heels would also bring the present Wolfpack winning streak against Carolina to an end after three years.

Last Carolina Win In 1955

Not since way back in 1955 have the Heels come out with the long end of the score when they met the Wolfpack. Since that time the team from Raleigh has prevailed 26-6, 7-0, and 21-14. Although the series record stands at a lopsided 34-8-6 margin in favor of Carolina, that fact alone has not made the State wins any easier to take. While the Tar Heels have been losing their opening pair, Coach Earle Edwards' charges have put away one victory to their credit, a 15-13 decision over VPI. State had an open date last Saturday so it will enter today's play with a 1-0 record.

As a result of Carolina's performance against the Irish there has been a great deal of conjecture about the possibility of a shakeup in the Tar Heels' starting lineup for this afternoon's game. Coach Jim Hickey, however, has said that he is not going to announce any lineup before gametime.

Quite Different

Most observers, however, believe that there will be little similarity between the team that opened the Notre Dame game and the eleven which will start today. Most likely, the Tar Heel team which does get the starting assignment will feature a combination of what last week would have been called first and second stringers.

Officially the only Carolina player that does not have a chance of starting is halfback Milam Wall who suffered a groin injury last Saturday will have to sit this one out.

Reports circulated about the actual Carolina lineup seem to come to the conclusion that only three players who began against the Irish will be on the field for the starting whistle this time. Co-captains Wade Smith and Jack Cummings are the only sure starters that Hickey has.

Reynolds At 268

There is no secret about the Wolfpack starting lineup, however, and it's going to be a pretty big one. With 268 pound tackle Dick Reynolds supplying most of the weight, the State line will average 219.

Dick Drexler and George Volymar will be the starting ends. Along with Reynolds the interior line will feature Kelly Minyard at the other tackle, Frank Morocco and Alex Gilleeskie at the guards and Paul Balonick at center.

Sophomore sensation Roman Gabriel will direct the Pack attack from his quarterback position. Halfbacks Ron Podwika and Claude Gibson and fullback Arnold Nelson round out the backfield.

Like the Tar Heels, State has an alternate second unit which sees a lot of action during the game. This squad, nicknamed the Sock 'em team, lacks the first string's weight and experience but looked very good in the VPI contest. Ron Wojcicki is slated to run this unit.

Against Virginia Tech the Wolfpack ran primarily from the double winged T and avoided the single wing and straight T but Edwards has promised to jazz this offense up a little more for Carolina.

Tic-Tac-Toe

The world's largest tic-tac-toe game is scheduled for halftime Saturday in Kenan Stadium.

Charlie Graham, head cheerleader, and State's head cheerleader will play a tic-tac-toe game using the card section as the playing board.

Cardboard President Larry Withrow said this is a new card stunt idea and expressed his hopes that students in this section will cooperate in working the cards according to special instructions.

Also slated for the card section Saturday are three stunts honoring the Consolidated University. There will be a State script, a WC script and the UNC monogram. Another first for the Cardboard will be the different presentation of the monogram. A total of 10 stunts will be given at halftime.

NEA Chapter Slates Meet Here Tuesday

The first meeting of the Frank Porter Graham chapter of the student chapter of National Education Association will be Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the curriculum lab of Peabody Hall.

Phoebe Emmons will speak on "The Teachers' Responsibility to Professional Growth."

Yack pictures will be taken on this occasion. Those interested in joining the NEA should come to this meeting, a spokesman said.

Red China Ignores Nikita's Plea To Stop Rocking Boat

By J. M. ROBERTS

Associated Press News Analyst Nikita Khrushchev got a more objective hearing in the anti-communist United States than he is receiving in the capital of Communist China.

Premier Chou En-Lai has praised Khrushchev for his peace efforts on the one hand, while on the other the whole Red propaganda program for the regime's 10th anniversary has been on the aggressive side.

The United States, which Khrushchev is attempting to mollify, for his own reasons, has been under broad-scale attack throughout the ceremonies.

The Reds keep on promising to shoot people who get in their way, as against Khrushchev's plea that nobody do any boat-rocking right now.

The line taken by the Reds is carefully designed for its appeal to the Chinese people, since it is an old Chinese theme used by but not directly connected with Communist. This is the announced determination to take territory on the Chinese periphery which they have always claimed.

This is particularly pointed now at Formosa.

Khrushchev must have been actively aware, however, as he watched the parade of military equipment which the Reds have built for themselves, over and above the aid they have received from Russia, that Chinese expansionist claims involve Russia, too.

Mongolia was the first country outside Soviet borders to be made a part of the Communist sphere. That was many years ago, when the idea of Communist world conquest was first being manifested.

But Mongolia has always been on the Chinese list of claims, too. The clash of Chinese and Russian interests there has long been in the background of Sino-Russian relations.

More important, however, is the general appearance of conflict in current theory — whether to present a soft front as Khrushchev now seeks to do in the cold war, or to act tough as Peiping is doing not only toward the United States, but toward India and in some respects toward all Asia. Khrushchev had already attempted without success before going to Peiping, to call a halt on Chinese armed forces butting around on the Indian border.

The Peiping regime has been having trouble with its economic program, there has been a shake-up in its military, and its efforts to regiment the people into communes has created much resentment. Its beating of foreign whipping boys may then be primarily for domestic consumption.

Chou might remind Khrushchev, if he wished, of the times when the Kremlin has used that tactic.

Regardless of Chou's personal politeness, however, it appears on the surface that Khrushchev supersalesmanship hasn't worked in Peiping.
