Journalism School To Move In

Contractors Preparing Bids For Renovating Of Howell Hall

By HARVE HARRIS

Groups of men carrying yellow pads and pencils prowled through Howell Hall Tuesday as contractors sent representatives to prepare bids for renovating Howell for the journalism school to move in after pharmacy moves out.

The final bids will be opened Oct. 22 in the presence of University officials and the architectural contractor, Holloway-Reeves of Raleigh. Thirty days following the bids opening the contractors may begin work.

Final Inspection

Contractors and University officials will make the preliminary final inspection of the new pharmacy building on Oct. 29. At that time all remaining defects will be noted and figured out by the time final inspection takes place on Nov. 3.

The building has been inspected daily by representatives of Holloway-Reeves since ground was first broken in May 1958.

Dr. E. A. Brecht, dean of the pharmacy school managed to look both hurried and pleased Tuesday as he talked over plans for moving into the new building.

Confusing Business

"I've never been through anything quite like this before," he said. "Sometimes it's a little confusing. Those contracts to be let on the 22nd mean that we almost have to be out of here by the latter part of November if the journalism school gets down to overhauling this building (Howell)."

"I've learned to expect that when I meet someone I know that I will be asked 'When are you going to move?' You know," the dean went on more seriously, "some people look at that new building and can't think of anything but the cost which they believe to be extravagant."

Dr. Brecht then gave facts to prove this assumption erroneous. "When the dental school building was constructed it was at a cost of $15.50 per sq. ft. Our building is being erected for $13.85 per sq. ft. Remember that construction costs have risen on the average, too, since the dental building went up in 1950."

Dr. Brecht attributed the lower cost to "excellent planning on the part of the architectural contractor" and to "just plain luck."

The original appropriation of the General Assembly was not enough to completely cover the cost of constructing the pharmacy building. Then in the 1959 session of the Assembly a change order provided for the necessary funds to cover remaining costs. As it is, the final installation of equipment will not be complete until February, 1960.

Building Of Schools May Decline

By G. K. HODENFIELD

WASHINGTON, (AP) — Secretary of Welfare Arthur S. Flemming today predicted a marked decline in public school construction despite an urgent national need for more classrooms.

Flemming told a news conference his forecast was based on a drop in sales of school bonds.

For the 12 months from September 1958 through August 1959, Flemming said, school bonds sales totaled $1,886,000,000 or 20 per cent less than for the preceding 12-month period. He conceded the picture may change after referenda in several states next month.

Flemming said the decline indicates the importance of an administration proposal to assist needy school districts in passing school bond issues. Under that proposal, so far not acted upon by Congress, the government, in cooperation with the states, would guarantee repayment of one-half of the interest and principal of the bonds sold.

In response to a question, Flemming said he doesn't think the current tight money situation, with increasingly high interest rates, has affected school bond sales.

He said there were three basic reasons for the decline:

1. Some of the wealthier districts have fulfilled their needs and are not trying to sell bonds.
2. Some districts haven't been willing to go further into debt to provide themselves with needed facilities.

3. Some needy districts just can't help themselves.

It is this third group, he said, which is in need of government aid.

Flemming acknowledged that the best available figures indicate the percentage of school bond issues approved by the voters is higher this year than last year. Even so, he said, the amount of bonds actually being sold has gone down.

Frosh Forum Makes Plans For New York

A weekend in New York City will be the highlight of the Freshman Forum program this fall. Scheduled for the first weekend in November, the tour will include visits to the United Nations, Carnegie Hall, a Broadway play and several museums.

The party will travel by bus, and all class cuts will be excused by the University. Friday and Saturday nights will be "free nights." The party will return to Chapel Hill on Sunday, Nov. 8.

All Freshmen interested in participating in the Forum and making the New York trip are asked to attend the Forum's weekly meeting tonight at 6:30 in the upstairs dining room of Lenoir Hall. Refreshments will be served.

Jim Carse will present a program on "The History of Jazz" which will be illustrated by "The Embers," a well-known combo. Other programs scheduled for the season include sessions on culture and the beat generation.

"This is an excellent opportunity for freshmen to participate in student activities and to make new friends, as well as to enjoy excellent educational programs," stated Jim McMichael, publicity co-chairman.

The Forum is headed by sophomores at the present time, but freshmen will take over the program in the spring.

Integrate Southern Schools Or Close Them Says Almond

By JIM THOMASSON

ASHEVILLE, (AP) — The South must make the choice of closing public schools or accepting some integration, Gov. J. Lindsay Almond Jr., said here today as he became chairman of the Southern Governors' Conference.

The dignified, white-haired Virginian expressed his views at a news conference following his election.

"Speaking as governor of Virginia and as an individual, he described himself as a realist on segregation and declared he has never bolted the Democratic Party on the national, state or local level."

As the 28th chairman of the Southern governors, Almond envisioned "unending growth and prosperity for the South."

In electing Almond, whose massive resistance program to segregation crumbled in the face of Federal court decisions, his fellow governors passed up Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas, the central figure in the Little Rock school crisis.

But the conference did accept Faubus' invitation to hold the 1960 meeting in Arkansas.

At the executive session which ended the 25th annual meeting here, the conference also adopted resolutions urging the president and Congress to restore cuts in federal highway fund allocations to the states; approving a 16-state nuclear energy compact; and authorizing continued study of the impact of foreign imports on domestic economy.

Under traditions of the conference, only Almond and Faubus were considered eligible for the chairmanship to succeed Gov. James P. Coleman of Mississippi. Whether there was any significance to Almond's election was not immediately apparent.

Orthopedic Association To Hold Two-Day Meet

The North Carolina Orthopedic Association will meet here Friday and Saturday, Oct. 16-17.

The Orthopedic Division of the UNC School of Medicine is host for the informal meeting, which will consist mainly of discussion of papers to be given by the members.

Pictured above are Gertie Barnes and Marshall Dutton admiring Becky Clopper's Carolina blazer. The Interdormitory Council Honorary Society's Annual Blazer Sale will be held Oct. 29 in Y-Court. Prizes are not available at present, but it is estimated that men's blazers will run about $31 and women's about $25. The money made on the sale will go into a fund for scholarships.

Heavy Agenda Slated For Legislature Tonight

The Student Legislature will assemble Thursday night for its second meeting of the year.

Several bills are slated for consideration.

Included are a bill to clarify the Carolina Handbook (held over from last year); a bill to establish a Jim Tatum Memorial Award; and a bill providing two business sessions of the Legislature per calendar year.

Other bills will deal with changes in the election laws, establishing only one polling place in each district; and incorporation into the bylaws of the changes called for the Crownover bill of last year.

Also on the agenda is a bill calling for an appropriation of $60 to the Daily Tar Heel for a special edition on the bond issue of Oct. 27.

Dave Grigg, student body vice-president, said that the Legislature is still organizing for this year, because several legislators have moved from their districts or have resigned. This has created a number of vacancies which must be filled.

Grigg urges those who have resigned to submit a formal resignation to him as soon as possible.

"Gentleman's Agreement" Will Be Shown Tonight

The Westminster Fellowship and Wesley Foundation are sponsoring one of a series of film forums in the Presbyterian Student Center tonight at 7:30.

Tonight's feature is "Gentleman's Agreement" starring Gregory Peck, Dorothy McGuire, Celeste Holm, and Dean Stockwell. It is the story of a feature writer who sets out to do a series on anti-semitism and of the changes that this produces in his life. Time Magazine said of the film, "Gentleman's Agreement" is an important experiment, honestly approached and successfully brought off."

A discussion session after the film will be led by Rabbi E. M. Rosenzweig, director of the Hill Foundation, and William Gulley, research assistant in the Department of Sociology.

Future film presentations in the series will include "Death of a Salesman", Nov. 12 and "The Prisoner" on Dec. 3.

Dental School Elects Student Body Officers

Class officers and representatives to the Honor Council and the Spurgeon Dental Society have been elected by the four classes of UNC's School of Dentistry.

The Spurgeon Dental Society is composed of the student body of the School of Dentistry. It is named in honor of the late Dr. J. S. Spurgeon of Hillsboro, a pioneer leader in dentistry of this state. The Honor Council is the student government body of the School of Dentistry.

The new officers, shown by classes, are:

First Year Class: William R. Caviness, Sanford, president; Frank M. Ramos, Butner, vice president; Myron H. Enns, Goldsboro, secretary-treasurer, Joseph F. Quigg, Levittown, N. Y. Spurgeon Society and James N. Zigler, Winston-Salem and J. M. Collie of Durham, Honor Council.
Second Year Class: John Shell,

Africa's Attitude Affects World, Says Archbishop

By RICHARD BURROWS

"Africa is a continent of turmoil and is an awakening giant," said the Archbishop of Capetown in his talk to students and townspeople Wednesday night.

For 200 years one thousand Africans were removed each day and taken to other countries to be used as slaves. Because of this Africa has lagged behind the rest of the world and is still lagging. That period of slave trade is not entirely to blame for the lag, because slavery is still there today.

Because of this weakening, the Africans of today are extremely loyal to their continent. They know of everything that might affect their independence soon after it happens.

The Christian missionaries are losing their battle, because they do not "practice what they preach."

The Moslems use this propaganda in their efforts to convert them to Islam. They are winning the battle. They say that Christianity is the white man's religion and that Islam is the religion of the colored man.

The race relationship has become segregated because White Africa is afraid that they will lose their identity if they combine with Black Africa. In the Dutch Colonies there are three million whites and two billion blacks.

There should be an attempt on our part for more partnership instead of one race over another. The attitude of white supremacy makes the work of the church even harder. The African's independence is challenged under the present form of government, and they are fighting to regain it.

This is the century of Africa. What Africa does in the next 25 years will affect the world. Economists, politicians and businessmen already know this, and they are trying harder to gain the confidence of the blacks.

Their present state of unrest is being caused by frustration and poverty. They are being forced to live in sub standard conditions. "We should make plans now to get rid of this situation before it is too late," said the Archbishop. "Even now it may be too late," he added.

These people are being tempted by forces other than our Christian missionaries and are being won. Their hunger for land and independence there is the basis for much thinly disguised propaganda by foreign powers. The Communist influence is becoming more evident in the charges that the Western world is trying to gain control of the land and its colored people.

Young Dancer At Conference Back In School

ASHEVILLE, (AP) — Janice Smiley, the 15-year-old school girl who turned the Southern Governors' Conference into a dance fete, was back in class today, somewhat subdued, but still pert.

"Oh golly," she told a photographer, "I am in a mess of trouble."

While Janice was crashing the Governors' Conference, her teachers thought she was home with a cold.

The teachers changed their minds this morning, when they picked up their papers and saw a picture of the dignified governor of North Carolina, Luther H. Hodges, doing a "Charleston" or something to Janice's rock 'n' roll.

Janice is the pretty and vivacious daughter of a clothing store manager here. She aspires to be a reporter for the Sky High, her school newspaper, and that's the cause of her trouble.

Her teacher had told her, laughingly, that if she could get an interview with one of the visiting governors, it would help her chances.

Janice, not a girl to be told anything laughingly, went to the governors' hotel and promptly confronted and confounded Alabama Gov. John Patterson. The upshot was that Patterson invited Miss Smiley to a banquet and dance Monday night.

"Live it up a little," she urged the distinguished politicians and soon had them hopping and cavorting all over the dance floor. As she "cut out" with Hodges, a photographer recorded the occasion.

Thus the picture in the paper, Janice in the doghouse, and "oh, golly."

Nobel Prize List Headed By Scientist

By CARL O. BOLANG

STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN, (AP) — An Austrian-born Canadian scientist called "The Einstein of Medicine" is believed to head the list of this year's Nobel Medicine Prize candidates.

He is Prof. Hans Selye of Montreal, who told mankind how to fight against what he calls "stress." Stockholm medical circles predicted today he will win the medicine prize.

Selye, born in Vienna in 1907, for several years has been mentioned as a qualified candidate for the world's highest award in the field of medicine or physiology.

This year more secrecy has surrounded the medicine prize than in all the 58-year history of the Nobel prizes.

The Royal Caroline Institute, the awarding body, has decided to keep the name of the winner secret until the moment of the award.

The formal announcement is expected this afternoon (about 10 a.m. EST) at the conclusion of a meeting of the Nobel committee at the institute.

Chevy Man Wins Ford

HIGH POINT, (AP) — The local Ford distributor staged a grand opening event to show off the 1960 models. One of his top door prizes was won by the local Chevrolet dealer.

Classical Assn. To Meet Here

The North Carolina Classical Association will meet in Chapel Hill Friday and Saturday, Oct. 23-24, for the second annual meeting.

College and high school teachers of Latin and Greek from all over the state will be on hand to hear papers ranging from "The Linguistic Approach and the High School Classroom" to "Life and Literature in Greek Vases."

Dr. Walter Allen Jr., president of the association invites the public to the Friday session in the Assembly Room of the Library at 8 p.m. Dr. Samuel Rogers, professor of Latin at Duke, will speak on "The Neronian Comtes". He will explain some of the events in the uneasy reign of the Emperor Nero.

Members of the UNC Dept. of Classics to be on the program are B. L. Ullman, Cornelia C. Coulter, Henry R. Imraerwahr and Charles Charles Henderson, Jr.

Select High School Teachers Will Study Science, Math

Newest developments in science and mathematics—from plant taxonomy to ring and matrice theories—will be studied this year by a select group of high school teachers who have gathered at the University of North Carolina.

The National Science Foundation program, officially termed the 1959-60 Academic Year Institute for High School Teachers of Science and Mathematics, includes 22 teachers from North Carolina.

Dr. Edwin C. Markham, who is Smith professor in the Department of Chemistry, directs the NSF institute within UNC's Institute of Natural Science.

A distinguished mathematician from Smith College will be among the institute staff members, which include eight regular UNC professors.

Prof. Neal H. McCoy, visiting professor this year in the Department of Mathematics, is former chairman of the Smith College math department. Known as both author and teacher, he is best known for research on the theories of matrices

Day Of Recollection To Be Held Sunday

A day of recollection will be conducted Sunday for all unmarried Catholic men at St. Thomas More Chapel.

Those attending will be served breakfast after the 10:45 Mass. Father Jim Jones, Diocesan Mission director, will conduct the retreat, which will conclude around 4:15 p.m.
