East-West Summit Conference Awaited Anxiously By Soviets

MOSCOW, (AP) — The Soviet Union insisted yesterday the job of easing world tensions is one for the heads of government, and announced it wants a summit meeting quickly—the sooner the better.

The Kremlin position was made plain in a statement issued by the official News Agency Tass. It came at a moment when international developments in the West indicated a summit meeting might be delayed until spring.

Khrushchev Urgently Wants Summit

The timing of the Tass announcement left the impression that Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev urgently wants a summit meeting, but that if he cannot get it this year he will take it later on.

Tass mentioned no proposed date for the gathering of the government chiefs of the United States, the U. S. S. R., Great Britain and France.

The Tass statement followed by 16 hours another dispatch of the agency distributed here and then cancelled, with the explanation only that it had been distributed by mistake. That earlier statement had said Khrushchev told President Eisenhower in the United States last month the Soviet government "seems it necessary that a summit conference be convened before the end of the year."

The news statement put the Soviet position this way:

"Conflicting reports have appeared in the foreign press concerning the Soviet government's position as to the time of the convocation of a meeting of the heads of government to consider urgent problems with a view of relaxing the international situation and strengthening world peace."

Meeting Necessary

"In this connection, Tass has been authorized to state that the Soviet government's repeatedly stated position on this matter remains unchanged. The Government of the U. S. S. R. regards a meeting of the heads of government as necessary and is ready for such a meeting."

"It also holds the view, expressed by other states as well, that the earlier the summit meeting is called, the better it will be for the cause of peace . . ."

LONDON, (AP) — Authorized informants reported yesterday the British — and possibly the Americans, too — intend to contest a French inclination to delay an East-West summit meeting.

These sources said Prime Minister MacMillan intends to press strongly for a summit meeting before the end of this year, so that the momentum of East-West conciliation the British believe to be in existence now is not lost.

Diplomatic informants in West Germany reported de Gaulle issued bids for a Western summit meeting in Paris. This report, along with other developments, seemed to cast doubt on the likelihood of a summit meeting before the end of 1959.

De Gaulle Holds out

De Gaulle is pictured in Paris as holding out for a delay of the Big Four conference until spring. In the interim, as well as meeting with Western leaders, he will have talked with Premier Khrushchev, whom he was invited to visit Paris this fall.

In Washington, State Department authorities indicated the outlook now seems to be for Western heads of government meeting early in December, and a Geneva meeting of Eisenhower, MacMillan, de Gaulle and Khrushchev in March.

At his new conference yesterday Eisenhower remarked that "The longer we postpone a Western summit, the more that would have the effect of pushing back the Western meeting with Khrushchev."

Tar Heels Favored To Defeat Deacons; Cummings, Snead Air Battle Expected

By ELLIOTT COOPER

WINSTON-SALEM — Knocked off the comeback trail by Maryland last week, Carolina will attempt to right itself here this afternoon when it collides with Wake Forest in the fifty-seventh meeting between the two rivals.

Despite their losing 2-3 record the Tar Heels have been installed as three point favorites, to hand the Deacons their second loss of the campaign.

The contest has been billed as a sellout and one of the largest crowds in the history of Bowman Gray Stadium is expected to be on hand for the 2 o'clock kickoff. 2,500 temporary seats have been erected here to increase the seating capacity to some 20,000.

Quarterback Battle

The fans in attendance should see plenty of offensive action as Carolina quarterback Jack Cummings matches plays with his Wake Forest contemporary Norman Snead. At the moment Snead is the ACC's passing and total offense leader but a good day for Cummings this afternoon would put him right back into contention.

Coach Jim Hickey is scheduled to open the game with the same lineup he used last Saturday against Maryland. The only Tar Heels who will definitely miss the contest today are halfbacks Gib Carson and Rip Slusser. Carson, the team's rushing leader, still has a cast on his broken hand and Slusser injured his shoulder in practice earlier this week.

Carolina and Wake Forest have met two common opponents so far this year in N. C. State and Maryland. Of this pair the Tar Heels were able to beat only the Wolfpack 20-12 while the Deacons had better success winning both by scores of 17-14 and 10-7.

Field Goal Kicker

One of the major reasons for the victories of the Deacon eleven this year can be attributed to the kicking toe of guard Nick Patella. The senior from East Stroudsburg, Pa. has received credit for winning three games with his successful field goals. He is also the Deacs scoring leader with twelve points.

The Wake Forest pass defense should present a definite challenge to Cummings and Ray Farris since it is the best in the conference in that department. Through five games the Deacons have yielded an average of 516 yards passing to their opponents. Since the Tar Heels are the top club in passing offense, getting better than 117 yards per game that way, something has got to give.

In the line the Deacs should open with Pete Manning and Bobby Allen at the ends with Al Conover and Wayne Wolf at the tackles. Patella will run at left guard flanked by Paul Martineau at the other guard spot. Co-captain Back Jolly will start at center.

Although the Wake line will not be as heavy as the Tar Heel forward wall, it won't have to give away much weight. At 225 Conover will be the biggest Deacon on the first string.

Deacon Backfield

In addition to Snead, Bobby Robinson, Jerry Ball, and Joe Bonecutter will round out the Wake Forest starting backfield. Bonecutter has had so much success with his rushing game that he has replaced co-captain Neil MacLean as the starting fullback.

The Tar Heels end combination of John Schroeder and Al Goldstein, both of whom have gained 100 yards or better in pass receiving, should be the prime targets for Cummings' tosses.

In the middle of the line Carolina will be counting on tackles Don Stallings and John Stunda, guards Paul Russell and Frank Riggs, and center Rip Hawkins to stop whatever

Unique Series To Be Given In Memorial

The first lecture of this year's Last Lecture Series will feature Dr. Bernard Boyd, Chairman of the Religion Department. This will be presented Dec. 9, 8:30 p.m., in Memorial Hall.

Sponsored by Student Government, the series is headed by Presidential Assistant Jim Crownover and members of the subcommittee of the Academic Affairs committee.

Outstanding Professors Speak

The purpose of the series is to present to the campus lectures delivered by outstanding professors in various departments of the University.

It centers on a presentation by the lecturer of ideas and thoughts he would like most to leave with American college students if he knew he would die the next day.

UNC Only School

Last Lecture Series originated at Ohio State University. UNC, the second to adopt the program, is now the only campus in the nation which holds this series.

Crownover expressed hope that two of these lectures can be presented each year. The second lecture is planned for the latter part of March, with the speaker to be chosen from a list of professors which include Chancellor Emeritus Robert B. House, Dr. George V. Taylor, Dr. Preston H. Epps and others.

Students interested in planning and publicizing these lectures should contact Jim Crownover (8-9126 or 21463), Frank Beaver (8-9094), Carroll Raver (8-9080) or Taylor McMillan (8-9145).

There will be a meeting of students interested in this work Monday at 4 p.m. in Roland Parker I.

Rules In 1857 Were Tough

By JOHN JUSTICE

Carolina students who complain of today's restrictions should look at some of the old campus rules. Fortunately they are no longer enforced.

Imagine a 9 p.m. curfew. In 1857, any boy found on campus after nine was punished. This rule was to curb campus "sparking."

Morning prayers were required. Each student had to attend services at 6:45 a.m. from Nov. 1 to Feb. 15 and at sunrise the rest of the year.

Some of the rural students probably resented the law that "no fowls shall be kept in any student's room."

Entertainment was regulated strictly. The president's permission was required before there could be any dance, concert, theatrical production or tight-rope stunts within two miles of Chapel Hill.

The hallowed institution of all colleges, the bull session, was outlawed. Regulations stated that an instructor "shall break up any such gathering on campus and any student participating in any such group shall be punished."

The students were not trusted with money. At the start of each term they turned over their money to a superintendent of financial affairs. He paid all of the student's bills including purchases from Hill merchants.

The student had to report any extra money received. He was allowed some spending money—$1 a month.

About 1925 a professor could search a student's room at will. If the student resisted, the professor could break down the door and ransack the room. To add insult to injury, the student was required to pay for the door.

After the Civil War a protective rule for the faculty was passed. It was required before there could be any dance, concert, theatrical production or tight-rope stunts without the permission of the president.

Rooms were assigned differently then. At the end of prayers on the first day of each term, the students raced to the dorms. The choice rooms went to the fastest runners.

No student should "erect a hut or any edifice on campus." This was to stop individualists from building huts under the corners of South Building before it was completed.

With such rules one wonders how Carolina became the liberal school of today. But it did, for which Carolina gentlemen (and ladies) are thankful.

Fire Snuffed At Nurses' Dorm

By PETER NESS

Shortly before ten o'clock last night, the Chapel Hill Fire Department answered a call to the UNC Nurses' Dorm.

The blaze was found to be in the basement and required about ten minutes to be extinguished.

Fire Chief Boone speculated that the cause was a box of oily rags sitting near several gallons of paint.

It has not yet been estimated, but damaged appears to be minor. The fire, which took place in the basement paint shop, could have possibly caused extensive damage to the nurses' residence, had it not been contained.

Leo Simpson, a UNC student who was at the scene when the fire broke out, reportedly broke a window in the door to the paint shop, entered the room and located the burning rags, moving them away from cans of paint. Simpson's actions prevented spread of the fire and extensive damage to the dorm.

Petite Dramatique Presents 'Waiting For Gadot' Oct. 31

By MARY STEWART BAKER

"But you can't go barefoot."
"Christ did."
"Christ! What has Christ got to do with it? You're not going to compare yourself to Christ!"
"All my life I've compared myself to him."

So go the rehearsals for the forthcoming production, "Waiting for Gadot", by Petite Dramatique.

This is not the so-called "glamour" that is usually associated with a dramatic production. "It's just darn hard work," says Doug McDermott, director of the present Petite Dramatique play.

The play, written by Samuel Beckett, will be presented by the all-student organization on Saturday and Sunday nights, Oct. 31 and Nov. 1, at 8 o'clock in the Graham Memorial Lounge.

Portraying Vladimir is Paul Priest, who has actually been rehearsing in his bare feet on the cold floors of Roland Parker Lounge. Paul is a graduate student working for his doctors degree in comparative literature. He also teaches beginning courses in English and French. Bill Bailey portrays the part of Estragon. Bill is an undergraduate in the School of Education; his schooling here includes study in the educational block, the teacher training program. Bill's past drama activities on the UNC campus have included acting with the Carolina Playmakers last spring and this past summer.

The all-male cast is also comprised of Doug Powers, a graduate student in the medical school, who portrays the character of Pozzo. He has had former theatrical experience at Baylor University and with the Virginia players.

The part of Lucky is played by Joe Masi, a sophomore transfer from Duquesne University. His major is English.

Director McDermott is on the Carolina campus doing graduate work in Dramatic Art.

The master electrician is John More; Bob Lott is in charge of sets, props and costumes.
