Behind The "Godot" Scenes

Play Begins At 8 In GM

By MARY STEWART BAKER

Two factors aided Petite Dramatique in choosing "Waiting For Godot" for its first production of the year: one was the excellence of the script and the other was the ease with which it may be produced.

These factors figured into an after-rehearsal refash of technical problems when members of the cast, the director, and technicians gathered in Roland Parker Lounge.

"Producing a play in Graham Memorial Lounge is a difficult job technically," one of the technicians threw in.

Petite Dramatique director, Doug McDermott, leaned back in his chair. "Well, as the guy said 'The play's the thing.'" Someone sighed in disgust over the well-worn phrase.

Doug continued, "Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king—and the king is our audience. We hope to catch attention—not with lights and costumes; we hope to catch it with the play and the acting of it."

The director explained that the amateur observer may well consider it a disadvantage to produce a play without the usual paraphernalia—stage lights, costumes, and complex control panels. But as Doug pointed out simply: The thing being produced is the play; second in importance are the actors. These two elements will work in the open, he said, aided to a certain degree with technical know-how, but not glazed and hindered by it.

Those present at the gathering pointed out the difficulties presented by lighting. Graham Memorial has been standing for a number of years and the building is not able to take the standard theatrical lights; the crux of this problem is that there is no place to mount them.

"Anyway," said Doug, "we can't mess up the wood work, so we use a chandelier in the lounge where 150 watts will be mounted on a 90 degree revolving ball socket.

"Costumes are taken from whatever we can find," one of the actors threw in the discussion. "We can't hope to equal professional costuming and besides 'Waiting For Godot' doesn't require that much elegance."

"That's the beauty of the play, and that's one of the reasons we chose it," Doug said in conclusion. At any rate, a play, "Waiting For Godot," will be presented tonight and tomorrow night in the Graham Memorial Lounge at 8 p.m. Admission is free.

THE DAILY GRIND

Necessity may be the mother of invention at times, but it is just the mother of hard work to most of us.

Yardley Defines Committee Position

In a statement issued yesterday Germans Club President Jonathan Yardley said that although the Dance Committee constitution does not give them direct authority over the Kingston Trio concert held last night, the Germans Club invites them to all presentations and asks for their help and cooperation.

"We are greatly indebted to Ray Jeffries and the members of the Dance Committee for their aid which they have given us in past years," said Yardley, "and we will continue to request their presence. We delegate all authority to them in matters of audience control and behavior."

Yardley was referring to the attempt made Thursday night by the Dance Committee to amend their constitution. It states that the committee shall have jurisdiction over dances and concerts held in conjunction with dances.

Since the Germans Club did not hold a dance in conjunction with the concert last night, a question of the committee's authority caused the attempt to change the rules.

Dance Committee Chairman Angus Duff called a meeting of the committee, but there were not enough members present to vote on the amendment.

However, after the meeting Duff said that Dick Robinson and Jack Spain had ruled that the Grail

Dance being held tonight was in conjunction with the Germans Club concert.

Yardley said he questioned the validity of that ruling. "We are not affiliated with anybody except the 13 fraternities which constitute the Germans Club," he said. "If we are going to hold a dance with anybody," he continued, "we will announce it."

Weaver Warns Coaches

RALEIGH, N. C. — Atlantic Coast Conference coaches were warned Friday against publicly criticizing decisions of game officials.

The warning was contained in a letter from ACC Commissioner Jim Weaver and apparently was prompted by remarks made by Wake Forest Coach Paul Amen following the Demon Deacons' 21-19 loss to North Carolina last Saturday.

Amen assailed the officiating, saying he was "downright mad" about it. Also declared he didn't think the officials should be immune to criticism.

Weaver sent a letter to football coaches, athletic directors, faculty chairmen and football officials. In it, he said "constructive criticism of officiating by coaches is not only encouraged but solicited and provided for as a part of routine procedure in the ACC."

"However, flagrant and public criticism is damaging and irrevocable. Such criticism is not in the best interest of the game and is to be deplored as it contradicts both the spirit and the letter of the ACC code of ethics."

The code was formulated by a special committee which included Amen.

Weaver said, "Any criticisms which the coach may have to make concerning officiating should be made in writing to the office which assigned the official to the game."

Student Conduct Praised

The following joint statement has been issued by Erwin Fuller, chairman of the Student Council, and Women's Honor Council Chairman Sandy Trotman:

"We are pleased to note the excellence of the conduct of the Carolina student body at the football games thus far this season. The students are certainly to be commended for their general behavior, and for their spirit and sportsmanship. The conduct this year has been very refreshing in comparison to that of previous years."

"With the unusually large number of visitors in Chapel Hill this weekend, it is most important that the student body be especially conscious of its conduct at all times. We are sure that our guests will be observing student conduct, and we certainly hope that their impressions will be favorable. This will be possible if each Carolina student will remember his obligations under the Campus Code and will exhibit gentlemanly and ladylike behavior at all times."

"We are confident that the previous good student conduct will be evidenced again this weekend and the students and their guests will experience an enjoyable and memorable weekend."

Carousel Sets Record For Musical Attendance

Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Carousel" had the largest attendance of any musical put on by the Carolina Playmakers. It ran for three nights (Oct. 22-24).

Although there was not a full house any night, a total of 3,877 saw the show.

"Look Homeward Angel," not a musical, is the only production which had a larger audience.

PHYSICAL THERAPY CLUB

Bernard Passer, program director of the N. C. Society for Crippled Children and Adults, will speak to the Physical Therapy Club Nov. 3, 7 p.m. physical therapy classroom, University Hospital. Passer will talk and show a film, "Reach for Tomorrow," sponsored by the Easter Seals Society. The public may attend.

Quarterly Talks To Writers

Starting Monday, the Carolina Quarterly is innovating poetry and fiction workshops in its Graham Memorial office for the benefit of students writers who wish criticism and/or publication.

The fiction workshop will be held from 4 to 6 p.m. every Monday, and the poetry workshop from 7:30 to 8 p.m. of the same day. The Quarterly fiction and poetry boards will be present at these workshops, unless the writer prefers to meet in private with the fiction and poetry editors exclusively.

The workshop program is part of a campaign designed by Quarterly editor, Nancy Combes, to interest more students in contributing to the Quarterly. This year's Quarterly, said the editor, would like to see the bulk of its fiction coming from Carolina writers.

Debate Team Has Openings For Novices

The novice division of the Debate Squad has several openings for students interested in participating in the activities of the team.

The squad is especially anxious to enroll members who have not previously debated in intercollegiate competition, according to Taylor McMillan.

Representatives will be sent to the 1959 Carolina Forensics at the University of South Carolina Nov. 13 and 14. Other team members will compete in the Peachtree Invitational Debate Tournament at Emory University on the same dates.

A team will participate in the Fall Debate Tournament at the Agricultural and Technical College of North Carolina on Nov. 20 and 21.

On Dec. 3, 4, 5 the Appalachian Mountain Forensic Tournament will be held at Appalachian State Teachers College. Carolina's Debate Squad will send members to Appalachian and to the Hall of Fame Debate Tournament at New York University which will be on Dec. 4 and 5.

The team meets in Bingham Hall on Mondays at 3:30 p.m. and Tuesdays at 4 p.m.

Interested students should contact Taylor McMillan at 8-9145 or O. B. Hardison at 8-3151.

Tar Heels Seek To Please Homecoming Alumni, Upset Oddsmakers And Volunteers

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Tennessee brings its single wing to Kenan Stadium this afternoon for a two-hour stand during which time the Volunteers will oppose Carolina before a Homecoming Day crowd of some 35,000.

The visitors from Knoxville, who are currently sporting a 3-1-1 record, have been installed as slight favorites to hand the Tar Heels their fourth loss in seven games.

Coach Jim Hickey's team comes into day's play fresh from a 21-19 victory over Wake Forest last Saturday. In this contest the Carolina ground game, while not more productive than it was in the victory over State, had excellent success considering the condition of the field.

Good Shape

Both of the teams should be in good physical condition since the Tar Heels have had no recent injuries and the Vols have several players returning to their lineup who have been out for the past several weeks.

Carolina will still be without the services of halfbacks Gib Carson but he has not played in the last two games so Hickey has had time to make the necessary adjustments.

Unfortunately for the Tar Heels Coach Bowden Wyatt will have the services of three veteran linemen today who did not see action last Saturday. Guards Wayne Grubb and Joe Lukowski are listed as probable starters along with tackle Joe Schaffer who has been out since the Georgia Tech contest.

All the seniors in the Carolina lineup today can remember back a couple of years ago when Tennessee came to play Carolina on another Homecoming Day. That afternoon the Vols crushed the Tar Heels 35-0 to extend their winning streak over Carolina to nine straight. Last season, however, the Heels broke this string with a 21-7 victory.

Big Scores

Carolina has a long way to go before it can even the score with Tennessee. Over the years the Volunteers have built up an 18-9-1 margin and have defeated the Heels by scores of 35-6, 27-0, 41-14, 48-7, and 20-0 in the last decade.

If the Tar Heels are to come out on top this afternoon they will undoubtedly need to have a dry field in order to exploit their passing game. This phase of the Carolina offense was almost non-existent in the Wake contest as the Heels gained only 28 yards through the air.

This off day in the aerial department knocked the Tar Heels from first to fourth in the conference's per-game passing statistics. Carolina has proved it can throw the ball, however, and with quarterbacks like Cummings and Ray Farris the Heels have the potential to pass if nothing else.

Tar Heel Lineup

Hickey will send the same team against the Volunteers that he started last week in Winston-Salem. John Schroeder and Al Goldstein will most likely be the number one pair of offensive ends. The interior line should be manned by Don Stallings, John Stunda, Frank Riggs, Paul Russell, and Rip Hawkins.

In the backfield Hickey has quite a selection to choose from but halfbacks Wade Smith, Skip Clement, Milam Wall, and Moyer Smith along with fullbacks Bob Elliott, Don Klochak, and Joe Davies will do the majority of the work.

Co-captain Wade Smith, even though he missed the South Carolina game, is the Tar Heels rushing leader with 192 yards to his credit, 47 more than Klochak who is in second place.

Everett Paper Picks

Tar Heels Over Vols

Everett Dorm's occasional newspaper picked the Tar Heels to win over the Tennessee Volunteers by a score of 15 to 7.

A reporter for the Everett paper said the picks had always proved fairly accurate in the past.

The first edition of the paper was published this week. The next publication date is uncertain and according to reports it may hinge on the outcome of the game.

UNC Monogram Club Slates Open House

The UNC Monogram Club will hold an open house at the Monogram Club after the Tennessee game. All former letter winners, alumni, students and friends of the University are invited.

The Monogram Club is an organization of varsity letter winners on campus. Any letterman may become an active member.

INFIRMARY

Majors Throws, Runs

By C. J. UNDERWOOD

Homecoming fans might wish they hadn't come home if Tennessee performs the way the experts say it will in today's clash with the Tar Heels.

That's a sour note to begin on, but it can't be denied that Carolina, who has already dropped three games to some highly capable football teams, will be up against its stiffest challenge of the year today.

Record Deceiving

The Volunteers own a moderately impressive 3-1-1 record, but a look at their previous opponents makes it look much better. They shut out a powerful Auburn eleven who eventually defeated Georgia Tech when it was ranked third in the country. The score of the Auburn-Vol battle was 3-0.

Tennessee also played Tech and took its only loss in that one by a close 14-7 count.

The Vols' other wins came over Mississippi State 22-6, and Chattanooga 23-0. They held a strong Alabama team to a 7-7 deadlock.

Single Wing Featured

This is a team that runs from the single wing on just about every play and, according to Tar Heel scout Ed Fullerton, the '59 Tennessee aggregation has "good speed, is very alert, and highly aggressive." Since the Tar Heels have managed only one victory over the Volunteers in the last ten years, it is evident that these three ingredients seem to characterize Tennessee football.

When the ball is snapped in the single wing it goes immediately to the tailback. He stands deep in the backfield when receiving the snap, forcing the opponent to ready himself for a pass at any moment.

Tennessee's tailback, Billy Majors, is termed by Fullerton as a "very dangerous thrower, but a more dangerous runner." Majors has attempted only 16 passes but has completed 10 for 62.5 per cent.

Glenn Glass is Majors' most prominent running mate, says Fullerton. Other standouts for the Vols, according to Fullerton, are Mike LaSorsa, the "best all-around end we will see this year," and Jim Cartwright, a linebacker who has intercepted two passes, returning them 54 yards.

Tough Defense

The Volunteers have only accumulated 62 points in their five games, but a strong kicking game has been the key in limiting opponents to a slim total of 27. Gene Etter has punted 23 times for a 43.7 average, easily one of the top marks in the nation.

Most of the Tennessee statistics are unbelievably out of proportion with the 3-1-1 record. For example, the Vols total offense is a meager 806 yards while Carolina has almost doubled that figure with 1538 to their credit.

The Vols like to do it the easy way; by intercepting passes, collecting fumbles, and kicking the opponent into submission. It's very likely statistics will mean very little today.

G. M. SLATE

Activities in Graham Memorial today are: 4:30-5:00, "After The Game" Party; Rendezvous; 8:00 — Petite Dramatique; Main Lounge; 8:00-12:00, Free Juke Box Dance, Rendezvous.

Marching Tar Heels To Welcome Alumni

The Marching Tar Heels, under the direction of Herbert W. Fred, have planned a special program for the homecoming game this afternoon.

They will say welcome home to all alumni and friends of the University by going into the formation HOME to the tune of Auld Lang Syne.

From here the band will take the alumni and friends to various places on the campus. The band will form a gigantic hypodermic needle and operate it to the tune of "I've Got You Under My Skin."

To the music of a nursery rhyme the band will form a diaper and then fold to the tune of "There'll Be Some Changes Made."

The musicians will come up with a Treble clef formation as they play "Siempre Fidelis." As a salute to all law students and law alumni on Law Day the band will form "Top Hat and Cane" as they play "Little White Lies." The Homecoming queen and her court will be presented as the band forms a street intersection to the music of "Standing on the Corner Watching All the Girls Go By."

YOUR GMAB

Plans Big Weekends

By HENRY MAYER

"Thanks to an increased appropriation, the GMAB Social Committee will be able to provide students with really top-flight entertainment attractions," Committee Chairman Hal Miller has announced.

As evidence of the committee's intentions, plans are in the works for two "big" weekends, one this winter, and the other in the spring. These will be all campus concert and dance affairs, with the distinct possibility of Ahmad Jamal headlining the show.

The main function of the Social Committee is to provide weekend social activities for the entire campus. Ann Lucas, chairman, has stated that "the committee hopes to sponsor some type of event each and every weekend throughout the year."
