Van Doren Image Shattered

By MARGARET GWATHMEY
What do YOU think of Charles Van Doren? Here are some of the reactions around the campus.
Nancy Combes, editor of Carolina Quarterly: Here is an intellectual and an individual that suddenly rose an stimulated a trend toward wider education and a broader background. I hope that now that he as an individual has failed, that his movement away from specialization in education won't suffer. I would like to know the limits of his knowledge.
Walter Arndt, Professor of Russian: It shattered me. We have been talking about it all day. Van Doren has been a role model of an outstanding profession, one of the last the American public was being cynical about. People in education are not involved in big money, and he put them into the limelight for the first time. The money he could get this way corrupted one of the most charming representatives of the intellectuals in America. He should not have made a scandal. I have compassion for the man. But it is an unfortunate coincidence that he attracted public sympathy at a time crucial to the emergence of the intellectual as a public hero.
Ray Fennell, graduate: Van Doren did the right thing; it's just too bad he waited so long to do it. I thought something funny was going on all the time. He should have given a lot more thought earlier to his statement, "The truth is the only thing with which a man can live." He should have thought more deeply about going along with the fix in the first place. He has known for three years now that the truth would come out.

Margaret Goldsborough, junior: I was greatly disappointed in him for lying in court. However, I think that the TV program officials believe that quiz shows were just a form of entertainment and were not aware of the moral implications.
Henry Mayer, freshman: It's sad to realize that the man who won the respect of the nation for a display of intellectual prowess was only playing a role in a cleverly staged drama. Although Van Doren's confession was quiet poignant and moving, a man of his calibre and background should not have allowed himself to become involved in such deceitful proceedings. By the way, why hasn't Elfrida Van Nardroff been subpoenaed?
Mary Alice Rowlette, senior: I can't honestly believe him when he said he did it to promote intellectuals. I think he did it for the money — more than he could ever have hoped to have made otherwise. I can see why he would take part in a fix. As for his perjury, I can't condone that. But I think he was a scared man when he lied.
Walter Spearman, professor of journalism: I'm really disillusioned — I liked him. What bothers me is that the public had built him up and admired him as a staunch American character. I'm shocked and surprised that he was guilty.
Mimi Smith, junior: He has destroyed the faith placed in him from all phases of American life. I don't think he should get his teaching position back at Columbia. I do think the TV shows could be returned on CBS.

Cugat Saw Quiz Show As 'Pretend'

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL
WASHINGTON, (AP) — Rhumba King Xavier Cugat testified yesterday he was coached all the way in winning $16,000 on the "$64,000 Challenge" television quiz show last year.
The dapper, 58-year-old orchestra leader said he didn't give all the facts on his appearance on the program to the New York district attorney's office. But he said he did tell the truth about it later to a Grand Jury.
Cugat's appearance before a House Commerce Subcommittee investigating charges of rigging of TV quiz shows was a prelude to the questioning of Mert Koplin, an associate producer of the "Challenge."
The purveyor of Latin American rhythm, who said he is in the 76 per cent income tax bracket, named Koplin as having fed him all the questions and answers on the now dead Columbia Broadcasting System show.
The subcommittee also made a start toward checking on John Ross, manager of 12-year-old Patty Duke, and the young lady herself. Now a New York stage performer, Patty gathered in $32,000 from the "Challenge" show answering questions about popular music.
Ross took the witness stand. But the subcommittee granted his request to be heard in a closed session, on his plea that what he said might defame or injure someone.
Patty, a pretty little miss with wavy brown hair down to her shoulders, dressed in white blouse and gray jumper, sat at one end of the subcommittee table in the House Caucus Room while a film was run off.
It showed the round in which she and another young stage star, Eddie Hodges, reached the $64,000 mark. Each answered all the questions and they split the money.
After the movie, Ross and Patty were questioned in a two-hour closed meeting.
In contrast with Monday's dramatic hearing when Charles Van Doren admitted he went along with deck stacking on the NBC "Twenty One" program, there were some empty seats for today's public testimony.
Cugat, logged out in an expensive looking brown suit with a yellow and black plaid waistcoat, said that he got all the questions and answers in advance and:
"I did it strictly, strictly for publicity."
Now, he said, he knows the public was deceived, and "I wish I'd never gone on for 60 million dollars."
"At that time," he said, "I was thinking I was just giving a show."
A day or so before he went on the program, he said, Koplin came to his apartment and went over (See CUGAT, page 3)

THE CAROLINA GENTLEMEN will be presenting a concert, different from the one they ordinarily give, in the Rendevous Room of GM, 7-9 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 7.

One of the features at this concert will be their instrumental talents: Mike McClister at the piano, Scott Makepeace on the drums, and Tony Salinger with his steel guitar. Bill Whittenton also will sing with the group.
In the future the Gentlemen hope to record a new song which they are presently working on and make a tour to the North. Their tour will include radio and TV appearances, as well as concerts at various colleges.

IFC's 5 Point Program To Raise Scholarship

Supreme Court Hears Back-To-Work Debate

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
WASHINGTON, (AP) — The Supreme Court listened today as government and steel union lawyers debated the legality of a back-to-work order. Then it began pondering a decision that will influence the course of the historic steel strike and the future of the Taft-Hartley law.
There was no indication when the high court may hand down its decision, but it was not expected to delay long with the steel mill shutdown 112 days old.
Fighting the back-to-work order issued by a lower court, Union Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg said that in enacting the Taft-Hartley law Congress "passed the buck to the Supreme Court to break strikes."
Replying for the government,

The Inter Fraternity Council Monday night passed resolutions designed to improve pledge scholarship.
The resolutions, prepared by the Scholarship committee chaired by Ben Geer Keyes, read:
"1. Require each pledge to attend a study hall (2 hour minimum) four days a week
"2. Require each pledge to contact his instructors several times during the semester and report his progress and any comments by his instructors to the fraternity scholarship chairman.
"3. Allow no pledge to live in the house until he has obtained a "C" average.
"4. Check the high school grades of each pledge to find out what trouble to expect and then start at once to help boys with weak subjects.
"5. Have each pledge list the courses with which he is having difficulty and then have those activities capable of tutoring to sign up for each pledge."
The resolutions were presented as "Suggestions to each fraternity concerning the improvement of pledge scholarship." As resolutions these suggestions are not legally binding upon the fraternities of the IFC.
However, it was felt that in view of the new IFC rule which allows pledges only two semesters in which to make his "C" average, houses which have a scholarship problem would find these ideas useful.
At the recommendation of IFC President Ashe Kuntum the IFC voted to look into having a charity concert this year.
Exum said the executive committee of the IFC had considered ways to improve relations with the University and the community, and he asked the IFC to give the matter some consideration.

KKG To Hold Open House

Kappa Kappa Gamma will hold its first formal open house this Saturday from 3 to 5 p.m.
The sorority has issued a blanket invitation to anyone in the Chapel Hill area who may wish to attend, as well as specific invitations to the administration and the churches.
Official hostesses will greet visitors at the door and conduct them on a tour of the group's newly remodeled house.

Honor Council Investigates Fraudulent Bid

The Men's Honor Council is conducting a full-scale investigation concerning the sale of counterfeit bids to Friday's Kingston Trio concert.
Approximately fifteen crudely printed bogus tickets were detected at the door, and the holders questioned. These people were admitted to the performance after everyone else had been seated.
"Of the best of my knowledge," stated Germans Club President Jonathan Yardley, "no students holding the counterfeit bids were guilty of falsifying them themselves."
Although the Germans Club does not plan to press charges, the matter now rests with the Honor Council. Council Chairman Hugh Patterson has stated that no decision has been reached as to the nature of the penalties, if any.

Van Doren Casts Shadow On US, Capitalism

By ADELAIDE CROMARTIE
The Van Doren incident casts another shadow on capitalism and the United States, according to Max R. Grossman, speaker at the Press Club Monday night.
Grossman, a cultural planning officer for the United States Information Agency, was connected with the Department of Journalism at Boston University from 1929 to 1947, and headed it from 1939 to 1947. He is an expert on Austrian and German newspapers.
Foreign countries will view the Van Doren story as they did the Little Rock incident.
But the USIA, according to Grossman, will not try to hide this story. Truth comes first with the Agency and foreign countries will learn of Van Doren through accurate information supplied by the Agency.
Grossman mentioned foreign service job opportunities with USIA noting that a B.A. degree plus a Masters degree or five years of newspaper experience are prerequisites for application.
Forty out of every 1000 applicants interviewed are hired by USIA. These forty go through a three month training program in Washington after which they are sent to their first foreign post for one year. After a year's stay in a second post, they become regular members of the USIA staff.
Grossman encouraged students to take at least two foreign languages since their chances of going abroad are about 2 to 1. He underlined the importance of a USIA applicant's mastery of languages.
Also he stressed adaptability as a must in the USIA employee's job of explaining "why Americans act like Americans."
Grossman was accompanied by Anthon A. Covins, Personnel Division of USIA. The two had interviewed students for USIA positions earlier in the day.

The deadline for entries in the Yackety Yack Beauty Contest is today instead of next Wednesday as announced yesterday in the Daily Tar Heel. Entries may be turned in at the Yack office or to Joanne Hudson.

Entries Due Nov. 14

Dook Float Deadline Extended

The deadline for float and queen candidate entries in the Beat Dook parade and beauty contest has been extended from Nov. 7 to Nov. 14.
Sponsored by Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, the traditional parade will begin at 2 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 24, and will consist of floats from fraternities, sororities, dormitories and various student organizations.
For each float entry, one girl may be entered in the Beat Dook queen contest.
The beauty contestants will be judged, Friday, Nov. 29, following a dinner at the Pika house, by a committee composed of faculty members and local businessmen and women.

After the parade, the fraternity will present a large trophy to the best float in the entire parade and three others to the best in each of the fraternity, sorority and dormitory divisions. Float judging will be also by faculty members and local businessmen.
Jim Copeland, parade chairman, urges students to turn in float and queen entries, as soon as possible, to him at the Pika house or at 308 Alexander.
