Don't Vote Today On E. Carolina

Don't vote today.

We don't need responsible student leaders who will stand up for what is right. We do not need those who will further the interests of the University and make it a better place for those who follow us. We do not need leaders who will carry the problems of the University to our legislators and strive to obtain the results that will make the University a university per se, rather than just a group of buildings set on a lovely campus.

We do not need student leaders who will point up to the administration and the faculty the shortcomings and needs of the uni-VCINITY.

Students do not need to exercise the right they have of choosing their leaders, Everyone should try to be a leader; we need no

Students should not try to improve conditions at the University by choosing competent leaders who will be assets to the Uni- have a right to be interested. It versity and to the community-

We do not need those who will my to profit by the mistakes of their predecessors. We do not need those who will try to supplant old and outmoded methods with newer and more workable ones.

We do not need leaders who will encourage individuals to be more than just individuals, but persons who feel a sense of responsibility to their class and to their university.

We do not need new Honor Council members who will strive to strengthen what the Honor System stands for, We do not need those who will strive to bring about more impartial judgment of their fellow students Don't vote today.

Never Knocked Out

We take this opportunity to take one more parting shot at all people involved in keeping the amendment calling for a re-districting without. This is not a time for of Honor Council elections off the ballot continuing a program if it does today. In particular, citations should be given not deserve being continued. This to the members of the Student Council for the manner in which they handled the case. Chairman Erwin Fuller should be at the head of the line with the rest of the members playing follow the leader.

It is still clear to us that according to the wording in the Student Constitution of this University that the Student Legislature was correct in directing the Elections Board to place this measure on the ballot for the Fall Flections. The reason they are not is because of the action of the Student Council and its support by Student Body President Charlie Gray. We maintain that the Student Council should never have heard this case, as it clearly states in the Constitution the rules under which an amendment may be presented. These tules appear to have been followed by the Student Legislature. They have not been followed by the Student Council.

Thus another glorious chapter is written crity in an area made increasingly United States. into the judicial history of the University Oft knocked down, but never knocked out, we will rise from the canyes and lead the way for a special referendum. Mr. Fuller has not seen the last of us.

D. B. Y.

So What?

- The nation is at war.
- The nation is losing the war, badiy,
- The nation must exert a vastly greater effort

The Daily Tar Heel

The official student publication of the Publication Boa d of the University of North Carolina where it

which tires

opened as dones

BARRY ZASLAV

is published daily except Monday and examination periods and summer terms. Entered as second class matter in the post office in Chapel Hill, N. C., under the act of March B. 1870. Subscription rates: $4.00 per semester, $7.00 per

The Daily Tar Heel is printed by the News Inc., Carrboro, N. C.

Advertising Manager

Subscription Manager

Editor DAVIS B. YOUNG Associate Editor FRANK CROWTHER Assistant Editor RON SHUMATE News Editors DEE DANIELS EDWARD NEAL RINER Sports Editor ELLIOTT COOPER Feature Editor MARY ALICE ROWLETTF Coed Editor JOSIE MORRIS Photo Editors BILL BRINKHOUS PETER NESS

Nor would a Methodist request Presbyterian advice regarding Duke, thinking Flora MacDonald ought to be enough for their conthey please, and they should have no outside interference in doing so.

But a spotlight today is on an educational institution as to which all of the people of North Carolina is a State institution supported by the sacrifices of all of the taxpayers of all of the state.

the selection.

Yet, if they will, these trustees, fortified with the knowledge that they were appointed by the Governor with the approval of the State Senate to represent all of the people of North Carclina, can withstand these pressures.

This is not a time for rewarding the faithful simply because of their faithfulness. This is not a time for promoting within the ranks if there are better men is not a time for doing anything not in the best interest of all of people of all of the state.

versal struggle for survival.

backward by the continuous ex-it attempt to be a university in a poorstate which is not providing adequately for its already-existing should complement the State sys- this already devoted NATO ally, tem of higher education by fillmany grave needs.

cloud of complacency.

Yet, all need not be dark, because vast stores of human and natural resources lie dormant under that cloud, and East Carolina College can be as a light set upon a hill penetrating that cloud and inspiring all Eastern North Carolinians onward and upward to-

A realization of that responsibility can transform Eastern North Carolina into an area of enlightened progress, an area able to support itself, an area able to afford good government, and, what is more, an area worthy of its

That responsibility, however, first must be realized by the trustees of East Carolina College. They must lift their eyes beyond the bounds of the campus, the coast, and the plains. They must, if for but this brief moment, be aware of the world, and they must select a man equal to its chal-

Raymond Mason Taylor

If an Episcopalian were to suggest a certain policy for Meredith College, Baptists probably would not hestitate to reply, adding, 'And we don't need any help from

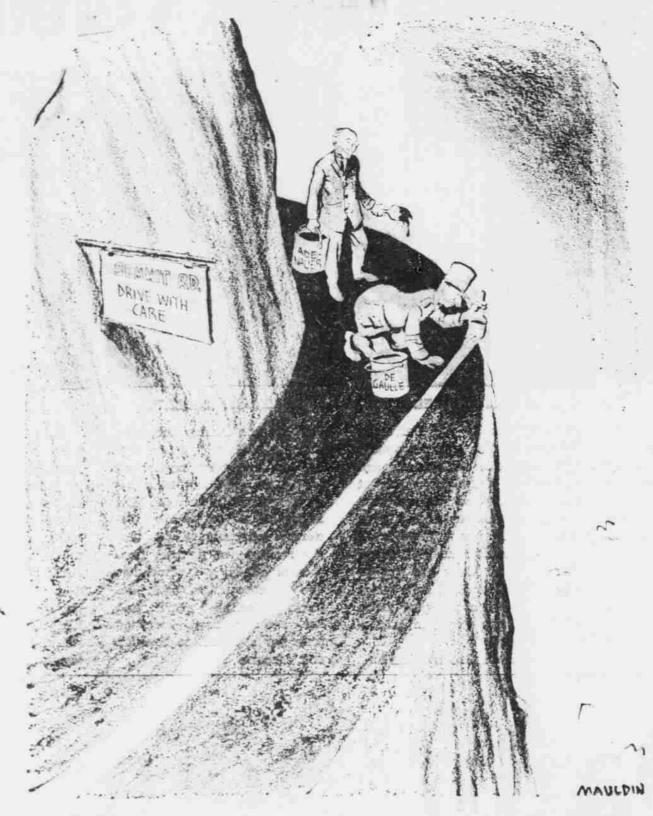

And all of this is proper, because each of these colleges is a private institution. The students, faculty, alumni, and supporters have a right to operate them as

The institution is East Carolina College at Greenville. Its trustees are seeking a new president. Their task is not an easy one. Indeed. it is rendered especially difficult because some of the college's students, faculty members, and alumni, and a few eastern businessmen, newspapermen, and politicians seem to think that they, and they only, have a stake in state's entire system of higher ed- fied or broken.

This is the humble plea of an Eastern North Carolinian who with pride in its past, concern for its ui present, faith in its future, and love for its people hopes to re-ED SCHENCK turn and settle at home.

Herblock is away due to illness

1959 The Pulifter Publishing Ca. 51 Louis Post-Dispatch

Perspectives By Yardley

Jonathan Yardley

The "new diplomacy" has come of age.

Until 1952, relations between nations were conducted by and large, by subordinate officials of In selecting a president, the the involved countries and by diplomatic correstrustees should consider with all pondence on lower levels. The most important peoseriousness the purpose of the ple in the "old diplomacy" were the ambassadors institution entrusted to their core, and the career diplomats. They were the nation's They should consider its curpose representatives to other nations, and it was enough relative to the overall purpose of them, and through their communication of the public education, relative to the leader's wishes, that foreign relations were solidiucation, and relative to the needs Now, utilizing the embryo of the new pattern of the state as a whole. More im- given genesis by John Foster Dulles, the nations portantly, they should consider its of the world have changed the entire character purpose in a world where ideas of international relations. The subordinates no longand knowledge of their effective er are the most crucial communicators; the leaders application will determine the ani- of the countries are their own voices.

This trend has been explosively dramatized by the announcement by President Eisenhower two East Carolina College should weeks ago that he will make a nine nation tour not be a provincial institution. It beginning on December 4. This tour will cover areas should not be a patron of medio- of Asia never before visited by a President of the

On December 4 the President will be in Rome odus of its finest minds. It should to visit Segni of Italy and Pope John. Italy, one not be satisfied to be second-rate. of Europe's largest countries and one which trades Nor, on the other hand, should with the U.S. in great volume, hopes to gain a larger voice in summit preparations; if it does not. trouble may be in store for what has been to date one of our most trusted alliances.

University. It should not try to in Ankara. The recent history of Turkish-American On December 6 he will visit Menderes of Turkey relations has been a good one; at the moment Russia is pressuring her about accepting an IRBM Rather, East Carolina College base. The President must encourage and strengthen

On December 7 he will visit Pakistan's Ayub ing a need in an area which has in Karachi; this important ally is in economic straits of incredible depth and must be bolstered. From Karachi he goes to Kabul in Afghanistan to talk Indeed, Eastern North Carolina with Daoud, whose close ties with Russian aid make is an area covered by a dark this neutral nation's friendship a necessity.

Ferhaps the most important visit of all takes place from December 9-13 when the President wiil be in New Delhi with India's Fremier Nehru, This immense and impoverished land is threatened from the North by Communist raids, and must be given firmer guarantees of support from the United States and NATO. To lose the sometimes wavering friendship of this nation may be to lose Asia.

On December 14 the President will be in Tehran. for Talks with the Shah of Iran. This oil-rich, strongward a new realization of their ly pro-Western country is bordered by the Soviet responsibility toward themselves. Union and Iraq, and finds pressures constantly to at least a good one

YOU ARRIVED JUST IN TIME WITH

THE FOOD TO REVIVE CHURCHY

DIRE NEWS.

DID BEETHOVEN

EVER ROLL A

GAME?

THREE HUNDRED

heavy. She is one of the most important all es to a federal district court to obwe have, and also must be given guarantees of tain an issuance of the injunction

The President's next stop will be Athens for conferences with Karamanlis of Greece. This ancient land, long a devoted friend of the United States. is involved in a bitter imbroglio with Great Britian over rights of Cyprus. The President must carry some tentative plans with him for solutions to this

On December 19 Eisenhower journeys to Paris for three days of meetings with DeGaulle of France, Macmillian of Britian, and Adenauer of West Germany. The outcome of these meetings will be crucial. DeGaulle and Adenauer, still feeling slighted over what they consider lack of consultation with the Western powers, must be pacified and must be made to understand that they are considered links as important as any in the allied chain:

On December 22 the President closes out his trip with a visit to the King of Morocco in Rabat. This former French protectorate is now raising the issue of United States bases, and is desirous of removing them. This strategic country, located opposite the Rock of Gibraltar, is a vital key in our defense and must not be allowed to fall out. It can be retained only by friendship and offers of

All of the countries which the President will visit have been, in the last ten or fifteen years. greatly dependent on United States aid. This is. for the most part, no longer true. They are beginning to be independent, self-sufficient nations which wish to assert this new-found strength, and it is the purpose of the President's trip to bring them more deeply into the international vendetta currently on stage.

In this age of transportation nad communication the new diplomacy may be the only sane method of international relations. Dulles, father of the concept, used it sometimes wisely and some times poorly. He was a trailblazer, but his own indecisiveness was a major hurdle to his own success. If Eisenhower is to be successful in this venture he must remain constant in his views and in his intentions; if he wavers, as he and Dulles did in the past, the mission will have been a failure

Also contingent upon the success of the mission is Eisenhower's place in history. Formerly a weak President, he has used the inability to run for reelection to do things which he had not dared to do before and has consequently raised the world's opinion of himself. This venture, if successful, could change his Fresidency from a mediocre one

THEY'RE TRYIN' TO GET

THE LOCATION OF OUR

CHEESE MINES!

IT'S AWFUL! THESE

SEALS ARRIVED HERE

SAYIN' THIS IS THE !

YOU MEAN IN BOWLING?

GOOD GRIEF, HOW IN THE WORLD SHOULD I KNOW?

Mary Stewart Baker

Steel Strike

The steel girders that appear to hold together the "health and safety" seams of the United States are slowly being dissolved by the binding steel strike. The situation, which should be of interest to us all, has already been given notable attention by Jonathan Yardley, areas to be malfante to a

In order to augment Yardley's discussion. I think it is of the greatest importance that we all understand, in a broad outline, the Taft Hartley emergency injunction as applied by President Eisenhower in his approach to the steel problem.

The Taft-Hartley injunction itself and a review of its use in the past was included in a TIME MAGAZINE article several weeks ago; Time, then, has suggested to me the idea and necessity of discussing the law here.

Everyone should be fairly familiar with the purpose of in injunction; it serves as an interruption; it doesn't attempt to settle the dispute. The interruption provided is an 80-day period, during which time labor and management are offered the chance to work toward a new contract through special negotiations. During this time, strikers return to the mills

When President Eisenhower invoked the Taft-Hartley device on October 9, he set into motion a law explainable most easily by three steps.

(1) After the President decides to use the emergency provision, he is first required to appoint a fact-finding committee to evaluate the effects of the strike and any possibilities for solution.

(2) If the appointed committee reports that there is no prospect from the court

"cease - and - desist" injunction, strikers are ordered back to their work for an 80-day period. During this time, while production is restored, the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service attempts to bring some kind of agreement between labor and management. After 75 days, a secret election is conducted; this election gives the workers one last chance to accept the terms offered by management. If labor does not accept the offer, the injunction is lifted and the workers are free to resume their strike.

These three steps then are a dry outline of the so-called "Interruption" provided for in the Taft-Hartley law, Now, let's turn to an exemplification of the steps as shown through the steel happenings of the past month and

(1) President Eisenhower, invoking the law to protect "national health and safety" on Oct. 6, appointed the required fact-finding committee. The committee presented facts, indicating that no solution was in sight.

(2) The Attorney General was then sent to Federal District Court in the jurisdiction of the strike; This was the court of Federal District Judge Herbert P. Sorg in Pittsburgh. On Oct. 21 Judge Sorg agreed that the strike was impending "national health and safety," therefore issuing the in-

(3) The final step in the Taft-Hartley device - that of bargaining - is in the process now. It is not my intention here to predict the outcome of the negotiations.

NOT OUR

CHEESE MINES!?

THOUGHT YOU WERE AN

AUTHORITY ON BEETHOVEN?

HULZ

Neither Black nor White, Mostly Shades Of Gray

Norman B. Smith

My route to church takes me on a muddy track through the new housing development. It used to be a path through the woods.

Gaudily in the sun reflected plastic coverings over piles of lumber and insulation, unnatural, gaudily and unseemly as the bleach-haired, rougefaced, spangle-dressed carnival wench. Mud, mud the blood of wounded soil clung to my feet, stuck on as stubbornly as swarms of leaches. Gone the Power equipment dociley awaited the work day morrow, resting there on haunches seemingly suveying cuts, roads, ditches they had consumed and fills, dirtpiles they had excreted. From beneath the ditch-tops issued periodic metallic pings, complaints of newly laid waterlines.

I paused long, trying unsuccessfully to translate a dialogue being carried on between the bobbing and swishing trunk of a lone sapling, mangled and rudely bent over because it had grown there in the way, between it and the dribbling of now useless underground water being diverted by a concrete drain tile. The two conversants faced each other across the length of a rock-walled ditch. Much in common had they, these two elements of the woods - tree and spring - both unwanted in the housing development. Bewildered and sympathetic, a bird remained to listen when I turned and walked on.

KEEP OUT say hurriedly painted signs nailed asiant a ross doorways of the new apartments Chains and flambeaus block the roadways, too, A young couple tiptoed round one of the units, trying to peer through windows, dust laden, opaqued by putty stains and glued-on papers. They and I) should have known better, for there was no welcome there. The woods would have invited you as with gentle noises and soft configurations of leaves or bare-limbs. It would have discriminated not. friend to all who wanted its friendship. But when it is divested of its trees, has its soil torn off and of solution, the President then gouged out, is covered with abrupt and unvielding must send the Attorney General buildings, then its identity changes and it belongs to someone who wants to keep people out until he is good and ready to have them come in, and then they have to pay; not only that, but live by (3) If the court issues the his rules or be sent away,

> These apartments, though, will have within their weatherstripped interiors thermostatic heat, ovens/ refrigerators so the food can be just right, soft beds and chairs, entertaining worry-dispeling television sets, all sorts of really unnecessary but ex tremely comfortable paraphernalia. And the forest doesn't offer that. It only offers to share its heat and cold, hunger and fulness, wetness and dryness

> Sign up for one of those nice apartments soon if they aren't already taken; even so, you might get a good position on the waiting list. Don't feel badly about this. Our ancestors from further back than we can trace have been trading freedom for comfort. Except the hermits that go off and live in dirty, cold old caves and such places, and they of course, are insane.

Essay Contest

Subject: "What is wrong with America and what can we do to correct it?"

Requirements: All essays must be typewritten, double-spaced and signed by the author. Name, address and phone number must be included. Length: 500-1500 words.

Prizes: There will be eight (8) prizes: 1st Prize-one $25 RANCH HOUSE Steak Certificate

2nd Prize-one $15 RANCH HOUSE Steak 3rd Prize-one $10 RANCH HOUSE Steak Certificate

4th through 8th Prize - one RANCH HOUSE Buffet Certificate

(These prizes have been donated by Cactus Ted's RANCH HOUSE of Chapel Hill, one of the South's most distinctive restaurants. The certificates may be redeemed as meals at the RANCH HOUSE on or before March 15, 1960.

Eligibility: All students, faculty members and employees of the Consolidated University of North Carolina and or any member of the Chapel Hill community, excepting staff members of The Daily Tar Heel and Ranch House employers.

Judges: Dr. Alexander Heard, Dean of the Graduate School, UNC; Davis B. Young. Editor, The Daily Tar Heel: Frank H. Crowther, Associate Editor, The Daily Tar Heel. The decisions of these judges are

Deadline: All manuscripts must be received or postmarked not later than midnight, December 1, 1959. The Daily Tar Heel reserves the right to print any or all essays. Winners will be announced on or before December 19, 1959.

Send all essays to: Daily Tar Heel Essay Contest, Box 1080, Chapel Hill, N. C.