No Ivory Tower For Star Phyllis Curtin

"An artist must experience life, and not live in an ivory tower," says New York City Opera star Phyllis Curtin, who's split personality life exemplifies her belief.

Many personalities have hobbies, even strange ones, but hardly anyone can boast of such an unusual and vast assortment as Miss Curtin. The glamorous soprano, who will appear in the UNC production of "La Traviata," is an accomplished violinist, electrical engineer, political scientist, archeologist and photographer.

FIRE SCARE

came on at the hall ends, girls flocked to the light like a moth to a flame, rushing to get a spot under the light to continue their intellectual pursuits.

One girl shouted, "What a perfect time for a pantie raid!" Another female voice moaned, "And I've got two tests tomorrow."

Coeds resembled modern Abe Lincolns, as they studied by candlelight and flashlights. "Damn," muttered one girl, "my Eveready batteries just lost their ninth life."

One coed, who had just bleached her hair, was disappointed because no one could tell it in the dark.

A few girls chatted with the friendly firemen who invited them to the station house where electricity still prevailed.

Girls scrambled to borrow wind-up alarm clocks for the morning's awakening.

Miss Curtin studied violin in her home town of Clarksburg, W. Va., and at Wellesley College, before she began formal voice training there.

At college she also studied political science and eventually received her master's degree in it.

Needs Funds

After graduation she needed funds to continue her voice lessons. "I couldn't find a job in the field in which I had majored," explained Miss Curtin, "but happened to fall into a job of which I knew absolutely nothing."

This was an assistant job as electrical engineer for the War Production Board in Boston.

The job lasted until several concerts throughout New England sent Miss Curtin on the road to becoming a New York City Opera prima donna—with the exception of a four-months respite, when she went along on an archeological expedition to Peru.

Keeps Record

To keep a record of her trip Miss Curtin took up photography and became so accomplished at it that several of her photos were later published. Her photography ability was a surprise to her husband, Eugene Cook, himself a famous photographer.

Some have suggested that Miss Curtin is a dual personality. Those who know her well vouch that this is really not true. The best explanation seems to lie in the words of her colleagues: "Phyllis Curtin is a woman who has found the secret of counting 25 hours in the day!"

-Inauguration-

"supporting and supported by a stronger economy." He campaigned through three difficult elections with education as his battlecry.

"I dedicate my public life to the proposition that . . . education must be of a quality which is second to none," he said. "If it takes more taxes to give our children this quality education, we must face that fact."

He called on the citizens of North Carolina to support his program.

One Of 'Best Dressed' For 1960

Next 1st Lady Fashionable

NEW YORK (UPI)—Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy, whose ultra-chic wardrobe became an issue in her husband's presidential campaign, Thursday won top place on the list of best dressed women for 1960.

The wife of the president-elect was one of 12 women cited by the New York Couture Group based on its yearly poll of fashion writers and columnists.

Some critics during the campaign accused Mrs. Kennedy of spending too much on clothes and of favoring European designers.

'Best Dressed List'

The "best dressed list" gave no estimate of her expenditures but it noted that the designers she liked were Americans Norman Norell, Ben Zuckerman, Oleg Cassini and the custom dressmakers of the New York department store, Bergdorf Goodman.

Tall, dark-haired Mrs. Kennedy told the press on the day after her husband's election that being a pacesetter in fashion was "at the bottom of the list" of things that she considered important.

Fashion critics ignored this and placed her above such well known fashion plates as Audrey Hepburn, Princess Alexandra of Kent, Mrs. Stavros Niachos and the Queen of Thailand.

From Society

Other women on the top drawer fashion list came mostly from the world of society. They were Vicomtesse Jacqueline de Ribes of Paris; Mrs. Norman K. Winston of New York and Paris; Donna Marella Agnelli, of Turin, Italy.

Mrs. Loel Guinness of Paris and Palm Beach, Fla.; Mrs. Patrick Guinness; Mrs. John Barry Ryan III of New York City, and Mrs. David K. Bruce of Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Kennedy has a mannequin sized figure and clothes tastes that are distinctly American.
