Top Executive Offers Ideas In Interview

By Linda Biser

Top administrator of higher education in North Carolina is President William C. Friday of Chapel Hill.

"President" here has a double meaning. He is not only president of the University of North Carolina, but also of the Consolidated University, which includes North Carolina State College in Raleigh and Woman's College of Greensboro in addition to UNC.

In a recent interview, President Friday commented on major issues and problems.

What's in store for these institutions? Long range goals are planned by decades, Friday said, so in 1970 Consolidated University achievements on each campus should be observable.

President Opposes Recommended Hike

CU President William Friday has consistently opposed increases in tuition or student fees.

On occasions he has pointed out that other land-grant Southern universities cost considerably less than does the Consolidated University (UNC, State, and WC).

President Friday recommended, when the CU's budget requests were first submitted to the State Board of Higher Education, that tuition for out-of-state students be increased by $100 per year, with no increase for North Carolinians.

Budget Commission

The Advisory Budget Commission recommended to the General Assembly that tuition for in-staters be increased by $25 per year, plus the out-of-state raise.

In addition, President Friday points out, if the student union-graduate library proposal is accepted by the legislature ($1 million will come from self-liquidating funds) students will begin having to pay $9 more per year in the form of additional fees, plus an unspecified sum to operate the union.

The new tuitions for North Carolinians and out-of-staters, per year, would be $175 and $600 respectively; student fees would be $113 plus per year.

Primary Duties

One of President Friday's primary duties as head of the CU is to work with the biennium budget proposals.

He and the other CU officers prepared the requests for the Department of Education last fall. The "A" requests—maintaining facilities in their present condition, at the same rate—were approved in full by the Department.

Then the State Board of Higher Education passed judgment on the enrichment budget. The Board cut requests by over 70 per cent for the biennium.

Seriously Jeopardize

Friday answered that, "These several reductions will seriously jeopardize our faculties . . . and do severe damage to the University."

In December Friday appeared before a special meeting of the CU Board of Trustees with a detailed appeal for more money for higher faculty salaries and other CU requests.

The Advisory Budget Commission and Gov. Terry Sanford made their budget recommendation February 9. Part of the budget money cut by the State Board

Friday Once Youngest College President In U. S. Association

When William Clyde Friday was named president of the Consolidated University in October of 1956 he was the youngest such officer in the Association of American Universities.

At the age of 36 Friday was officially made head of the three CU schools after a ten-month period as acting president.

Friday was born in Rapine, Va. in July of 1920. He graduated from the School of Textiles at State College as an honor student.

Navy Duty

After a four-year Navy tour of duty during World War II, Friday came to UNC's Law School, where in 1948 he received his LL.B.

He accepted the job of assistant dean of students at UNC and has been in North Carolina higher education since.

In 1951 former Consolidated

University President Gordon Gray made Friday his assistant, and later CU secretary.

Defense Secretary

Gray left North Carolina in 1955 to become an assistant secretary of defense in the Eisenhower government.

Friday was made acting president in January of 1956, and on October 26 of that year the Board of Trustees approved his appointment as president.

State Campus

He noted the State campus may appear to have a larger building program due to the state-supported experimental stations located there.

Friday likes the idea of a new Carolina student union-graduate library "very much" even if the undergraduate library tentatively plans to seek new quarters after a five-year occupation of the student union building. "The building is designed so its function can be extended," he notes.

WC Chancellor

"Right now we're trying to pick a chancellor for Woman's College," Friday said as he scanned the Greensboro Sunday paper for a story about it. "Sometimes these newspaper people know more about it than we do."

Presently, Friday is exerting his energies to obtain a three million dollar budget for the Consolidated University from the North Carolina General Assembly.

He referred to a voluminous book on his desk which contained the budget report. It will include a seven to nine million dollar increase for maintenance and three million more for increased faculty salaries.

No Effect

He anticipates no adverse effect on the faculty salary increase due to the faculty advertisement supporting integrated theaters in Chapel Hill published recently in the Daily Tar Heel. Conservative elements have rumored this is a troublemaker in obtaining the increase.

Tuition fees have not been increased substantially since 1949, Friday acknowledges. He supports a $100 increase in out-of-state tuition with no increase for North Carolinians.
