HEAD FOOTBALL COACH Jim Hickey talks strategy with some of his players as North Carolina opened spring practice yesterday in Kenan Stadium. A total of 86 players were on hand for the initial session.

Hickey Greeted 86 As Spring Drills Begin

Coach Jim Hickey greeted 86 ACC end; Mike Greenday, Skip Clement, Jim Rice, Fred Mueller, Moyer Smith, Milam Wall, Frank Riggs and John Stunda—all graduated.

Twenty lettermen were on hand for the drills on the hot, humid day in Kenan Stadium. Hickey has said that for the first few days the Tar Heels will stress fundamentals.

Hickey and his club are striving hard for the fall schedule in order to vastly improve the 3-7 record posted during the 1960 campaign. There are several holes he will have to fill during these drills, however.

Hawkins Gone
Gone are Rip Hawkins, last year's All-ACC center; John Schroeder, second team All-

Carolina seems to have several strong spots remaining, despite the loss of the graduating seniors. The quarterback situation boasts three lettermen in Ray Farris, Ward Marslander and John Flournoy. Two lettermen return to the fullback post. Bob Elliott and Joe Davies, two fine runners, are back.

Joe Craver and Gary Turner will fight it out to see who fills Hawkins' shoes at center. Tony Hennessey, John Hegarty and Ben Gallagher return at the tackle slots.

Two Thousand Report To Show Appreciation

By Bob McCall

Approximately 2000 students and townspeople turned out in Woolen Gym yesterday afternoon to voice appreciation for Coach Frank McGuire and his 1960-61 basketball squad.

Down on the court at four o'clock McGuire's cagers were conducting a light drill, and on the sides the UNC cheerleaders were leading the fans in cheers. But it was relatively quiet until David Grigg, president of the student body, introduced McGuire. It was then the Irishman received a thunderous standing ovation.

Grigg read a certificate of appreciation for McGuire and his team drawn up by the University community in which the students and townspeople expressed their gratitude for the services of McGuire for the past nine years and their approval of the "distinction and good sportsmanship" of the team during the past season.

After Grigg read the certificate, Bob Sevier, vice president of the student body, presented it to McGuire.

McGuire made a brief speech in which he expressed appreciation for the certificate and the popular support which it represented.

"This is your team," he said, "and I am your coach." He then pledged his continued best efforts in his role as basketball coach at promoting the highest quality of athletics and sportsmanship at the University.

Swag Grimsley, president of the Carolina Athletic Association, who moderated the proceedings, then introduced three persons from the University and the town who represented appreciation for McGuire and his team.

UNC Athletic Director Chuck Erickson expressed the gratitude of the athletic department. Joseph Augustine, president of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants Association, expressed the appreciation of the merchants and Mayor Pro-Tem F. E. Strowd represented the townspeople in their support.

Tar Babies Face Imps Here Today At 12:05

A strong Duke freshman team comes to town today to battle the Tar Babies in a 12:05 p.m. preliminary to the varsity game. For the Carolina team, it will be the third try against the Blue Imps, who have won the first two contests by wide scores.

Coach Bucky Waters' visitors defeated the Tar Babies by 91-52 before the Christmas holidays, for the worst loss suffered by the Carolina boys. At Duke, the Tars kept the score close until practically the entire team had fouled out of the game, and Duke won by 79-52 as there were only three UNC boys left to play.

The strong arm of the Imp offense has been one Jeff Mullins, a product of Lexington, Ky., who has poured in the points at a rate of better than 25 a game. A 6-3 guard, the high jumping Mullins plays effectively under the basket as well as outside. He has a fine driving jump shot, and is an accomplished rebounder.

Rounding out the lineup for the Dukes is a quartet of other fine scorers. Buzzy Harrison and Bob Jamieson, the forwards, are both strong men under the boards but also have fine shots from outside. Jay Buckley, the lean 6-10 center, was almost shut out in the first game with the Tar Babies, but came back to play a big role from his pivot position in the last win. Billy Ulrich, the little fifth man, has a highly-accurate set shot from behind the circle.

The Tar Babies gained win-number ten of the campaign on Wednesday night against Wake Forest by 89-81. A victory against the Imps would give them a 11-6 record for the season and a 6-3 mark in Big Four play.

Against the Deaclets at Mt. Airy, the men of Coach Ken Rosemond threw up a three-way scoring attack that demolished the highly rated Wake team. Guard Mike Cooke and forward Bryan McSweeney threw in 24 points apiece in a dazzling exhibition, and guard Tommy Ryan tagged along right behind with 23 big points.

Gil Hodges Says Dodgers Are Improved

By FRED DOWN
United Press International

Gil Hodges doesn't often pop off so the Los Angeles Dodgers' National League rivals had two good reasons today to perk up their ears.

First, the veteran first-baseman believes that the 1961 Dodgers will prove stronger than the club that brought Los Angeles a world championship in 1959. And, second, he sees Frank Howard and Duke Snider forming a 1-2 punch that'll produce between 50 and 60 home runs.
