Holmes' Style Is 'Just Music'

By STEVE KNOWLTON
DTH Staff Writer

Writer-singer-guitarist Jake Holmes is entertaining the Rendezvous room - turned coffee house audiences this week with his own brand of music. "It's not jazz, it's not rock, it's not folk. It's just music" is how his backup guitarist Rick Randall describes it. Holmes is the first of a series of coffee house entertainers who are launching the new program at the old Rendezvous Room in the basement of GM.

He appears twice nightly for nearly hour-long shows of original music which ranges from the melancholic to the psychedelic.

He comes on with his classical guitar, corduroy jacket and cable turtle-neck sweater in the semi-darkness of a couple of dim spots and sings, talks, cracks jokes and comments on how the times are a changin'. "To get a girl these days you got to be a rolling stone," he says. "You don't have to have long hair, but you got to be hostile."

Then he sings some more while the audience drinks strong coffee and munches peanuts. The place is vaguely reminiscent of the Bitter End in Greenwich Village where Holmes started six months ago with his original style and wide variety of songs.

The crowds here have been small, almost too small for the performance, but they like him. Most stay for the second show—a completely different set of songs and words.

While sipping hot cider, complete with cinnamon, the audience listens and laughs and, on occasion, thinks a lot. He jokes about social customs.

Then he talks about the fears of growing old. He's but 25 and claims to "have a few good years left," but it seems "you spend your whole life trying to grow up and then one day you find you're dragging your heels."

His last encore, "I Think I'm Showing Signs of Age," brings the thought home well. Even at his 25, the song says, there is realization that facets of youth are regrettably gone forever.

Sophomore and junior girls should sign up for Sorority Spring Rush in the Dean of Womens Office by Friday at noon.

And he has a song called "Dazed and Confused" which is at least as psychedelic as Donovan's "The Trip."

The audience is supposed to relax and enjoy the performance. According to a waitress, you're supposed to "throw the peanut shells on the floor if you want, or leave them on the table. And that goes for cigarette butts and ashes. Most anything you want to do"

One of his favorite songs, "allusions," has just been recorded on Towers label, a division of Capitol Records. "It's out in New York. It should be around here pretty soon," he says.

Holmes studied music at Juillard, Hofstra and Bennington College for Women. "I was the only male student there," he says. "and it was one of the most interesting years I've ever had."

Holmes, said to be "America's newest writer - singer sensation," is on tour at area colleges. Last week, he played at Duke, where crowds were reportedly as small as they are in Carolina. But he says there were almost 500 in Durham his last night there and hopes for and expects the same here before he leaves after Saturday night's shows.
