

Says UNC Grapppler:

Taking Chance Pays

Phil Wanzer, Sophomore Mat Star

By KAREN FREEMAN
DTH Sports Writer

Away meets have proved decisive in the wrestling career of Phil Wanzer, UNC's sophomore starter at 167.

Going into the match with N. C. State, Wanzer was undefeated in regular college competition. He lost that status when defending ACC champion Greg Hicks caught him off guard and made it good for a pin.

Wanzer explained the pin by saying that it's "just the way I wrestle . . . I take chances." But in the next away meet with Duke the following week, his philosophy of always going "out there to pin the fellow" paid off again.

This time Wanzer pinned his opponent in a fast 18 seconds.

He began going out on the mat with the single purpose of trying for the pin when in his first six matches he got six first-period pins. Possibly it just became a habit.

Getting pinned isn't. The pin he suffered at State is his first.

It's almost certain that Wanzer will meet Hicks again in the ACC tournament, and the question is whether or not this second match will be a repeat of the first.

Wrestling coach Sam Barnes doesn't feel that there is very much difference in ability between Hicks and Wanzer, but a big difference in experience, Hicks having a two-year advantage.

Wanzer himself feels that a disadvantage he had against Hicks was his own attitude. He had his status as being undefeated for 1-2 seasons to think about, and Hicks' reputation as ACC champion had more of a negative effect than a positive one on him.

When two wrestlers who are fairly evenly-matched face-off, attitude can determine the match.

He Also Has Trouble Telling Twins Apart

By JOE SANDERS
DTH Sports Writer

It happens often. Someone looks at Ron Miller and asks, "How many times a day do you change your clothes?"

If Ron's in a good mood, he may say he changes 10 of 12 times. Or he may tell them the truth: Ron has a twin brother, Rick, and at 20 the two are still so identical that many of their friends can't tell them apart.

Aside from dressing differently, the two are identical to almost the smallest detail. Both are 6 feet 2 inches tall and have black hair and dark complexions. Both came to U.N.C. from their home in Milwaukee, Wis. three years ago as freshmen, both are varsity swimmers and members of the same fraternity. In fact, when they smile, they both have small chips on their upper front teeth.

"When I was nine, I was watching a movie at a cub scout meeting," Rick explained. "I fell asleep and rolled off my chair. When I hit the floor I chipped my tooth."

Ron followed a year later when he fell off his bicycle, hitting his mouth on the street.

Although some friends have learned to tell them apart, strangers never have. When both boys swam on the same high school team, innumerable opposing coaches would try to invalidate their meets because, "That Miller kid swam too many times."

Rick and Ron agree that one of the most maddening experiences is for one of them to be called "Miller" or "Ron-Rick" by friends who don't try to tell them apart.

"Sometimes these people will approach, thinking I'm Ron, and ask for assignments in Ron's courses," Rick said, smiling. "I just give them some bull, like, 'Yeah, read that chapter.'"

"But, people can tell us apart, if they're observant," Rick said. "Ron doesn't smile as much."

"I think I smile as much as Rick," Ron said.

"Ron's quieter," Rick added.

"Sometimes," Ron replied. The boys admit a rivalry exists between the two. When they had their first dates at Carolina, they had planned to double-date. Somehow, Rick says, Ron found out that Rick's date was cuter and got there first. When Rick arrived, Ron's date greeted him, "Rick's already been here; you must be Ron."

Since then, Ron has started dating 1964's Miss Wisconsin, but Rick said that he isn't plotting any revenge.

"Whenever we swim against each other," said Rick, "I really want to win."

Four years ago the two quit competing long enough to team up on a relay, earning high school All-American rankings for themselves.

"Sometimes I feel forced to act differently than Rick," Ron said. "Our personalities are almost compensating."

Everyone in Chapel Hill knows that Bill Dooley is North Carolina's head football coach. What is Dooley's background?

What are his long range plans for the football program?

The DTH will present an in depth study of the coach in an upcoming issue.

Are the grooves of your record turning to soft, gray, fluff? How easily can you hear the difference between Julie Andrews and James Brown? When you return a record to a friend, who asked you to take care of it, can you count on seeing the friend again? Ever? Can you think of one legitimate reason why you shouldn't spring for a new needle? Oh, you never touch the stuff?

Why not try it? We have all kinds; PICKERING, SHURE, EMPIRE, ELAC, TRANSCRIBER, RCA, and ALL OTHERS—What you have to realize, Auric, is how really inexpensive a new needle is—In some instances, it's cheaper than a new record. A worn needle does more than distort sound—it can destroy your record collection—That's a large investment.
