

Erwin Mills Strikers Vote To Welcome Student Help

ERWIN (AP)—Strikers at the Erwin Mills voted Wednesday to welcome participation by college students on their picket lines.

William LeBlanc, an international representative of the striking Textile Workers Union of America, AFL-CIO, said inquiries had been received from students at five colleges in North Carolina — including Carolina — and from Columbia University and New York University.

He said they acted on their own or as members of college chapters of the League for Industrial Democracy and of the Southern Students Organizing Committee.

Students were on the picket lines of the three-day Cone Mills strike which ended Wednesday night. This strike, at seven Cone plants, was intended to speed collective bargaining.

The plants were White Oak and Proximity in Greensboro, Edna in Riedsville, Granite and Taradrey in Haw River, Mineola in Gibsonville and the Cone plant in Salisbury.

The Erwin strike, what the union calls discrimination against workers because of their union activity.

Le Blanc said inquiries had been received from student groups at Guilford College, the Chapel Hill and Greensboro branches of the University of North Carolina, Duke University, and North Carolina A & T College in Greensboro, as well as the two universities in New York City.

Lloyd Byrd, business agent of the Erwin local of the union, said company figures on how many of the 1,633 produced were exaggerated. He said, "The 455 workers they claimed yesterday Tuesday included more than 150 office and their figure is still too high."

The plant manager, C. W. Howell, said that 548 production workers were on the job Wednesday.

Goings On By Avon Privette

PETER, PAUL AND MARY. What comes to your mind when you see these words? If you have never seen these three perform, probably a phrase like "... and frolicked in the Autumn mist..." or "... no crap shooters, no midnight ramblers..." creep into some back corner of your mind.

But if you have been fortunate enough to attend one of their unforgettable performances, you will begin to feel the things you felt the night you were in their audience.

A Peter, Paul, and Mary Concert is, as was stated, unforgettable. They get on the stage and try to communicate to you.

Take for instance, "The Cruel War." If you watch Mary's facial expressions and listen to the way she controls her tone, you can really grasp an understanding of the sacrifices and hardships that go along with war.

On the light side, Paul's humor has brightened many faces, both at concerts and in hospital wards. Yet, all these words are meaningless unless you get, say, a tingle in your spine when you witness these three artists, pouring forth their all from deep down inside, in their attempt to convey their message to you.

Peter, Paul and Mary are three individuals. Peter studied painting as a youth and entered Cornell in 1955. He majored in Psychology. By his senior year, he was the campus authority on folk songs. He became acquainted with Josh White, Joan Baez, and John Lee Sooker and after graduation he sang and played at many of the Village coffee houses. There he met Paul and Mary.

Paul is a comedian. He can do imitation up a blue streak. All his life he has entertained people. He had a high school pop combo and at Michigan State he was very popular as an emcee. After a successful two years of work in a camera shop Paul journeyed to the Village. He became interested in folk music He met Mary.

Mary came from a family that had folk music as an integral part of its life. She was raised in the Village. Many of the "folk" personalities were dropping in at her house all the time. She loved folk music and became a part of the folk world of coffee houses and Washington Square sings. Her voice has an unbelievable range that teamed up with two bearded prophets to form the entity—P, P & M.

The best way to receive their message is to be present at their concert. University of South Carolina students said of their February second concert—"wonderful", "meaningful", "just plain great." This Saturday evening's eight thirty concert marks their fifth consecutive February appearance at Reynolds Coliseum. I, for one, wouldn't miss it. Advance tickets are on sale at the Record Bar.

My normal column will be in tomorrow's DTH. I must note that tonight after we stomp Wake Forest, the cool Dukes of Dixieland will be on hand at Memorial Hall to help celebrate the more-than-three-time-I-hope victory.
