

Intramural Clipboard

With Bill Hass

Intramural basketball has entered its most crucial stage, with league and division play-offs now under way. Residence hall teams are battling it out in residence college leagues to nail down a place in the tournament field. Fraternity and graduate leagues have already determined their champions and are in the division play-offs. It's single elimination — one loss and a team is through for the season.

A winner will be determined in each residence college and these eight teams will compete for the residence hall division championship. In the Old Well area, the Old West Studs (4-1) will meet Battle - Vance - Pettigrew (3-1) for the title. In the Connor area, the Connor Animals (6-0) play the Connor Vikings (5-1) for the championship. The Upper Quad king will be decided between the Mangum Mugs (5-0) and the Ruffin Rebels (3-2).

The Craige Alkalcetics (5-0) won the Craige College play-offs and have a spot among the final eight teams. In the Scott College tournament, two unbeaten teams, the Teague Trojans (5-0) and the Teague Totals (6-0), will clash for the championship. In Ehringhaus College, Ehringhaus B-2 (6-1) battles the Ehringhaus C Superstars (6-1) for all the marbles.

The Morehead College tournament is partially complete. The Graham Bells (6-0) and the Everett Rogah (6-0) each won first-round games and will meet each other in a semifinal contest. The Stacy Studs (5-1) moved into the semi-final round and will play the winner of the game between the Lewis Browns (4-1) and the Graham Crackers (4-1).

The Morrison C Cavaliers (5-0) have advanced to the finals of the Morrison College tournament. They will play the winner of the game pitting the Morrison I Inebriates (3-1) against the Morrison A Rebels (5-0).

All but two of the positions in the second round of the fraternity division tournament have been determined. Games will match the Phi Gam Fijis (6-0) against Phi Delt Black (5-1), KA Blue I (5-1) against the TEP Tops (4-0) and DKE White (4-1) against Zeta I (5-0).

Other second round games will have DKE Blue (5-0) against Phi Delt White (4-1), ZBT Zebs (5-1) against Chi Phi Red (4-1) and Pi Kappa Phi No. 3 (5-1) against Chi Phi Blue (3-1). Phi Delt Blue (5-0) will meet the winner of the Sig Ep Bisons (5-0) Sigma Chi (4-1) game. ATO I (5-1) will play the victor of the Sigma Nu A (3-2) Pi Kappa Phi No. 1 (5-0) contest.

The graduate division is still unsettled. Four teams have byes and automatically moved into the second round. They are the Peacocks (4-0), Navy Dolphins (4-1), Med School Blue (4-0) and Law III Blue (4-0). Law Blue I (3-1) will play the winner of the Law II Blue (3-1) and Dental School (3-1) in a first round game. The Peacocks will then meet the winner of that game.

The Navy Dolphins will play the winner of the game matching Med School Yellow (4-0) and Med School White (3-1). The Med Blues will play the winner of the contest between the Fellowship of Christian Athletes (5-0) and the State Grads (2-1). Law IV will have the winner of Law III Blue (4-0) and an opponent which will either be Law III White (2-2) or the NROTC Neseps (2-2).

Most of the teams will play next week and eventually each division will have a champion. The three elites will then meet for the all-campus championship.

Merrimon Lecture Is Wednesday Night

Some of the crucial ethical decisions faced by physicians who bring babies into the world will be related by an internationally prominent obstetrician in the first Merrimon Lecture here on Wednesday night.

The lecture, at 8 p.m. in Hill Hall, will be open to the public.

The speaker will be Dr. Nicholson Joseph Eastman, professor emeritus of obstetrics at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine and consultant to the Ford Foundation.

His topic will be "Induced Abortion and Contraception: A Consideration of Ethical Philosophy in Obstetrics."

games open with the long ball. If they hit up to their potential this year there will be a lot of Tar Heels crossing home plate.

Any coach will tell you that the most important position in baseball is the pitcher. No matter how great your team may be defensively and despite its ability to hit the ball — if you don't have strength on the mound, forget it.

Beattie Leonard and Danny Walker have looked good in practice. Both of them can be counted on for good performances. Sophomores John Richards and Chip Stone can put the ball over the plate with effective stuff.

But the key to the Tar Heels of '66 lies with two men, co-captain Mike McLaughlin and sophomore Mike Flannigan. They possess first-rate fast balls. And they're strong enough to work eighteen of the scheduled 29 games.

Both men have been plagued by lack of control.

During his college career, McLaughlin has been virtually untouched by opposing hitters. But he's walked plenty.

Flannigan came to Carolina after a high school career which made him one of the most promising pitchers ever to come to Chapel Hill. But during his freshman year he also had trouble finding the plate.

This makes pitching the biggest and most important "if" to consider as the season approaches. It could mean a conference championship.

Nolan Leonard, a transfer from Wingate, gets in some swing-time as Coach Walter Rabb's men battle for starting berths on the 1966 diamond nine. Leonard is a shortstop candidate and is joining his teammates in some serious competition with the season's opener less than a week away. The Tar Heels, who won the ACC title two years ago with a spotless 14-0 record, slumped to 6-8 in 1965 and tied for sixth in the league. They play East Carolina's Southern Conference Pirates in Greenville Friday afternoon, launching a season in which pitching seems to hold the key to success or failure. — DTH Photo by Jock Lauterer

Cats 'Bing-oad'; Devils Limp On

By BILL ROLLINS
DTH Sports Writer

St. Joseph's Hawks were "Marin-ated" and the Davidson Wildcats were "Bing-oad" in the semi-finals of the Eastern Regionals at Reynolds Coliseum in Raleigh Friday night.

That second form of elimination had the most devastating effect, but both did the job as Duke's Jack Marin and Syracuse's Dave Bing — a pair of All-Americans — led their teams past each's first obstacle in its path toward a hoped-for NCAA championship.

Duke's left-handed ace pulled down 15 rebounds to go with his 18 points, and tossed in four straight free throws down the winning stretch to keep the Philadelphia Hawks on the short end of a 76-74 score. And the amazingly quick and coordinated Syracuse guard rocketed his wily 6-3 frame into the air for 12 rebounds to enhance his 20-point scoring effort, and exhibited an onelfish display of passing and feeding which shot his team into whopping 35-point lead with eight minutes to play. The Orangemen played reserves most of the rest of the way, and Davidson was able to cut the final margin to an almost respectable 94-78.

In the doubleheader opener, Duke was plagued by inconsistency — especially when it managed to pull to eight-or-10 point leads — and was forced to fall back on some unerring foul shooting in the final minutes to avert disaster.

The Hawks pressed Duke practically throughout the game, and were able to cut significant deficits on five occasions when it seemed that they were going to fall victim to a breeze-away.

It was not, however, until after the Ducks had spurred to a 68-58 lead with 6:51 left that the Joey's made full use of their press to register six steals in the next five minutes and almost pull the game out of the fire.

Marin's rebound basket was the only Duke score in those five minutes, and with 1:49 remaining, the nationally second-ranked Blue Devils looked back and found the clawing Hawks just two points in arrears at 70-68.

Then Bob Verga, who led Duke's offense with 22 points, zipped in a pair of free throws in his usual sling-shot motion, but Billy Oakes scored for the Hawks, who trailed, 72-70.

It was here that Marin — who netted six of Duke's last eight points — hit four free throws while St. Joe's All-American Matt Guokas Jr., and Marty Ford (from 40 feet at the buzzer) countered for the final 76-74 margin.

Davidson's showing in the nightcap of this Eastern Regionals first round was very similar to Duke's battle against UCLA in the NCAA title bout two years ago. The Wildcats made a game of it for most of the first half, but just like that ill-fated Duke Club, were blitzed in the last few minutes of the opening period and were never able to catch up.

In Duke's case two years ago, it ran into a guy named Walt who wreaked havoc in a Hazzardous manner. And in Davidson's case Friday night, it ran into a guy named Dave who "Bing-oad" the 'Cats before the first half was over.

It was 22-11 with 9:15 to go in the first half, but Mr. Bing and Jim Boehm scored eight straight for the Orangemen. Then with four minutes left, Davidson quit scoring, and yielded 11 points in a closing flurry which spelled doom for the team which had come such a long way on an All-American, a fellow senior, and six sophomores.

Davidson's top man, Dick Synder, outscored Bing by 25-20, but had only ten with eight minutes to go and his team almost unbelievably behind by 84-49. Synder, a top defensive man, tried in vain to contain his first-team A-A counterpart but on Friday night the two were not even in the same league.

Bing toyed with the Davidson backcourt press, waving his teammates on up the court and bringing the ball into the offensive zone alone. Once there, he performed as if no one was defending him, driving at will and passing through the slower Southern Conference titlists in an eye-popping performance.

The bang-up Syracuse whiz would whirl into the midst of the Davidson defense around the upper part of the foul line, pick it apart, and shoot the ball to a friend breaking in from the side for an easy lay-up. He passed up an untold number of shots which would have certainly pushed his individual scoring total past his 29.4 points per game average. Not even when his team was holding its insurmountable lead did he gun for the basket.

Then at about the eight-minutes-to-play mark, Bing and most of the straters left the game. Syracuse led by 92-60 with six minutes left, and then Snyder and center Rod Knowles — who also finished with 25 points — got hot against the Orange's reserves and outscored the winners 18-2 in the remaining time.

Fauntleroy

SO COME ON DOWN.
Here I am ballfans, down in sunny Florida. Here I lie amidst the palms, surrounded by a bevy of bare-busted beauties.

Aahhh. Just listen to that ocean. Feel the gentle salt spray brush across my forehead. The sand is soft and I think I'll just lie here all week bagging the bennies (beneficial sun rays).

Boy, lunch was really great. Fruit and lots of cooling drink served at my beck and call by desirous damsels.

Well, I'm still thinking of you ballfans. Thinking of the cold north and all the classes you're suffering through. Wish you were here. (Stab!)

I hate to make you drool at the mouth like this, so I've got to admit it. I'm down here on business.

In my profession it's wise to acclimate oneself. My basketball predictions are far behind me and thoughts turn sublime to baseball. No, don't worry — you'll get the NCAA winner on Friday morning.

At this time of the year where do you go to brush up on your crystal ball for forthcoming baseball picks? Florida, of course.

Well for the past week I've been the distinguished guest of Major League clubs at their spring training camps.

I've been talking to the players, giving advice to the coaches and measuring home runs.

I've even taken a few swings myself. I blush to relate it, but relate it I must. I've been hitting the horsehide pretty well and several clubs have been offering me contracts.

Sorry boys, no dice. No, 200,000 bucks a season really isn't tempting. You see fellas, I tell them, I've got an obligation to my readers. They've been really loyal. They just laughed at Ed Freakley when that dastardly doer of derring-do had the audacity to call me a cheater.

Then they asked me to pick Major League games instead of limiting myself to the college circuits. I explained that if the public knew the outcome of the '66 season the ballparks would be deserted and Ballentine beer would go bankrupt.

So here I am. Thinking baseball and whistling "Take Me Out To The Ballpark," "Damn Yankees" and "Meet the Mets."

Next week I'll be back home in my Victorian mansion with Jeeves my trusty manservant.

So, get ready to discover how the college of your choice is going to do. Place your bets. Tune up on your boos and your jeers. "KILL THE UMP." "THROW THE BUM OUT." Ah, I can hear you new ballfans. And it sound soooooo good.

Post Scripts:

I can't resist one last parting shot at Freakley. It's customary for a jealous inferior (Freakley) to challenge the good name of a great sports figure (Me). I don't wish the poor confused underling an eternity stoking the hell fires. I merely ask him for a printed apology. May he cleanse himself with tears. REPENT AND RETURN TO THE FOLD.

Baseball Countdown Ends This Friday Against ECC

By SANDY TREADWELL
DTH Sports Writer

It's a countdown that ends on March 18 at 3 p.m.

The countdown began last September with fall baseball practice. It has continued since last month in the midst of the basketball season.

A lot of concrete steps have been climbed at a fast pace. A lot of jumping - jacks and sit - ups have worked legs and stomachs into shape.

Dozens of baseballs have been thrown and hit and lost.

Now, the preparation is almost over. The Tar Heel baseball team opens its long season against East Carolina College in Greenville.

What kind of a season will it be for Carolina?

Defensively, the 1966 Tar Heels look strong — very strong.

The infielders have fast hands and strong arms. They'll make the plays and throw out the runners. The same is true of the outfielders.

In John Shaw and Tommy Robbins, Carolina will have ability and experience behind the plate. Both men are as good as any catcher in the ACC.

The defense will feature the experienced men on the team in at least the first few games.

Danny Talbot will start at third. Baylan and Watts will apparently cover second base, and Tom Lampman will start at first.

But a host of sophomores provide the vital element of depth to this year's team. L. E. Sayer, Bruce Bolick, Charley Thomas and Bill Estes will play this year. Before the season is over some of them might be starting.

In the outfield, Gene Link, Bob Hume, Charley Carr, Bob Bonczek and Larry Mills will be the men hauling in the fly balls.

But in order to win games, there are two essentials to any ball club — hitting and pitching. In these departments, the certainties end and the "ifs" begin.

Talbot, Link, Hume, Shaw, and Bonczek have proved their ability with the bat in past seasons. These are the men who should break ball

UNC Dolphins Place Fourth In Swim Meet

North Carolina's Dolphins, led by Phil Riker's record-setting performance, placed fourth in the Eastern Seaboard Championships.

Riker, who swam the 200 yard butterfly event in 1:56.9 for a new Eastern Seaboard record, led a North Carolina charge that piled up 110 total points—good enough for fourth position behind Yale, Army and Navy.

Fred Lipp was another outstanding Dolphin performer. Lipp finished second in the 200 yard freestyle. John Sheldon finished tenth in the same event.

Other Tar Heels who placed were: Rick Forum, ninth in the 100 yard breaststroke; Gage Stratton, seventh in the 100 yard backstroke; and Rick Mercuri, eighth in the 100 yard backstroke.

North Carolina's 400 yard freestyle relay team finished fifth. Pete Worthen, Gage Stratton, J. Henry and Russ Sleeper composed the Tar Heel team.
