

Paris, Alps 'In The Reach' In Study Abroad Program

By CAROL GALLANT
DTH Staff Writer
Living within four hours (by train) of Paris; skiing in the French and Swiss Alps; experiencing a full academic year, with credit, in a French university located in a large provincial center—Sound nice? These are some of the things the student participating in the UNC "Year at Lyon" program does.
The "Year at Lyon" program is in its third year and selection is now being made of next years participants. Thirty to 35 UNC students will be aboard the SS France on September 1 bound for a 10 month program of study at Lyon and an experience in living they will never forget.

Are you eligible? You are if you are a "responsible man or woman in regular standing at one of the campuses of the Consolidated University and are a "better than average" student (B or B-).
The program is not set up for French majors exclusively. In fact, if you have the necessary average, your amount of formal training in French could be minimal. This would mean two years of pre-college French and at least the equivalent of French 21 in college.
It is normally a third-year program, but students in other classes have been accepted.
What would you study?
The program at Lyons is a flexible program combining American elective and course credits with the more specialized degree programs found in European universities. In setting up the Lyon program, the University of North Carolina has drawn from the courses Lyon offers and has added some of its own.

The program is divided into three parts. First is a five week program of intensive language study in preparation for the regular year. The first semester (Nov. 1-Feb. 1) all students will take language-civilization courses at either the advanced or intermediate level.
Second semester (March 30-June 2), students can leave the language-civilization courses if they have completed the work satisfactorily and take more elective courses.
Elective courses meet once a week; no Saturday classes. Students are expected to attend class, and cut policy is much the same as it is in Chapel Hill.
Students enrolled in the program will be under the supervision of the director who will serve as each participant's academic and social advisor.
Next year's director will be Rupert Pickens.
When classes are not in session, students are free to travel. Richard L. Fruitschi, of the French Department was the director of the first Lyon program. He said he had students traveling as far as Istanbul and North Africa.
This same year the students rented a French chalet in co-operation with Lyon students. According to Fruitschi this made for good "Franco-American" weekends.
There are 24,000 students at Lyon; the great majority are French. It is an excellent place to study abroad as no "permanent American colony" has been established as in Paris.
American students have their choice of living in the dormitory housing provided by the University of Lyon or of living in a French home.
Fruitschi said, "There were some surprises and difficult moments the year I was director, but everyone came back realizing it was a worthwhile experience... It's educational in itself, living abroad, but the primary purpose of the program is to offer an academic program as well as the experience of living in a foreign country."

If you are interested in learning more about the program go to Dey Hall Faculty Lounge at 7 p.m. Tuesday March 15. Application deadline is April 1.
You might be pleasantly surprised to learn that the estimated total cost of the program (including travel, housing, food) is $2,007-$2,877 for N. C. residents.
If you decide to apply, who knows? In a few months you might be completely involved in reading detailed information about passport application, carte de sejour, and banking facilities in Lyon.

TEACHERS' MEETING
The Chapel Hill Unit of the N. C. Teachers Association will meet at Northside School, Tuesday. There will be a special showing of the 30-minute film, Mathematics for Tomorrow, beginning at 4 p.m. All teachers in the Chapel Hill School system have been invited to attend.

NROTC To Offer Summer Program

University of North Carolina has again been selected by the Navy Department to administer a special six-week NROTC training program that can save enrollees up to two years of training time, according to Capt. Rex Warner, professor of Naval Science.

The new program will give rising college juniors from across the United States an opportunity to get into the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps. It will begin in July.
Normally, a student must begin NROTC training at the beginning of his freshman year in college, but the new program will allow college students to break in at the half-way point and receive full training and benefits.

Under the plan, enrollees can complete the Navy's four-year contract plan in just two years, at the end of which time they can receive either a Naval Reserve or Marine Corps Reserve officer's commission.

Those who are accepted for the special summer school will be paid transportation from home and return from the summer session. They will receive pay of $87.90 per month, uniforms, Naval Science textbooks, tuition and fees, and allowances for room and board.
During the academic year when enrolled as Contract students in the NROTC program students receive uniforms, Naval Science textbooks and instruction, plus $40 per month subsistence allowance.
Training will consist of academic instruction, laboratory, drill and physical education. Program options include surface, aviation, Marine Corps, technical supply or science and engineering.
Sophomores with at least a "C" average may make application for the summer training prior to May 1 at any U. S. Navy Recruiting Station or NROTC Unit for all options except aviation. Applications for the aviation option must be made at Naval Air Reserve Activities.
At the University of North Carolina the special six-week program (Naval Science Institute) will coincide with the second session of summer school, July 18 to Aug. 25.
Further information and application forms may be obtained at the Naval Armory.

Elections Board To Meet

The Elections Board will hold a compulsory meeting of all members today at 3 p.m. in GM, according to Elections Board Chairman Arthur Hays.
Members who are unable to attend are requested to notify Hays. Those who will be attending are requested to bring in any material which they have concerning the coming election.

distinguished from the other two.
Hawthorne comments, "This is almost a counter rebellion. A lot of the beats have decided if the general public is so insensitive and biased that it cannot tell the real from the pseudo, then that is its own fault."
Dr. Kenneth J. Reckford, associate professor of classics, has still another outlook, "I've known several of these so-called beat students. They have withdrawn from society into themselves as a temporary strategem. When they find out who and what they are, perhaps they can return to society and be productive individuals."
Reckford concluded his interview with this remark, "Sometimes I walk across campus and have the horrible feeling that the University is full of Tom Sawyers. We need a few more Huckleberry Finns."

MCAT To Be Given May 7

The Medical College Admissions Test to be given at UNC this year May 7 will be taken by all pre-medical juniors and sophomores that have their applications in by April 22.
The applications can be picked up at the University Testing Center in the basement of Peabody Hall.
The exam must be taken by all juniors and sophomores who are planning to enter a medical school within the next year and a half.
Alpha Epsilon Delta, the international pre-medical honor fraternity, reminds all students who will be taking the exam to begin thinking about the names of the medical schools they want to receive their test scores. This list must be included on the test application.

Radiation Effects To Be Reported

A study of the effects of radiation on blood will be reported at the 3rd International Congress on Radiation Research this summer by a University radiological hygienist.
Dr. Donald G. Willhoit, assistant professor at the UNC School of Public Health, has been invited to attend the meeting in Cortina de Ampezzo, Italy, and to present a paper entitled "Acute Hematologic Radiation Injury: Comparative Effects of Cobalt-60 Gamma and Fission Neutron Radiations."
The study here grew out of interest in humans who were exposed to radiation injury in reactor accidents.
Dr. Willhoit has received a travel grant from the National Research Council of the National Academy of Science to attend the meeting in Italy.

Westminster Fellowship To Sponsor Panel Talk

By WILLIAM FESPERMAN
DTH Religion Editor
There are two questions we can ask about death. The first is "Why did this person die?" The second is "Why did this person have to die?"
For the answer to the first question, we can go to medicine. But where do we go for an answer to the second question. And once we have found the source of an answer, how adequate is that answer?

The Westminster Fellowship is sponsoring a panel discussion at today's Sunday Supper Forum at 6:30 p.m. to discuss into this dilemma. The supper and panel will be held at the Presbyterian Student Center on Henderson Street.
Discussing our culture's refusal to face the reality of death and the various attitudes toward death will be Dr. David Hawkins of the Department of Psychiatry, Dr. William Blythe of the Medical School, and Reverend Vance Barron, pastor of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian Church. Harry Smith, Presbyterian student chaplain, will be the moderator.
Although the "American Way of Death" controversy has been toned down, the American way of death, unfortunately, hasn't. Any who wish to re-open that discussion with their experience or opinion are invited to do so.
