I'm worried.
Rumors have it that I'm to be fired and replaced by some unknown by the name of Sebastian.
All I'd like to know is, who's going to fire me? You see ballfans, this kid is his own boss. Sure, papers can refuse to print my column. But you know and I know that in so doing they'd be throwing all their readership right out the window.
I'm worried for a different reason.
Today I face the supreme test of my career. All week I've been here at College Park, Maryland. All week I've hung around camera crews and NCAA officials trying to find out information about tonight's games.
See, I have this string going. Seven for seven in the ACC tourney. I'd kind of like to close out the basketball season with four more correct picks.
But it's really tough. I've been flipping coins all week. I even dressed up as an old lady and sneaked around to local motels reading the palms of sleeping players.
Most of the people around here are going with Kentucky over Texas Western in the championship game. They predict close games tonight, but they're sure of the outcome.
I'm not so sure.
Last night I sacked out hoping for some edifying vision to seep into one of my dreams. But some guy in the next room had a TV turned up to a glass-shattering level.
For the first time in my life my confidence is really shook. To tell the truth ballfans, I just can't be sure who is going to win.
However, I've been watching Duke all year. They play up to the standard of the competition and they refuse to choke. Pick DUKE.
So I guess I'm out on a limb.
The next question is, who will face Duke in the final game tomorrow night?
I'm betting on Texas Western.
Now that I've made up my mind my confidence is flowing back to me. I haven't flipped my lid, ballfans.
DUKE over Kentucky and TEXAS WESTERN over Utah.
Then Duke will beat Western and Kentucky will beat Utah and that will be that.
See if I'm wrong. If I am I'll step down from my throne and Sebastian can take over.
But I'm not worried (much).

Coach Walter Rabb and first baseman Danny Talbott look ahead to North Carolina's baseball opener today at East Carolina. Rabb is beginning his 10th season as head coach at UNC, and Talbott hopes to duplicate or improve on last year's totals, when he batted .362 with 24 RBIs.

Redskins-Run, Shoot

By KEITH DRUM
The nation's fifth highest scoring machine, revolving around the tenth highest individual marksman, joins the three top-ranked teams at College Park this weekend. Unranked but not unproven Utah, with a 23-6 record pits its 96.5 average against Texas Western's high-rated defense in tonight's second game.
Utah, also a great rebounding team, thirteenth nationally, was handicapped when 6'7" senior George Fisher suffered a broken leg. Fisher was Utah's second best rebounder and scorer.
Still Coach Jack Gardner, a veteran of 19 years and 551 victories at Utah and Kansas State, can field a formidable five and substitute freely.
Lyndon MacKay is a 6-6 sophomore forward who averages in double figures, rebounds well, and does a good job defensively. Unfortunately, he suffered a pulled tendon against Oregon State and may not be at full strength.
Jeff Ockel, 6'7" sophomore, replaced Fisher and provided the spark in the regionals. Against University of Pacific's high-scoring Keith Swagerty, he scored 10 points and checked Swagerty at 16. More important, Ockel, a 225 pounder, held his own on the boards with the nation's third leading rebounder. Ockel has appeared in all of the Redskins' games and carries a 7.0 average.
Sophomore guard Mervin Jackson, 6'2", is the potential energy in Utah's attack. Jackson threw in 19 against UNC, several on spectacular "stuffs." A great leaper, Jackson must play to his potential if the Utes are to take the crown.
Richard Tate, 5'11" senior guard, is the key to the Utes' attack. He directs the offense and alerts the defense. A fine outside shooter (12.5), Tate is a flawless ball-handler and pinpoint passer. His size, 180, makes him tough in close situations. Tate's defense of Texas Western's Bobby Joe Hill will be vital to the outcome.
The most dominating player in the tourney will be 6'4" senior Jerry Chambers. At 27.7, Chambers finished tenth among

Carolina Opens Season Against Pirates Today

By SANDY TREADWELL
DTH Sports Writer
The Tar Heels journey to Greenville today to face East Carolina College in the season's opener.
An old hackneyed phrase says that "ya" can't win 'em all unless ya' win the first one," and the first one looks pretty tough.
The Pirates have been rated by the AP pre-season polls as the probable champions of the Southern Conference.
The Tar Heels will face a battery of Jim Raynor and Richard "Rooster" Narron.
PROBABLE LINEUP
1b-Danny Talbott
2b-Butch Watts or Charlie Thomas
3b-L. E. Sawyer or Rod Thompson

"East Carolina is a real fine ballclub," Tar Heel coach Walter Rabb said. "They've got a good defensive infield."
Rabb will employ the strength of the Tar Heel pitching staff today. Co-captain Mike McLaughlin will start. McLaughlin will be backed up by Danny Walker, Beattie Leonard and Mike Flannigan.
The Tar Heels open at home next Wednesday against Springfield College.

Intimate, as always

It's just as one of our old customers said the other day, when back in town for a visit. The old emporium really doesn't seem to change very much.

The stock is always being replaced, of course, and our student helpers seem to move along with each graduation march.

But the shelves are still bulging with a fine variety of reading matter of all sorts. And the new helpers pitch in to give our famous quick, cheerful service.

We've grown with the town, we've become perhaps a bit more efficient. But rest assured that years from now the Intimate will still be the fine personal bookshop it is now.

Oh, it'll change. But it will always be the Intimate.

Morehead College intramural basketball championship by blasting the Lewis Browns on Wednesday, 61-35. Steve Balcum led the Bells with 23 points while Bob Coleman had 11. Charles Hamrick had 15 for the Browns.
The Morrison C Cavaliers won the Morrison College crown by downing the Morrison I Inebriates, 64-47. Scott Peterson rifled in 26 points for the Cavaliers while Mack Shipper had 14 and Glenn Cuthrell 12.

DKE Blue moved into the quarterfinals of the fraternity division as they squeezed by Phi Delta White, 37-35. Stewart Hap scored 11 points and Norton Willis 10 for the DKE's. Harry Stovall had 11 for Phi Delta. The Phi Deltas held a 19-17 halftime lead, but Willis and Hap took over for the DKE's to lead the come-from-behind victory.

In the graduate division, the Fellowship of Christian Athletes ripped the Stat Grads, 79-41. Bill Edwards hit 24 points, Frank Gibbs 20, Jim Byrd 14 and Bob Sutton 10 for the FCA.
On Tuesday, Med White defeated Med Yellow.
