'Swine Hall' Radio Station Replaces Vegetables, Laundry, Toilet Facilities

There hasn't always been a WUN C(FM) radio station in Swain Hall.

There used to be vegetable rooms for the dining hall (rumor has it the building was known as "Swine Hall" in those days) and later, laundry and toilet facilities for a trailer court out back.

But that's all in the past—has been since 1952 when UNC students hammered and sawed and painted the basement of the communications center in to the studios of The Voice of the University of North Carolina.

Radio was "born" on the UNC campus back in 1938 in room 123, Peabody Hall, where dramatic arts students used disc recording equipment.

From these humble beginnings came: a series of Carolina Playmaker plays broadcast coast to coast on the Mutual Network from studios in Caldwell Hall in 1941 and 1942; the establishment of a communications center in 1945 through the efforts of Prof. Earl Wynn, still with the Department of Radio, Television, and Motion Pictures here; and finally, the licensing of WUN C(FM) in 1952 and the beginning of regular broadcasting on an assigned frequency of 91.5 megacycles.

WUN C is a non-commercial FM radio station assigned to the University of North Carolina and operated as an educational broadcast service to the people of North Carolina. Its coverage extends about 80 miles under normal conditions, serving the heart of North Carolina and the extremities of Virginia and occasionally South Carolina. The entire staff is made up of students in the university, participating voluntarily.

Since it has been on the air, WUN C has adhered strongly to a threefold policy: to provide training for students in broadcasting, to offer a unique broadcast service not offered by commercial stations, and to represent the University of North Carolina.

With these responsibilities the student staff of WUN C has managed year after year to achieve the high programming expected of the representative of a great University. Its musical programming, though it range from Bach to Bae, is always meant to inform as well as entertain the listener.

WUN C coverage of campus events is quick and comprehensive; its special department is on the spot whether that spot be right around the corner at Hill Hall or on down the road apiece at the airport. UNC's Dr. Carter or Dogpatch's Al Capp— if it's happening on campus, WUN C will be there.

This fall WUN C will begin regular broadcasting October 3 with new and varied programming drawn from local as well as international sources. "Prologue to Drama," originally produced for radio and involving students of the University, will be aired on Sundays at 10:05 p.m. and Thursdays at 7 p.m. A special series, "The Conductor," produced by the WUN C music department, will trace the development and careers of famous maestros each Sunday at 7 p.m., and the concert series from Hill Hall will continue to be broadcast live and direct every Tuesday night at eight o'clock. Every night the WUN C news staff will provide a comprehensive round up of campus, state, national, and international news.

WUN C radio offers a chance for professional training, a chance to acquire marketable skills in newscasting, announcing, programming, production, and other areas.

You may not intend to enter the broadcasting profession, but even so, WUN C offers a unique opportunity to develop a satisfying and rewarding hobby.

Let WUN C train you in a fascinating and valuable field. Become a part of a rapidly developing dynamic new world—the world of communications. If you're a bi-ped who can communicate reasonably effectively, come on down to the basement of Swain Hall any afternoon between 2:30 and 5:30 p.m. There's a place on the WUN C team for you.

Marching Heels Perform Despite All Odds—Major Y

When Major John Yesulaitis' Marching Tar Heels moved onto the Kenan Stadium field Saturday afternoon, the odds were all against the band.

A group of 112 students with a kaloidaescopic background—many of whom were performing at Carolina for the first time—had to put on three different shows with only two rehearsals.

In spite of these disadvantages, Maj. Yesulaitis said the group put on a good performance.

Yesulaitis said Monday that he had planned the marching maneuvers for 128 students but had been able to get only 112 to sign up for the band.

He said that difficulties had been further compounded by the fact that the band not only had to give its normal half-time show, but had to give special performances for Richard Adler and for the crowning of Miss Consolidated University.

Adverse weather cut the number of full scale rehearsals to two, with only a short brush-up trial before the game Saturday.

In addition to that Head Majorette Anita Wilkinson was ill and was unable to appear at the game.

Yesulaitis said his group had "wonderful spirit" but just not enough members.

"It's just like a football team," he said.

"Each individual has a different routine; everyone has to watch for the signals, and we have to play and march at the same time."

Major Yesulaitis said that in his opinion band members were unique, but said that anyone was welcome to join the group. There are also several more majorette vacancies.

"We are always looking for new talent."

Yesulaitis said that his group represents students with all varieties of backgrounds and that one of his chief tasks every year is to blend this variety of talent.

Yesulaitis noted that the group was already preparing for the next home game, but added that there was still time for interested persons to join the Marching Tar Heels.

The only thing he asks for is enthusiasm.

Career Meet Set For 6th

A special career program for all seniors and graduate students will feature Andy Robertson as guest speaker. The meeting is to be held in Hill Hall next Thursday, Oct. 6, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Robertson is highly reputed as an exceptionally entertaining and dynamic speaker who has great appeal to the college student audience. Aside from his duties as president and chairman of the board of Crawford and Co. in Atlanta, Robertson has served on the board of the Southern College Placement Association and the College Placement Council. His experience in the field of college recruiting makes him well qualified to discuss problems facing job seekers. All men and women students who plan to seek jobs following graduation are urged to attend this meeting.

As a special added attraction, J. M. Galloway, director of the Placement Service, will explain how his office assists students in beginning their careers in business, industry, government and college teaching. The meeting is jointly sponsored by the University Placement Service and Alpha Kappa Psi and Delta Sigma Pi fraternities.

Any student who has satisfactorily completed two semesters of work at UNC is eligible to register with the Placement Service. Students are urged to register early in order to participate in the employment interviews conducted through the Placement Service from mid-October through April. Job counseling and career information are also available to students, and permanent personnel files are maintained for all registrants.

YDC Meeting Spots Poole

Sam Poole, only announced candidate for president of the N. C. Young Democrats Club, will speak to the UNC chapter Wednesday evening at 7:30 p.m. in Roland Lounge, prior to his formal nomination at the YDC convention in Winston - Salem Friday.

Poole is a graduate of the UNC Law School and is now a practicing attorney in Southern Pines. Don Wilson, a UNC undergraduate and vice president of the local chapter, has announced his intention to run for president of the College Federation of Young Democrat Clubs.

"All UNC YDC members are encouraged to attend the convention as part of our delegation," said Phil Baddour, president of the UNC chapter. "Everyone present will have an opportunity to vote and participate. Transportation will be provided, and rooms have been reserved in the Robert E. Lee Hotel. Full details of our plans for the convention will be discussed at the Wednesday night meeting."

Featured speaker for the Friday evening banquet at the convention will be Postmaster - General Lawrence O'Brien, and Nick Galifianakis, Democratic candidate for Congress, will address the group on Saturday evening.

North Viet Bombings To Continue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has not suspended bombing raids over North Viet Nam nor does it plan to stop the air strikes, official Washington said today.

The White House and the Departments of State and Defense each issued demials of reports published in New York and London that the United States planned to suspend the bombing to give Hanoi more time to consider America's latest peace bid made in the United Nations last week.

Pentagon officials also said they know of no reduction of planned troop commitments to Viet Nam. The reports said new orders have held up the arrival of fresh new U. S. troops.
