

The Kicking Man Will Also Run

North Carolina's Bill Dodson already has proved he can kick the football a "country mile" and now sets out on a new adventure with the ball tucked under his arm.

An injury which has sidelined starting halfback Tommy Dempsey for a month focuses even more attention on the talented Dodson. He's counted on now to help make the Tar Heel running game go.

"Dodson now is our second string right halfback," Coach Jim Hickey said as Carolina prepared for Saturday's invasion of the University of Michigan. "We'll use him to spell Tom Lampman at that position."

Dodson, a 200-pound sophomore from Alexandria, Va., burst into the Tar Heel spotlight last weekend with one of the most dazzling place-kicking exhibitions ever seen in Kenan Stadium.

He booted a 33-yard field goal which turned out to be the winning margin in Carolina's 10-7 victory over North Carolina State. But that's not all. Three straight times, he sent tremendous kick-offs booming into the Wolf-pack end zone for no return.

But Dodson doesn't want to be recognized just as a kicker. "I'd feel more a part of the team," he says, "if I could develop into a good halfback."

There's no reason to believe he can't. In fact, backfield Coach Ace Parker already has gone on record as saying that Bill Dodson ranks along with Lampman as the best pass-catcher in the Tar Heel backfield.

The halfback position in a straight T-formation is a new position for Dodson. He was a quarterback in high school and played end for two years at Bullis Prep. Last year with the Carolina freshmen, he was a flanker back.

"I think I can run with the ball if I get a chance," Dodson said. "Kicking the football is fun, but running with it is something special."

Hickey plans to give Dodson a chance to do something special at Ann Arbor Saturday. A good performance by Dodson could serve as a great boost to the Tar Heels' sagging ground game.

And you can bet Carolina will call on Dodson to kick, too, if the occasion arises. His record as a field goal kicker is almost flawless.

As a freshman player last season, he made five out of six, and the one that misfired against North Carolina State was blocked. His longest was a 48-yarder.

Center forward Jimmy Johnston fights for the ball in last year's soccer game against Air Force. Friday Johnston will again work on Fetzer Field in the season's opener against VPI.

Undefeated Tar Babies Face Wake's Yearlings Friday

By RON SHINN

The University of North Carolina freshman football team will be out to push its unbeaten record to 12 games Friday in a battle with the Wake Forest yearlings in Winston-Salem.

Coach Fred Mueller's Tar Babies have savored the sweetness of victory this week after last Saturday's 21-7 come-from-behind win over the N. C. State Wolflets in the annual Sudan Temple Bowl Game. And that is one taste Carolina doesn't seem to get tired of.

North Carolina freshman teams enjoyed two perfect seasons under Coach George Barclay and have amassed a 14-2 record during the past three years. This is Mueller's first season after Barclay was elevated to the varsity coaching staff and it looks like he will follow in his predecessor's footsteps.

Friday's action will be the first of the season for Wake Forest, also under new coach Ken Karr for the first time. The game begins at 3 p.m.

Carolina fans at last week's tilt walked away declaring they had seen a future Ken Willard in halfback Saulis Zemaitis and Danny Talbott's double in quarterback Ken Price.

Zemaitis, one of Carolina's latest imports from Hamilton, Canada, gained a phenomenal 179 yards during his first appearance in a Tar Heel uniform. The hard-running halfback proved to be the work-horse of the Tar Babies offense as he carried the ball 32 times and caught four passes.

"That was the greatest single performance I've ever seen," Mueller said. "We knew he was good, but we didn't expect the performances he made Saturday."

Price, a 6-2, 180-pound youngster from Erwin, N. C. who looks very much like his varsity counterpart when he steps back to pass, threw 17 passes and completed eight for 121 yards. One was good for the touchdown that put the Tar Babies out front.

"Price looked real good after he once settled down," Mueller said. "At first he was having trouble stepping back into the pocket on his passes, but once he recovered from his opening game jitters he was impressive."

Mueller also tabbed center Steve Burdulis, halfback Doug

David and end Tom Cantrell for their outstanding play in the opener.

The Tar Babies came out of the opener in perfect physical shape and have been optimistic over practice sessions this week.
