SP, UP To Meet

Three legislative vacancies are to be filled when both campus political parties hold meetings tonight.

The UP gets the action under way at 7:30 in 104 Howell Hall, while the SP waits until 8 o'clock for their meeting in Gerrard Hall.

The UP has two vacancies to fill—one in the Alderman-McIver-Kenan district and the other in the sorority district. The one seat to be filled by the SP is in MD V—Joyner, Alexander and Connor.

The SP program will be on participation in the YM—YW—CA, while the UP has four resolutions and convention procedures to discuss.

Librarian Named

Clifton Brock Jr. has been appointed acting associate librarian at UNC Library replacing Dr. John Gribbin, who resigned to become director of libraries at Tulane University.

Brock was formerly head of the library's business administration and social science division and is a 1951 graduate of Clemson University.

He holds masters degrees in library science and political science from the University of Michigan and Florida State University and is pursuing doctoral study in political science here.

In his new post Brock will assist Dr. Jerrold Orne, University librarian, in supervising various phases on library activities.

He is a member of several professional societies including the American Library Association, the North Carolina Library Association, Sigma Tau Epsilon, Pi Sigma Alpha and Phi Kappa Phi.

THEY'RE STILL tearing down Chapel Hill High School to make room for the Granville Towers complex. They've been working at it for some time, but buildings like that are sturdy. With a wrecking ball, a gigantic crane, some sledge hammers and blazing torches, they're stripping the school to its steel skeleton. Scattered about the place are broken bricks, shattered glass, demolished bulletin boards—and lots of memories. It takes up to seven or eight loud "thumps" before the ball crashes through the walls. The walls, it seems, are as adamant as that English teacher who'd always flunk you if you didn't get your papers in on time. Eventually the walls give in, but not until they weave back and forth—clinging to the flexing steel skeleton as you stuck to your alibi when you were late for class. In the middle of the wreck there's a tree—a young tree, a green tree, a live tree—upon which the dead bricks are falling.

Sociologist Warns Against 'Black Power,' Violence

"After all, this is what we've had in the North all along," he explains. "Social attitudes about race will be with us for a long time. You can't legislate a spirit of brotherhood or love of mankind. We can only hope that laws against discrimination will lead to tolerance and understanding."

The United States is not likely. "Our history indicates that racist ideas rise and subside in intensity, but do not disappear," he says. "They were much more intense in 1900 than in 1800, and recent resurgence of racism is probably not a trivial or short-term trend. We are in for a rough time on the ideological front, particularly in big cities of the North where the feeling of threat among whites on the residential desegregation issue is already reaching traumatic proportions." Mr. Johnson agrees with sociologists who forecast Negro majorities for at least seven large cities by 1980. "Unless massive programs of urban renewal and economic rehabilitation are undertaken soon, we're in for a bad time," Mr. Johnson says.

"What happens when Negroes completely control the political situation in a center city? What if big business and finance move out to white suburbs? What if unemployment gets worse, schools deteriorate and slums get slummier? What if the Negro feels more hemmed in in 1966 than in 1966? The possibilities are frightening."
