Buzz Off

A DTH INTERVIEW with the 10 most prominent Chapel Hill flies revealed that 9 out of 10 bugs in North Carolina prefer Oatmeal Cookies with raisins to Realkill. The U. S. Department of Ugly Bugs disclosed Wednesday that 425 billion flies over three millimeters in length will die of natural causes before Columbus Day. (DTH Photo by Jock Lauterer).

goings on

By AVON PRIVETTE

As the leaves begin to brown and become bright, and the Carolina moon illuminates the now, cool nights, we realize Autumn is for real. A sharp date, good atmosphere, and superb entertainment can make this season of the year more meaningful.

Though all seemed lost when the Tops cancelled, I found that Raleigh's Embers Club filled all my expectations, and then some. As Ann (Element-to-add-meaning Number One) and I entered the club, we were greeted by the smiling faces of Mr. and Mrs. Josh Tomlinson (Embers' drummer, Bobby's parents), owners.

The warehouse-turned-night-club (element number two) featured small, tables with brightly checkered tables centered around a spacious dance floor and stage. The dark background with soft lighting added to the decor.

The Rivieras

The fabulous Rivieras of Charlotte (element number three) were providing the rhythm and blues sound that was acclaimed by many as the best sound featured at the club (excluding the Embers) in the last few months.

Nine members strong, this versatile group worked around three tenor saxes, a baritone sax, a trumpet, a trombone, an organ-piano bass, two guitars, and skins.

Smitty Flinn, group leader and male vocalist, was as amusing to watch as he was to hear. Miss Georgia Hand, female vocalist, combined styles of Dionne Warwick and Jackie de Shannon to belt out a sound that could easily become a national hit.

The Rivieras have backed such big names as Major Lance and The Impressions. Their 1964 hit, "Behold," is still popular in the area. Ted Hall handles their bookings.

Mr. Tomlinson reported that about fifty Carolina couples were present at the Embers Club Saturday. Tomorrow, the Embers Club presents the King Bees, who repeatedly have been showstoppers. Saturday, Harry Deal and the Galaxies will be on hand.

Also, tonight the combo circuit finds the Tassels appearing at The American Legion Hut. The Sultans Seven will be featured Saturday night in a GM Naval Army Fling.
