

Several Series Records Established In Bizarre Game

Dodgers' Errors Hand Birds Second Win

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers' defense collapsed in a record tying six-error farce Thursday while Baltimore's Jim Palmer became the youngest pitcher to throw a World Series shutout with a 6-0 victory over the mighty Sandy Koufax.

It was the second straight for the Orioles, who went into the Series as 8-5 underdogs. The Dodgers outdid the New York Mets in their zaniest days when Willie Davis, usually a fine center fielder, made a record three misplays in the fifth inning, and his mates chipped in with three more before the end of the Dodgers' longest day.

Many of the 55,947 fans began walking out in the late innings.

Almost overlooked in this horrendous collapse of the defense-minded Dodgers was the four-hit job done by young Palmer, who is only 20 years old. He won't be 21

Sandy Koufax was the innocent victim of the Dodgers' embarrassing collapse while Baltimore's Frank Robinson continued to perform with his powerful bat.

With a 2-0 lead in this best-of-series, Baltimore now takes a commanding position. Friday is an off day for travel, but they will resume Saturday in Baltimore where the next three - if three are needed - will be played.

In addition to the three errors by Davis in the fifth, Dodger errors were charged to Fairly for a wild throw in the sixth, Gilliam for a ground ball he booted in the fourth and Perranoski for his bad throw in the eighth.

until Oct. 15. The youngest pitcher to pitch a Series shutout was Waite Hoyt, who was 22 years and one month when he blanked the 1921 New York Giants for the New York Yankees.

The last team to make six errors in a game were the 1917 Chicago White Sox. The 1906 White Sox and the 1909 Pittsburgh Pirates share the same disgrace.

Koufax, the 27-game winner whose last game victory clinched the pennant for the Dodgers last Sunday, was an innocent victim of the embarrassing collapse.

He was working on a two-hitter and wrapped up in a 0-0 duel with young Palmer when Willie got the willies in the dazzling sun.

When Sandy left after six innings, he had allowed only one earned run among the four on the Baltimore side of the scoreboard.

That was more than enough for Palmer, a handsome youngster who likes to ward off the evil spirits by carrying bubble gum in his hip pocket and wolfing down pancakes for breakfast.

You had to see this fifth inning to believe it, and it still is hard to believe.

It started out calmly enough with a single to left by Boog Powell, only the second hit off Koufax, Brooks Robinson fouled out. Then it happened.

Paul Blair lifted a high fly to center which Davis seemed to lose in the sun. At the last minute, he grabbed for the ball around his knees, but it fell out of his glove for a two-base error.

Andy Etchebarren, the next batter, looked at a ball and missed two strikes before he, too, hit a ball into short left center.

In came Willie, but once more he lost the ball for an error. Davis compounded the goof by throwing the ball wild over third base, and Blair followed Powell across the plate.

It was the first time in the long history of World Series play that any one player had made three errors in the same inning. In fact, the record for a game is three, a mark which several admit with hanging heads.

Luis Aparicio's double to left knocked in Etchebarren with the third run of the fifth and it was all over but the boozing.

A storm of catcalls greeted Davis as he came into the dugout. When he went back out to center field and tossed the ball to his teammates warming up for the sixth, they cheered each time he caught the ball.

Willie had another shaky moment in the sixth when he raced madly into right-center for a ball hit by Frank Robinson. Ron Fairly appeared ready to make the catch, but the ball fell safely for a triple.

Powell's single knocked in the run that made it 4-0 a few minutes later.

Baltimore added two more in the eighth with the help of another error, this time a wild throw by relief pitcher Ron Perranoski.

Frank Robinson walked and Brooks Robinson singled before Dave Johnson singled off Perranoski's glove. Ron threw the ball into the dugout. It was ruled that Frank Robinson scored on the hit and Brooks on the error.
