

BIG QUIZ COMING UP—The logical thing to do when you've got an examination next period is to get to class early and bone up on the things you might have missed before you fell asleep the night before. Silas Sothel was the last governor of the Albemarle Colony, huh? Better write that down. It may be an ID. There are so many names to memorize! You feel so small when you think about everything you don't know. Oh well, another hour and it'll all be over.—Photo by Jock Lauterer.

Sociologist Predicts

Leisure Society Of Future Will Cause Many Neuroses

NEW YORK (AP) — If you plan to stick around until the 1980's this may be your life: Three-day weekends, three or four month vacations, Southern California-type living with emphasis on family and home, high income, abundance of material things. . . Sound good to you? It will to many people, but some won't like it, says Herman Kahn, physicist and Director of the Hudson Institute.

So along with our barbecue society we're in for a lot of beatniks, revolutionary-type movements and withdrawals from society." Kahn discussed the future recently in an interview before a speech to 300 women attending a "Quo Vadis, Today's Woman?" seminar. His views mostly were based on a current Hudson Institute study speculating about the quality of life in the United States from 1976 to the year 2000. Before he helped found the Hudson Institute at Harmon-on-Hudson, N.Y., in 1961 Kahn was associated for 12 years with the Rand Corporation.

EUROPEAN TACK

"The Europeans may return to the tradition of the gentleman — the man with many skills, none of which are very useful," said Kahn. "They may take extra productivity out in greater leisure or in avocations."

The Americans, on the other hand, are more likely to take it out in work and in increased material goods.

"People will live in 10-room houses with three cars in the garage and a helicopter on the lawn, but they won't have a maid, unless they import one from the underdeveloped world. The personal services will be imported."

As for income, something between 5 and 10 per cent of U. S. households may have a disposable income (after taxes) of between $40,000 and $50,000 a year.

Kahn said the hours of work are likely to decrease from the current 2,000 a year to something between 1600 and 1700, and it's not improbable they might drop as low as 1,000.

This sharp change in work patterns could be traumatic, he said. For the average man emphasis would be shifted from our current "work-oriented, advance-oriented, achievement-oriented value systems" to family values.

NO MEANING

"Many Americans will be satisfied, but others will find such a life meaningless and purposeless, and they will look for something to fulfill them," said Kahn. "They may find a new religion. There will be mass movements — both rational and irrational — cults, a kind of privatism, LSD without question."

Motorists: Get Set For Winter Driving

DETROIT (UPI) — It's that time of year again for car owners to start thinking about the problems of winter driving.

There are many things the smart motorist can do to minimize those problems, for himself and his car.

Now's the time, for example, to have the old bus taken in for a checkup. Have a mechanic sound out the engine, check the plugs and points. Change the oil, have a new oil filter put in, and a grease job on the chassis if it needs it.

Also — and this is important — check the condition of the battery.

Cold weather places a severe strain on a battery, because it must provide the power for starting a cold engine with thickened oil. The battery drain is much more severe than in the summer.

If your battery is more than two years old, it may still have the power to turn your engine over in warm weather but perhaps not enough to get it started in severe cold. Have it checked thoroughly, and if it doesn't test up to snuff, replace it. It may save you the trouble and cost of service calls this winter to get started.

Now, the radiator. Permanent type anti-freeze solutions are good for a long time. But they contain rust inhibitors that weaken with time. They're fine for at least two years. But if they're older than that the inhibitors may not be able to prevent buildup of rust and scale in the water channels inside the engine block and the radiator. If your anti-freeze is too old, have your cooling system thoroughly flushed out and replace the anti-freeze with a fresh supply.

And perhaps most important from the standpoint of your own safety, check very carefully the entire exhaust system.

Leaky connections, or a muffler or exhaust pipe with holes, can turn a car into a death trap.

Remember that in the summer time you drive with windows open much of the time, and fumes escaping into the car from the exhaust system blow out the window. But winter driving is done with windows closed, and if fumes are escaping from the exhaust system they will accumulate inside the car.

Carbon monoxide is odorless, and in even minute concentrations can cause drowsiness to a driver and passengers. This is a safety hazard in itself. In concentration, it can result in unconsciousness and death before anyone in the car realizes anything is happening.

So, have that exhaust system checked along with everything else.

HELD OVER THRU MONDAY!

"Such an overwhelmingly flawless work of tragic beauty that the viewer is stripped of objectivity and can only marvel at the emotions he is experiencing! A visual masterpiece of cinematography with such inescapable presence that one becomes defensively involved; acting that transcends its very definition! Marked with directorial genius, it is a tightly controlled, subtly consummate work of art that defies verbal interpretation. The emotional impact will leave you stunned in your seat, and you will probably weep, but you will leave the theatre acutely aware that something inside you has changed. To miss it, when it is there, would be an even greater tragedy!"
