

Killer Blames Devil Worm

CAPE TOWN, South Africa. (AP)—A psychiatrist testified for the defense today that Dimitrio Tsafendas told him that a "Devil-Demon" tapeworm he believed he had inside him caused him to kill Prime Minister Hendrik F. Verwoerd in parliament last month.

Dr. Harold Cooper, who interviewed Tsafendas four times in his jail cell, told the court that the defendant described the tapeworm as being "one and a half inches in breadth with serrated edges like a sword, which he could feel crawling around inside him, despite medical evidence to the contrary."

In attempting to explain the killing, Tsafendas spoke mainly about things political. Cooper testified at the opening of the trial. The psychiatrist said Tsafendas believed members of all races in South Africa should be free to intermarry so that a new race could develop and that he was opposed to South Africa's immorality act, which forbids interracial love.

Cooper testified that Tsafendas, previously described as a mulatto who passed for white, implied that Verwoerd was standing in the way of this "evolution," and that history would judge whether he was right in having assassinated the prime minister. Tsafendas's counsel, W. E. Cooper, asked the court to rule that the 48-year-old defendant is "mentally disordered" and thus be committed to a mental institution until his release is authorized by the state president.

This procedure means that Tsafendas is not required to plead to the murder charge until the court rules on the question of his sanity. Verwoerd was stabbed to death Sept. 6 as he sat in parliament. Tsafendas was employed as a parliamentary messenger at the time.

Prairie Dog Vanishing From Plains

EL RENO, Okla. (UPI)—The prairie dog, friendly little pest of the Great Plains, may soon disappear from Oklahoma.

An Army record of Feb. 3, 1876, reports on a single prairie dog town that stretched from Ft. Reno to Kingfisher creek, a distance of 22 miles.

Modern farming has just about eliminated the frisky little brown animal with the twitchy black tail. A colony survives on the Canton Game Management area. There are a few others on private property, but none is very large.

In all, according to the Oklahoma Wildlife Department, Oklahoma presently has a population of about 50,000 prairie dogs occupying about 15,000 acres of "towns."

Danny Kaye To Stop Here On UN Tour

Comedian Danny Kaye will arrive at Raleigh-Durham airport at 9:05 a.m., October 24 for a 20 minute stop as part of a whirlwind tour to promote United Nations Day and the United Nations Children Emergency Fund.

He will be welcomed at the airport by the mayors of Raleigh, Durham and Chapel Hill and officials of the North Carolina Division of the United Nations Association.

The trip to 16 cities in 13 states is being made by Kaye to help promote the 1966 Trick or Treat for UNICEF program.

Piloting a twin-engine Model 24 Learjet, the UNICEF's "Ambassador-at-Large" will hold press conferences, clown with the kids, accept keys to cities and spread the good word in cities from Newark N. J. to San Diego, Calif.

The distance of over 2000 miles will be covered in a total flying time of about six and a half hours, over a three day period.
