

Senior Coeds Will Have Job Meeting

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

The first of a series of three meetings on helping women select careers will be held Tuesday night.

The meeting, featuring a speech by Mrs. Harry Smith, will be held at 8 p.m. in Gerard Hall, followed by a discussion of the various futures that are available to women after graduation from college.

Discussions will include futures of careers, marriage, graduate school and community services.

The second meeting which will begin at 7 p.m. November 8 in 08 Peabody Hall will feature a marriage panel of married couples composed of students and non-students. They will discuss their particular problems and answer any questions of the audience. The panel will be moderated by Dr. William Eastman.

Continuing at 8:30 will be a discussion of careers for women, including how to interview for a job, and how to choose a job. Representatives of various departments will be present for informal discussions about the opportunities that are available in different majors.

The final meeting of the series is to be held November 15 at 7 p.m. in 104 Peabody Hall.

The program will be highlighted by several speakers giving recommendations as to whether or not women should go to graduate school and if so, where.

At 8:30 a meeting will be held on services to the community by the woman whether she be married, in graduate school, or a career woman.

Financial backing for the program is being donated by the Carolina Women's Council and the Panhellenic Council. Assistant to the Dean of Women Dershe McDevitt said that all senior women are strongly urged to attend all the meetings.

Senior women involved in the planning session for the meetings are Nancy Ehle, Pris Hager, Cheenie Smith, Betsy Price, Peggy Paul, Carolyn Hopper, Peytie Fearington, and Judy Rogers.

Candidates Meeting

There will be a mandatory meeting of all candidates in the fall campaign Thursday from 4:30 to 5:30 in Roland Parker II and III.

Candidates for class officers and honor council, party chairman and the chief campaign co-ordinator for each party should attend.

Candidates who can not attend must contact Doug McKeown at 967-3385 or the chairman of the Elections Commission.

State's Poverty War Prof Named CU Projects Veep

An N. C. State agricultural economics professor now filling a Poverty War billet in Washington has been named vice president for public service programs of the University.

Prof. Charles Edwin Bishop will begin in his new post about Feb. 1, taking charge of extension and adult education programs on all four campuses of the Consolidated University.

Bishop, 45, will also be in charge of projects involving state and federal government-connected research and service, CU President William C. Friday said in announcing the appointment.

Friday listed water resources conservation, coastal erosion, technical services to industry and business, and highway safety studies among the projects with which Bishop will be involved.

"Dr. Bishop will serve as coordinator, act for the president and direct research activities which he will initiate in these and many other similar programs that affect the development of North Carolina," Friday said.

"As a nationally recognized scholar, teacher and administrator, Dr. Bishop will bring to this position substantial experience in state, national, and international programs which will prove highly beneficial to the University's efforts in research and program development for North Carolina," he said.

Bishop is presently on leave from the University to serve as executive director of the President Johnson's National Advisory Commission on Rural Poverty.

An authority in economic development and labor mobility, Bishop has served as consultant to the U. S. departments of Commerce and Labor and to the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

Besides holding his Poverty War post, Bishop is also presently involved with the agricultural committee of the American Bankers Association, the science advisory committee of the Secretary of Agriculture and the agricultural board of the National Academy of Sciences.

VIGAH Plans Service Ideas For Students

Is your group looking for someone to help?

Or do you know someone nearby who needs help?

If so, then you should contact the Student Government committee called "VIGAH". The committee, officially named Volunteers In Giving A Hand, under a revised program this year, is serving as a liaison between student groups who want to help someone and those people who need the help.

The committee chairman, Betty Jo Gray, sees the committee as the "middle man between the campus and the community" for social service activities.

VIGAH's 12 members plan an information program to see how students can help the Chapel Hill-Carrboro community.

The first project that VIGAH has been able to arrange this year is set for Saturday.

Granville Towers has agreed to stucco a house in Carrboro. The project was started by another group outside the University last spring which left most of their materials at the house.

The Granville residents will use the materials already at the site to complete the project.

VIGAH is working with a number of social service groups in stockpiling lists of activities which campus groups can perform. Miss Gray has invited anyone with items to contact her through the Student Government office in GM.

American Farm Economic Association.

Dr. Bishop is the William Neal Reynolds Distinguished Professor of Agricultural Economics at State.

He received his B.S. degree in agriculture at Berea College in 1946, his M.S. in agricultural economics at the University of Kentucky in 1948, and his Ph.D. in economics at the University of Chicago in 1952.

He is married, has three children and is a native of Campobello, S.C.

Debate Group Off To Boston

Four members of the Carolina Debate Team will leave Friday for Boston, Mass., where they will enter the Boston University Invitational Debate Tournament.

This will be the first major tournament on this year's intercollegiate debating schedule.

The topic for this season is: "Resolved: That the United States Should Considerably Lessen Its Foreign Policy Commitments."

Making the trip this weekend will be the affirmative team of Barry Schochet and Victor Rattner, last year's Atlantic Coast Conference affirmative champions, and the negative team of Craig Bradley and Maury Stocks.

Accompanying them will be UNC's Director of Debate, Dr. J. W. Pence, who is in his first season here after directing the Virginia Military Institute program.

The team begins the season after winning the ACC championships last year. Among the schools they will be debating against at Boston include Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Dartmouth and MIT.

Hope Bus

Bob Hope will arrive at the Raleigh-Durham Airport Thursday approximately at 5:15 p.m. for his performance on campus tonight.

A bus will leave for the airport and Hope's arrival from the AFROTC Cadet center at 4:30 for all students interested in welcoming Hope to Chapel Hill and UNC. The bus will return to campus about 6 p.m.

All students interested in going to the airport on the bus should meet at 4:15 p.m. in the AFROTC cadet area.

Five-Man Committee To Study Paul Case

By DON CAMPBELL
DTH Staff Writer

A five-man committee was named last night by Dr. Raymond Adams, acting chairman of the English Department, to "reinvestigate the Michael Paul case from the beginning."

Adams named the committee after a meeting of English faculty members had voted "by an overwhelming majority" to give Adams the power to appoint the committee.

The committee includes: James R. Gaskins, a full professor and chairman of the committee; Daniel Patterson, an associate professor; Richard Lyon, an assistant professor, Gary McCown, a full-time instructor; and Charles Cherry, a part-time instructor.

Adams said the investigating committee has no deadline under which they must work, but said he suggested they make their report "as soon as possible." The committee held their first meeting immediately after the faculty meeting adjourned.

The recommendations of the committee will be discussed with the full-time faculty, Adams said, and if no changes are made, the recommendations will be forwarded to Chancellor Sitterson.

"I am very much pleased with this decision to appoint an investigating committee," Adams said, and added, "I have great faith in Chancellor Sitterson; I believe he will go along with what ever recommendation this department makes."

Adams said that there were from 60 to 75 part-time instructors at last night's faculty meeting, which lasted nearly two hours. The part-time instructors had been invited to the meeting, but could not take part in the voting since they were not a part of the full-time faculty.

In a statement released to the faculty members, Dr. Adams said: "I am concerned about two things in the process we are starting today; strict and complete fairness to Michael Paul and his rights, and fairness to a class of twenty-two freshmen who have felt the disorganizing effects of suspense, uncertainty, notoriety, and interrupted work."

Earlier yesterday, Paul released a statement in which he said: "I have every confidence that the English Department will arrive at a fair and honest decision. It is my sincere hope that the matter will quickly be settled so we can return to our primary concern of education."

Carolina Careers Talks To Begin

By KAREN FREEMAN
DTH Staff Writer

"Careers for Carolina" will offer a series of panel discussions Friday for students interested in careers in government.

This year's program has expanded to include an explanation of summer intern programs that provide students with first hand experience.

The conference is sponsored jointly by the Student Government and the Institute of Government. Its purpose is to acquaint students with public service career opportunities.

Chip Brethen, conference coordinator, will give a welcoming address, as will Bob Powell, President of the Student Body.

After the keynote address is presented by George Esser, Executive Director of the North Carolina Fund, participants will attend the three panels of their choice.

The panel on Public Administration will feature Roger H. Jones, Regulatory Division, Atomic Energy Commission, speaking on the federal level of administration.

G. C. Davis, Chief Recruiting and Testing Officer, State Personnel Department, will handle state administration while Leigh Wilson will take city and county administration.

Wilson, a UNC graduate in political science, has worked for the League of Municipalities and is now assistant executive secretary of the North Carolina League.

Provost Hugh Holman will conduct a discussion on higher education in the Education division of the panel discussions.

Opportunities in public schools will be led by Zane Eargle, assistant to the dean of the School of Education. He received his Ph.D. from UNC and has taught in the Durham school system.

Graduate of UNC and UNC Law School Alan Markham, now of the N. C. Department of Community Colleges will direct the discussion of Special Education Programs. Under the general topic of Social Services, Dr. C. W. Anderson of the School of Social Work will head a group concerned with public welfare, and John T. Gentry, assistant dean of the School of Public Health, will head one on public health.

Both are alumni of the School of Public Health.

The War on Poverty will be the topic for the discussion led by Robert Ward of the State Task Force.

Moving into the fourth series of panels, Specialties, alumni Robert Stipe, assistant director of the Institute of Government, and Reavis Frye, assistant director of the N. C. Recreation Commission, will lead discussions on city, county, and state planning and recreation.

In the field of Public Law, Milton Heath, asst. director of the Institute of Government and Administrative Assistant to the Chairman of the Federal Power Commission during 1963-64, will discuss opportunities for lawyers in federal and state administration. Bert Montague, asst. administrative officer of the court system, will treat the subject of lawyers and the courts.

The role of lawyers as city or county attorneys will be discussed by John T. Morrissey, counsel for the N. C. Association of County Commissioners, Morrissey is also a UNC grad.

The last panel, International Administration, will feature Alcott Demming, former ambassador to Uganda, in the field of foreign service, and A. A. Fernandez, recruiting officer, discussing the Peace Corps.

At the 6:30 p.m. dinner to be held in Chase Hall, Donald Hayman, assistant director of the Institute of Government, will address the conference on "Summer Internship Opportunities."

Discussions with former interns and panel members will be possible at that time.

Interested students should sign up for the conference at Graham Memorial Information Desk by October 27.
