Feeling Plus Freedom Plus Richness Would Satisfy Him

"Are you an abstract expressionist painter?" Tran Gordley was asked.

"Some newspaper reporter in St. Louis called me that," he replied. "But it doesn't really pertain now. I'm more interested in visual imagery, but I haven't really found it," he said. "I'm not going to be hard edged. I don't know what I'll be, but I can rule that out."

"It's the landscape I'm working with now. I like to get the feeling of the landscape, but I like the freedom of abstract expressionism. It would be nice to have the richness of the imagery of Renaissance painting — so natural, so right — combined with the dynamic qualities of the manipulation of the formal images in modern painting."

"Modern painting emphasizes the expressive potential of the formal elements of painting — the technical aspects. It would be nice if you could effect a merger of the two," he said.

Gordley, 34, is No. 2 man in the state's biggest art department. He is professor, chairman of the department of painting and assistant dean at the School of Art at East Carolina College in Greenville, home of 425 art majors and 20 full time art faculty. He is on leave this academic year to do further graduate work here at UNC, where he is studying art criticism, medieval art and the sculpture of the Parthenon.

A native of Iowa, Gordley has a BFA from Washington University in St. Louis and an MFA from the University of Oklahoma. His wife, Marilyn, also a painter, teaches with him at ECC, where he has been since 1959.

"What I've done at UNC is valuable," he said. "So much of the training of the artist today is in the manipulation of materials. There is so little food for the intellectual side. The artist is so much more than a manipulator of materials. My work here has reaffirmed my notions — my intuitions about art — that I felt without knowing the reason."

"It's been good for me to be a spectator and stand back and look over the situation. It's given me renewed faith to go on and do what I feel is important to me even though it's not fashionable today. It is becoming increasingly difficult for an artist to stand up against the current trend."

"I feel very strongly that the artist today ought to try to find some meeting of personal expression with a general humane approach to art. The artist seems to have taken a back seat, not to have too much to do with the art world. The artist doesn't have the strong commitment you see in a Titian or a Michelangelo," he said.

Asked about his teaching methods, Gordley said, "As much as possible I try to introduce the students to the breadth that painting can encompass — all the way from a traditional, visually oriented concept of art to a non-visual one. I try to make them essentially aware of the world around them — because I think you have to have a source for creative work, and a visual source is the best one. You have to be visually sensitive. "One of the functions of the teacher is to foster a visual sensitivity of the world about him which the student would not develop through normal functions," he said.

GEORGE KACHERGIS, professor of art and a top-notch painter at the University since 1949, is going to be on leave next semester. In anticipation of the move, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Jenner are sponsoring a showing and sale of Kachergis's paintings today from 2 to 5 at the Jenner home, 26 Lake Shore Drive, Chapel Hill. The event is open to the public, and Mrs. Jenner said, "There are lots of real bargains" in Kachergis's work.

DOCTORS APLENTY FOR IVAN

BONN, Germany (UPI) — The Soviet Union has more doctors per capita than any other nation, according to the Statistical Yearbook, released in Bonn.

The Soviet Union, says the Yearbook, has one doctor for every 467 persons.

This is Russ Kennedy of Balboa Island, California, on an in-port field trip as a student aboard Chapman College's floating campus.

The note he paused to make as fellow students went ahead to inspect Hatshepsut's Tomb in the Valley of the Kings near Luxor, he used to complete an assignment for his Comparative World Cultures professor.

Russ transferred the 12 units earned during the study-travel semester at sea to his record at the University of California at Irvine where he continues studies toward a teaching career in life sciences.

As you read this, 450 other students have begun the fall semester voyage of discovery with Chapman aboard the s.s. RYNDAM, for which Holland-America Line acts as General Passenger Agents.

In February still another 450 will embark from Los Angeles for the spring 1967 semester, this time bound for the Panama Canal, Venezuela, Brazil, Argentina, Nigeria, Senegal, Morocco, Spain, Portugal, The Netherlands, Denmark, Great Britain and New York.

For a catalog describing how you can include a semester at sea in your educational plans, fill in the information below and mail.
