More Telephone Lines:

Call Capacity Up 20 Per Cent

By PETER HARRIS
DTH Staff Writer

An increase of 20% in the capacity of the telephone company to handle long distance phone calls will ease the problem of reaching the operator in the evening.

The Chapel Hill Telephone Company, in conjunction with the Southern Bell Telephone Co., announced early this week that the increase was necessary to meet the new demands created by the addition of new phones in the Chapel Hill area.

There is a tremendous overload of long distance calls between the hours of 8 p.m. and midnight. The main reasons for the overload are:

— the increase in telephones due to the construction of new dormitories such as Granville Towers and Morrison.

— because most students call collect, they do not employ the Direct Distance Dialing access code and therefore they need operators to complete their call.

— the reduced rates after six p.m. and again at eight motivate most people to place calls between eight and midnight; there is no overload except between those hours.

The Southern Bell Telephone Co., which handles all long distance calls through Greensboro, has had difficulty meeting the new demands because of the tight labor market.

There are not enough women in the Greensboro area who either qualify or want jobs as operators. The overall unemployment rate for Greensboro is 1.8%, of which approximately half are women.

Thus, the labor market is small, and the number of prospective operators is even smaller.

The hours are irregular and the starting pay is $58 for forty daylight hours of work. The pay is increased for night work to approximately $62 a week.

The telephone company needs 55-75 new operators for the coming year.

The Chapel Hill Co. acts merely to install phones and bill customers. It receives a commission from the Bell Co. for handling the billing. The Chapel Hill Co. is owned and operated by UNC.

Most of the new operators employed by the Bell Co. are recent high school graduates or girls who have completed one year of college and dropped out.

In addition to servicing Chapel Hill, the Greensboro toll center also serves Reidsville and the tri-city area of Leaksville, Spray, and Draper.

UP Meets

UP will meet Tuesday night at 7:30 in Gerrard Hall to elect chairman, vice chairman, secretary, treasurer, sergeant-at-arms and five executive board positions. Written statements of intent to run for a specified office must be filed at the UP box at the GM information desk by 11 Sunday night.

Air Force

To Hit UNC

By LILONA SMITH
Special to the DTH

The United States Air Force will invade UNC this weekend.

"Top brass" Air Force officials from Washington, D.C. and the Air Force Academy will be on campus for the UNC-Air Force football game along with a large number of cadets and base personnel from North and South Carolina Air Force bases. Over a hundred Air Force Academy cadets and the Ninth Air Force Band from Shaw Air Force Base will also be here.

Activities planned are a Veterans Day Retreat ceremony to be held today at 4 p.m. in Coker Place and a large pep rally at Seymour Johnson AFB near Goldsboro, where dismantled old from buildings will be shoved into a bon fire.

Game-time activities include a pre-game show by the Air Force Academy mascots — falcons, which soar up and dive for bait on a string — and possibly a "fly-by" during the game by delta-wing jets from the South Carolina National Guard.

New Park

Regulations

Student parking lots will be open at 3 p.m. Monday through Friday, Dean of Men William G. Long announced yesterday.

Previously the lots were closed until 6 p.m. to all but designated student cars.

The change came with confirmation from Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson of proposals made by the Student-Faculty Traffic and Safety Committee.

The change was made to help students involved in afternoon intramural activities and to ease the parking situation for the evening shift at Memorial Hospital, said Long.

Other changes include:

— The parking area from the Bell Tower to the entrance to Kenan Stadium was changed from "A" (staff) designation to "C" (commuter) designation. This confirmed legally what was already occurring in reality, according to Long.

— Reserved spaces for faculty members during limited noon hours were designated outside the Faculty Club at the Monogram Club.

Chancellor Returns Paul To His Class, Following Department Vote

WRAL Gives News Report About Paul

WRAL - TV reported last night on the Michael Paul reinstatement saying "students who don't want to remain in Paul's class can seek other assignment."

The Raleigh television station reported that the English Department had released "an 18-page report, obviously intended to exonerate Paul."

"In some parts, the report was confusing," Channel 5 reported. At that point the reporter read excerpts from page three, then read excerpts from the next two pages which were apparently confusing to the reporter.

"The report said themes dealt with what the committee called 'love,'" the reporter said.

The reporter ended his story with a solemn: "The English Department's investigation of itself and the apparent reversal of position by the Chancellor apparently means the early return to classroom instruction for 24-year-old Michael Paul."

University Hosts Merit Semifinalists

At least 250 National Merit Semifinalists will be in Chapel Hill this weekend for a program designed to promote Carolina to them as their college choice next fall.

"An exceptionally well rounded group of students is important to UNC at this time of policy changing," Mary Susan Kirk, co-chairman of the National Merit Scholarship Committee, said in reference to the upcoming weekend of academic and social activities.

Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson and Dean C. O. Cathey will be the featured speakers at an opening convocation in Gerrard Hall today.

Campus tours will be given by members of Phi Eta Sigma, the freshman men's honor fraternity, followed by an introduction of the freshman honor's course and informal discussions with UNC faculty members and students.

Saturday morning students will attend classes of their own preference. In the afternoon, they will be guests at the UNC-Air Force football game.

Chancellor Emeritus Robert B. House will speak at a banquet for them in Chase Cafeteria. They are free afterwards to attend the Morrison combo party or see a special performance of the Playmaker's production of Antigone.

A reception will be held at 1:30 Sunday afternoon in the Morehead Planetarium to give the visitors a chance to meet Student Body President Bob Powell and other student government leaders.

Of the 122 men who participated in last year's program, 53 enrolled in Carolina this fall. For the women, 25 of 87 are freshmen here now.

"Of the 20 National Merit Scholars in this year's freshman class, 15 attended the program last year," said Bill Miller, the Committee's other co-chairman.

Semifinalists are required to pay a $3 registration fee and provide their own transportation to and from the University.

The girls will stay in the Women's Gym, while the boys will be housed in Morrison Residence College.

"We hope to start another scholarship program in which the recipients of University sponsored scholarships, as the Whitaker, can spend this type of weekend at UNC," Miss Kirk said.

GM Director Says Signing Artists Poses Problem

HUNTER GEORGE
DTH Staff Writer

Place yourself in this situation:

You're looking for a big name entertainment group to give a concert at UNC. You're lucky enough to find one with an open date (a rare thing these days), and if your timing is right the group is going to be in the area anyway, so you may get them for less.

If not, you decide whether to fly them in from the west coast or Timbuktu for the performance.

The group requires a guaranteed amount of money or a percentage of the house receipts, whichever is greatest. Fine. Your budget allows this. You're all set.

Except the group cancels at the last minute, claiming somebody got sick or something. Not so good. A lot of folks are going to be mad, but it wasn't your fault.

This situation is part of the risk which Graham Memorial Director Howard Henry takes every time he lines up entertainment for UNC.

"It's getting tougher every year," said Henry, who works with the GM student advisory committee to attract shows and concerts to the campus.

"Sometimes you have to book them (groups) 18 months ahead of time, sometimes six months, and sometimes you're just lucky."

The recent Mama's and Papa's concert in Carmichael Auditorium was one of those "fortunate" instances, he said.

"We just sort of fell into that one. They were scheduled for Toronto, New York and Atlanta when we booked them. We were right in line with their tour."

Which brings in another important factor: timing. If a group is going to be in the area and has an open date, it can sometimes be contracted for half its usual price.

"Of course, the really big groups couldn't care less about filling their open dates. It just means they'll have to pay more taxes." Although Henry claims "there's nobody in the world you can't get if you have the

No Seduction Theme Assigned Report Says

By BILL AMLONG
DTH News Editor

Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson "occurred" Thursday with the English Department's decision to reinstate Michael Paul as a graduate instructor.

The department faculty Wednesday accepted a five-man committee's report and recommendation that Paul be given back his Freshman English class.

Paul, a 24-year-old doctoral student from Detroit, Mich., was reassigned from teaching to research duties in mid-October after a furor arose over his assigning a theme on "To His Coy Mistress."

WRAL-TV accused Paul of assigning his students to write a theme on seduction. He denied this and was backed up by a committee which investigated the affair for the chancellor.

Paul was re-assigned, however, because the student-teacher relationship had been severely damaged, Sitterson said.

But after protests grew loud, Sitterson handed the matter back to the English Department for review and action.

The committee, headed by Prof. James Gaskin, Thursday released their report, stating that Paul had made no assignment concerning "seduction." It read:

"The basic assignment could be — and probably was — stated about like this: 'I want you to write a theme with the title "To My Coy Mistress," using (Andrew) Marvell's poem as the basis for your essay and I want you to make certain that you use imagery and the six special figures of speech in your essays. Themes are due Saturday."

The six figures of speech Paul referred to are allusion, irony, paradox, personification, exaggeration and understatement, and metonymy.

The committee reconstructed this dialogue as having followed the assignment:

STUDENT: "The Subject is vague."

PAULL: "I know it is; make it mean whatever you wish."

STUDENT: "Should the theme be in verse?"

PAULL: "No."

STUDENT: "Could it be on seduction?"

PAULL: "You might call it that. If you want to write on seduction, go ahead."

STUDENT: "Do you mean that you want us to give away our best lines?"

PAULL: "You could put it that way."

STUDENT (a girl): "Where does that leave us? What if you're a girl and don't have a coy mistress?"

PAULL: "Pretend that you are a boy."

STUDENT: "Could it be farcial?"

PAULL: "Yes, it's up to you."

"It should be emphasized," the report said, "that in talking to the committee no one student remembers all these questions and answers."

"The questions in which the words 'seduction' and 'lines' appeared were remembered by but two or three students; they seemed to think that in his answers Mr. Paul was playful, and the one student whose testimony on this point was the most circumstantial or detailed said that the instructor spoke 'joshingly.'"

"The most general view of the assignment was that 'Mr. Paul left it up to us.'"

Paul was also criticized for reading the themes having the themes read aloud in class.

The committee said, however, that this practice is recommended — at least for the first theme of the year — in the departmental "Information for Instructors of Freshman English."

After interviewing each of the 21 students in the class, the committee concluded that "We found no evidence of general embarrassment or of a spirit of license."

As for the "alleged vulgar diction" caused by the assignment, the committee said it found only two off-color words — one of them a pun — in all 21 papers.

Both these papers contained the off-color words were read in class Saturday, Oct. 15.

"The reading of the fourth and final paper," the report said, "was preceded by a dialogue that went about like this:

STUDENT: "My paper has language that might be a little rough."

PAULL: "How bad is it?"

Albright, Tyndall Present Protest

By LYTT STAMPS
DTH Staff Writer

A protest was filed yesterday afternoon in the election of Bland Simpson as freshman class president.

The protest means that the Constitutional Council will have a hearing to determine if the election was unfair, and, if it was, to set a date for a re-election.

Bill Robinson, chairman of the Council, said the hearing will probably be held the first of next week.

The protest was filed by Tom Manley for both Alan Albright and Robert Tyndall.

Manley, a former member of the Constitutional Council who coordinated the UP campaign for all three offices, said:

"In light of a number of obvious inconsistencies in counting procedure and in consideration of numerous complaints by individual students that their votes were not counted, I have no other choice than to protest the election procedure with respect to the Freshman Class.

"It is a lesson of sad experience that the elections board, conscientious though they may be, cannot successfully eliminate the human factor involved in the voting procedure.

"It is not my intent to place blame for the inaccuracy on any one person, nor is this protest filed in behalf of the individuals involved, but in hopes that it will lead to a realization by the student body of the need for immediate and concrete reform of the Elections Board."

Tyndall said he had joined the protest because of the inconsistency in how votes for him were counted.

"I can understand a mechanical error," he said, "but I do not see my losing 50 votes in the recount."

Albright was named president of the class Tuesday, but lost the position to Simpson in a recount Wednesday.

Maddox Contest Heads To Court

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Republican Howard Callaway, locked in a winless governor's race with Democrat Lester G. Maddox and a write-in candidate, Ellis Arnall, said today he favors another vote by the people to decide the election.

But Maddox said he was glad the issue had been thrown into the Democratic legislature. It also has been taken into federal court with a hearing set Friday on a move to block election by the legislature.

Neither nominee managed a required majority in Tuesday's voting because of write-in ballots for Arnall, a former governor backed by a group of moderates and liberals.

Incumbent Gov. Carl E. Sanders, a Democrat, was ineligible to succeed himself.

With almost all of the votes counted, unofficially the totals were: Maddox 438,818, Callaway 436,592, Arnall 55,597.

Callaway's camp still was hopeful the final, official tabulation would give him a slight plurality, obviously some advantage if the election would be decided by the legislature.

Callaway said he would not file a lawsuit. "I will play the game under the rules, whatever the rules are," he said at a news conference.

Any type of popular vote, including a runoff election, would be preferable to legislative decision, Callaway said. But the Republican said he would take his case to the General Assembly if that is required. He said he had not talked to "a single member who didn't say he would put his state above party."

Maddox said at a news conference he believes a federal court suit challenging legislative election of a governor will be thrown out. He declined to predict victory.

But, he said: "I am not claiming victory, but I am glad the issue is in the hands of good Democrats who are in a big majority in the legislature. I am hopeful that I will get in."

Coupon Needed For Yack

The Publications Board and the Yackety Yack have announced a new registration system which will govern the distribution of year books in the spring.

A statement issued yesterday said:

"In order to print a sufficient quantity of Yackety Yacks, anyone desiring one is kindly requested to fill out the coupon below and send it to the Yackety Yack, C-o Graham Memorial.

"You will not be entitled to receive a Yackety Yack unless the Yack has a record of having received a coupon."

I would like to receive a Yackety Yack.
