

Dinner Theater Presents Both Buffet And 'Picnic'

RALEIGH — A three-act Pulitzer prize-winning melodrama, "Picnic," opened for a one-month nightly run at the Raleigh-Durham Barn Dinner Theater Wednesday.

The eight-member cast struck its set on the "Magic Stage" of the Greensboro "Barn" after their show there Sunday night and started new rehearsals in Raleigh-Durham under Calabrese, resident director for productions in both of the arena-style dinner theaters.

Written by William Inge, "Picnic" had an extraordinarily successful run on Broadway. The three-act contemporary play is set in a small Kansas town and the plot unfolds in a 24-hour period.

One of the members of the acting cast, Joanne Marsic, may be remembered for her supporting role as "the woman" in last spring's opening production of the Raleigh-Durham Barn, "Sunday in New York." In "Picnic" she is cast in the part of "Flo Owens." A native of Orlando, Fla., she has extensive experience in children's stock, and off-Broadway theater, and has played in shows such as "Oklahoma," "Lady Chatterley's Lover," and "Bye, Bye Birdie."

The buffet line menu for the meal preceding the 8:30 p.m. show was announced as follows: Braised beef jardiniere, turkey with dressing, (Seafood Fridays), shrimp and macaroni salad, sweet potatoes, lima beans, Caesar salad, cottage cheese and congealed cranberry salad, spiced crabapples and peaches, rolls, drink, and dessert.

Harpsichord Heads Revival Of Baroque

PONCA CITY (UPI)—When the baroque period musical wave, currently the rage on the East Coast, hits Oklahoma, Doug Martin, of Ponca City, will be able to ride it in style.

Martin, 19, and a music major at Southwestern College in Winfield, Kan., is now caught up in a revival of the baroque period of music.

He made his own harpsichord. He got the idea for the 16th to 18th century musical instrument last year from one of his college professors, who played a clavichord which he had built from a kit.

Young Martin learned where he could get a kit for a harpsichord. During the summer months, he worked evenings, putting the instrument together.

The harpsichord is a one-volume instrument with no foot pedals. It has a lever called a lute stop which causes the sound to simulate the music of a lute and mutes the volume somewhat.

The harpsichord produces its tones by the plucking of its 57 strings by plastic fingers mounted on jacks operated from a 57-note keyboard.

The strings are made of three sizes of steel wire and three sizes of brass wire.

The harpsichord weighs 150 pounds. Its three legs unscrew to make a compact carrying case.

The first performance of the instrument was at the Kaw City Methodist Church where Martin is a substitute organist.

President Chase Helped The South By Applying UNC To Reconstruction

By OTELIA CONNOR
Sixth In A Series

The University has been fortunate in that it has always found the right man to head the University in its chronic states of crises. The only period in its history in which it seems not to have been confronted with a life and death situation was in the relatively quiet period between 1835-1861, during Governor Swain's administration.

In every aspect his devotion to the scientific method and sound scholarship. He was a superb teacher, scientist and organizer.

The Stories Of Our Presidents

President Chase was the man of the hour in the decade of the twenties after World War I, when greatly increased attendance at high school made it imperative for the colleges to take care of the ever-swelling numbers who wished to enter.

Graham was a humanist. Literature and philosophy were basic in his training. He saw his task as that of having the University develop, in student and citizen, the ideals of service, civic-mindedness, and inner spiritual resources. The University had its greatest development in the field of ideas and spirit under E. K. Graham.

Chase had a different background. Born in Groveland, Mass., 1883, graduated at Dartmouth, 1904; M.A. at Dartmouth, 1907; Ph.D. Clark University 1910; trained in the fields of theoretical and social psychology; he came to the University as a professor of Psychology in the Department of Education, 1910. When Venable resigned the presidency in 1914, Chase became one of President Edward Kidder Graham's chief assistants until Graham's death, October, 1911. Upon the death of Dean Stacy, January, 1919, Chase became Dean of the Faculty.

In April, 1920, in the presence of a notable gathering, Harry Woodburn Chase, tested as versatile scholar, teacher, and administrator, assumed the duties of the presidency of the University to lead it through what proved to be one of the most distinctive and thrilling decades of its life." The physical expansion of the campus under Chase in the twenties, the development of the South Campus and the off-campus expansion to the east and southeast have been reviewed previously.

Among the academic accomplishments under Chase were the development of a scientific Department of Sociology around which could be built a School of Public Welfare, an agency which would train county officers, enabling the University to render distinctive contributions to the development of the human wealth of North Carolina; the training in the graduate school of the experts in all fields essential to the upbuilding of North Carolina and the South; the establishment of an institute for research in the field of the social sciences to study the social aspects of the life of the State and region; the building up of a great library and the training of librarians to supply expert service to schools, colleges and public libraries of the South.

To train experts for the South's rebuilding, Chase established the departments of music, psychology, sociology, and journalism, the schools of commerce and public welfare, engineering, and library science, re-direction of the Graduate School, establishment of the Institute of Government, the development of the Southern Historical Collection, and the organization of the University of North Carolina Press, all of which were essential in effecting the transition of the University from the status of a college to that of a well-rounded university. It was admitted to the Association of American Universities in 1922, an organization of universities in the United States and Canada which had obtained notable distinction in the fields of graduate study and research. UNC became the 25th university to be admitted.

The crowning glory of Chases's administration was his loyalty to principles of academic freedom and the right to teach and investigate, as demonstrated in his fight against the Pool Bill, and any outside interference in the effective adherence to these principles. Thus the Univer-
