

No Heat Or Light But Jeff's Stays On

"IT GOT SO COLD and dark in here the other day I had to close," explained 'Jeff's' owner Jim Mousmoules as he surveyed the faithful student customers in his darkened store. "Jeff's" a Chapel Hill tradition was damaged by the November 17 Varsity Theatre fire but the Campus Confectionery is now open again — with no heat or lights. Regardless, people keep coming in. "Jeff's was completed in '27, the year I started to work in the Orange Print shop," reminisced retired Chapel Hill Printer, William Pugh, (left). Jeff's future is tied in with the uncertain fate of the burnt-out Sorrell building. If the building goes, so will Jeff's.

The Supreme Court: What Will It Change?

Students will vote on a constitutional amendment changing the court structure of the student judiciary Tuesday.

The proposed amendment, if adopted, would create a Supreme Court of the Student Body composed of a chief justice and four associate justices appointed by the President of the Student Body and confirmed by a two-thirds vote of the Student Legislature.

The Legislature would have the power to impeach the justices for misconduct or non-performance in office.

The proposed Supreme Court would replace the existing Constitutional Council which student leaders have found to be unsatisfactory.

The new court would have original jurisdiction in controversies concerning executive and legislative action raising questions of law arising under the Student Constitution or laws enacted under its authority.

The Supreme Court would also hear appeals from the lower courts when precedential error is alleged to have occurred.

Other changes included in the amendment are the establishment of a Panhellenic Court and the clarification of the jurisdiction of the various lower courts.

As required by law, The Daily Tar Heel is publishing the provisions of the amendment along with the provisions of the existing Constitution which the amendment affects. The provisions of the proposed amendment are printed in bold face type.
