

Campus Calendar

FRIDAY

There will be a meeting of the '69er Sophomore class newspaper staff today from 3:30 to 5 p.m. in the Woodhouse room of G.M. Any persons interested in writing for the paper who cannot attend, contact Joe Coltrane at 968-9175.

Mr. Stephen M. Pizer of Harvard University will lecture today at 2 p.m. in 265 Phillips Hall. Mr. Pizer, sponsored by the Department of Information Sciences and Computation Seminars, will speak on "A Man-Machine Interaction System for Producing and Processing Radioisotope Scans."

There will be an important meeting of the White Rose Society tonight at 7 in 216 Mowbray Hall. All students interested in supporting the House of York against the traitorous and treasonous claims of the House of Lancaster are cordially invited. Refreshments will be served afterwards by Richard Neville, Earl of Warwick.

The Baptist Student Union will have its regular supper-study meeting at 5:45 p.m. today. Robert Rupen of the Political Science Department, UNC's foremost student of China and Southeast Asia, will speak on "The Dilemma of Vietnam." Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

The Department of Linguistics, Slavic and Oriental Languages, in co-sponsorship with the Curriculum in Comparative Literature, announces its first lecture on Slavic literatures and languages. Jesse Zeldin, Associate Professor of English at Hollins College, will speak on "Heaven and Hell: Some Thoughts on the Brothers Karamazov" tonight at 8 p.m. in the Day Hall Faculty Lounge. All faculty and interested students are invited to attend.

SATURDAY

There will be an important meeting of the Red Rose Society Saturday night at 7 in 216 Beaufort Hall. All students interested in supporting the House of Lancaster against the treasonable and upstart House of York are cordially invited. Refreshments will be served afterwards by Edmund Beaufort, Duke of Somerset.

SUNDAY

A dinner will be served at the Wesley Foundation Sunday evening at 6, sponsored by the Methodist and Episcopal congregations in the university. Everyone is invited. Space permits only forty reservations, and they may be made by calling 942-2152 before noon on Sunday.

A reading of W. H. Auden's "For the Time Being: A Christmas Oratorio," is to be given Sunday evening in the Chapel of the Wesley Foundation at 7:30. The public is invited.

There will be an attempted reconciliation between the factions on Sunday night at 7 in 216 Tudor Hall. The meeting is being sponsored by the Pink Rose Society, and all Yorkists, Lancastrians, and neutrals, as well as those who wish to end this fratricidal strife, are cordially invited. Refreshments will be served afterwards by Thomas Bourchier, Archbishop of Canterbury.

Florida Gov. In Surprise Marriage

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)—Florida Gov. Claude Kirk and a beautiful blonde Brazilian socialite he met two years ago on a business trip are planning to marry, or former husband confirmed yesterday.

His legally separated wife, who used her maiden name of Miss Erika Mittfeld, and the handsome new governor plan to wed Jan. 30 in the United States, said theatrical producer Carlos Eduardo Dolabella.

"Claude is a very fine person and I like him," said Dolabella. "I hope they will be very happy."

He said his former wife is obtaining a divorce in the United States with his consent.

There is no divorce in Brazil, but legally separated persons often remarry abroad. Dolabella, who was separated from the German-born Miss Mittfeld in late 1963, has remarried television actress Miriam Persia.

The Dolabellas have a 4 year old daughter, Ariana. Kirk "is especially fond of my daughter," said Dolabella.

Kirk, a Republican, set Miami society buzzing when he took Miss Mittfeld to his inaugural ball two days ago. He had not been seen with her publicly in the United States before, although Rio society columnists reported on her departure from Brazil 15 days ago that she and Kirk were planning to marry.

Kirk and Miss Mittfeld dropped from sight after the ball, arousing fresh speculation. But Kirk aides said the governor was on a three day vacation and insisted Miss Mittfeld was not with him.

In Rio, where Miss Mittfeld has been living with her former mother-in-law, Mrs. Marina Oyama Teixeira, her maid said her employer was still out of town and had not returned.

Miss Mittfeld, in her late 20s, is a familiar sight in Rio society. Tall and blonde, she presents a striking figure in her bikini at the city's fashionable beaches.

She and Kirk met at a social function after her separation about two years ago, friends said. The governor had come to Brazil to consider setting up an investment firm, they said. Kirk is 40.

The Dolabellas met when he was working in the Brazilian trade promotion office in Frankfurt, Germany, and they were married there. They returned to Brazil about 1960.

Junior Art Sale Nets Charity $

The Junior Class art sale, held the week before Christmas netted $275.45 profit, all of which was donated to local charities.

According to Class President Don Johnson, 1450 of the $1 art prints were sold. Johnson said the Junior Class is "very happy" with the success of the sale.

Last Thursday, a check for the above amount was presented to the Inter-Church Council of Chapel Hill.

Johnson said the money will be used to set up a children's day camp outside Carrboro.

One of the local fraternities plans to work in conjunction with the day camp project, Johnson said, and will clear land in the spring for a playground at the day camp site.

The population of the six European Common Market nations as of January, 1966, was 183,569,000.

Aging Poet Writing Less, Enjoying More

FLAT ROCK, N. C. (AP)—Carl Sandburg celebrates his 89th birthday Friday, taking life easy. He has all but given up his own writing in favor of reading the historical and poetical works of others.

The smiling, white-thatched poet and Lincoln biographer spends much of his time in bed now and rarely is seen tending his goats, strumming a guitar on the front porch of his home near Flat Rock or roaming the hilly countryside.

Still, said Sandburg's wife Paula in a telephone interview, he is interested in current events and does quite a bit of reading.

"He is beginning to enjoy life now instead of being the creator of books and poetry," she said. "He likes mainly historical books and poetry."

Sandburg no longer grants interviews. He has been in ill health more than a year.

Mrs. Sandburg said her husband usually spends mornings in bed, but gets up in the afternoon.

"He sometimes walks around the house in the afternoon or at least inside the house," she said. "And he likes to watch television—especially news programs."

The Sandburgs live at Conemara, a goat farm near Flat Rock in western North Carolina. They have been married 58 years.

A few old friends are expected to visit Sandburg on his birthday, but no special party is planned.

"He won't eat cake so there's no sense in baking a birthday cake," his wife said. "He never has liked cake or fancy things."

Sandburg hasn't done any serious writing since he was hospitalized in September, 1965, for an intestinal condition. A nurse visits his home daily.

His wife is confident that Sandburg will live to be at least 99 now that he has completed his 88th year. On his 80th birthday, Sandburg predicted he would die at an age divisible by 11.

At the time, he said: "I had two great-grandfathers and a grandfather who died in years divisible by 11. If I don't die at 88, I'll go on to 99."

Sandburg has chosen to refrain from commenting on current political issues for the last few years.

"He wants to leave that to younger men," Mrs. Sandburg said. "He is for peace and attempts to avoid war and everyone knows that. But he will leave to others the way to accomplish it."

New Miniumbrellas 'For Light Rain'

NEW YORK (AP)—While designers such as Hannah Troy are calling for an end to serenity and sophistication, the fashion accessory makers are promising another silly season.

A shapely blonde in a flesh colored body stocking strutted and clattered today in $500 worth of dangling pearls said to be a discotheque dress. It was at the assessorama show for style reporters here for the New York couture group's semiannual press week activities.

A mini girl carried a mini umbrella ("For light rains," she said) which matched her vinyl miniskirt. A leggy lass displayed neon green gams that glow in the dark.

At the jewelry displays were short fat earrings painted like bugs and long, twinkling ear chandeliers that practically make grooves in the shoulder. There were necklaces, too, made of cotton and colored brilliant hues to rival the current papier mache craze.

Meanwhile, Hannah Troy, a particular favorite with petite-sized women, was waging her battle for the return of prettiness with a so-called glider collection.

Simplicity was the scheme of things as Jackie Kennedy-type manikins glided elegantly onto the runway in long and short costumes that glided across their bodies in a suggestive way which nevertheless did not suggest too much. Sometimes the line was monastic and pure white as the lady floated along in a floor length tan dress. At other times the usually high necked, long sleeved dresses were dizzying with silver dollar sized dots or splatters of specks. Combining blacks and whites, every designer's joy this year, was also Hannah Troy's.

And wearing pants are a part of being ladylike, especially for evening, as paradoxical as it seems. Miss Troy's models paraded in white jump suits sparkling with jeweled buttons. Buttoned over these were regal white fitted floor length coats. Tied around them were upturned apron skirts.

Originala, the high fashion house that makes cloth coats which are as costly as fur ones, also took up the cudgels for classic chic instead of sensationalism.

Their models marched out in short-sleeved, coffee-colored coat dresses with creamy white rows of buttons and low waisted leather belts.

Coats, and some of the suits made up the fashion house too, were collarless. These allow for a variation in looks, depending on the blouse, high-necked sweater, or colorful scarf worn with them.

To keep up with the changes in the weather, the firm also created some leopard spotted cottons with the textile of canvas.
