Mansfield Talks On U.S. Policy

Majority Leader . . .
Mike Mansfield

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield will speak tomorrow night in Memorial Hall on the topic of "Central Concerns of American Foreign Policy."

The 8 p.m. speech is one of Mansfield's very rare public appearances.

Sponsored by the Carolina Forum, the Montana Democrat will be "offering new views and suggestions on the conduct of U.S. foreign policy in Europe, China and Vietnam" according to Robin West, Forum chairman.

"Mansfield's talk will be a major foreign policy speech," West said.

Mansfield, said West, "is one of three outstanding dissenters, along with Senator Robert Kennedy and Senator J. William Fulbright, of some American foreign policy."

West stressed that "this is a remarkable opportunity for the student body, particularly in the light of the upcoming campus Vietnam referendum."

WUNC-TV Channel 4 will carry the speech live, as well as the 20-minute question and answer session following.

Mansfield will arrive at 5:25 p.m. at the Raleigh-Durham airport and will hold a press conference there.

The Senator, arriving three days before his 64th birthday, never graduated from grammar school or attended high school, but has B.A. and M.A. degrees from Montana State University.

He left school at 14 and served in the U.S. Navy for the duration of WWI. In 1919, he enlisted in the U.S. Army, and in 1921, he entered the United States Marine Corps for two years.

On returning from service, the Montanan took entrance exams to enter college. All of his education has been in his native state, except for two quarters at UCLA while working on his Ph.D.

Mansfield has traveled extensively, particularly to Southeast Asia and Vietnam, under the direction of Presidents Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson.

He was first elected to Congress in 1942 and served for five terms in the House of

Miller Wins Coveted Everett Case Award

GREENSBORO — Take four Sophomores who didn't play that way, add a senior who found himself and finish with a junior superstar.

The result was an 82-73 victory over the Duke Blue Devils last night.

The Tar Heels ended a long road of twenty eight basketball games. It was a road which took them into national prominence, and which last night earned them a ticket to the NCAA Eastern Regional Tournament in Maryland this week.

Carolina, a team which staggered to victory against N. C. State and Wake Forest, put all its potential together during fifteen long minutes of basketball against Coach Vic Bubas and his Blue Devils.

The game was desperately exciting and always undecided till its final two minutes.

The Tar Heels fought off the desperate final surge which brought Duke within five points, 70-65, with a long 4:25 left to play.

But Bob Lewis, oblivious to all the pressure in the packed coliseum made good on a 1-1 foul situation. Suddenly Duke's sophomore substitute Steve Vandenberg lost his head. His off-balance shot was picked off by the second half of the L&M pair, Larry Miller. Miller scored seconds later from the left side.

Then Bob Verga fouled Lewis, and the All-American from Washington added two more points from the line.

Suddenly, with 1:53 remaining, the Tar Heels led 76-68. The basketball team from Durham became only a memory.

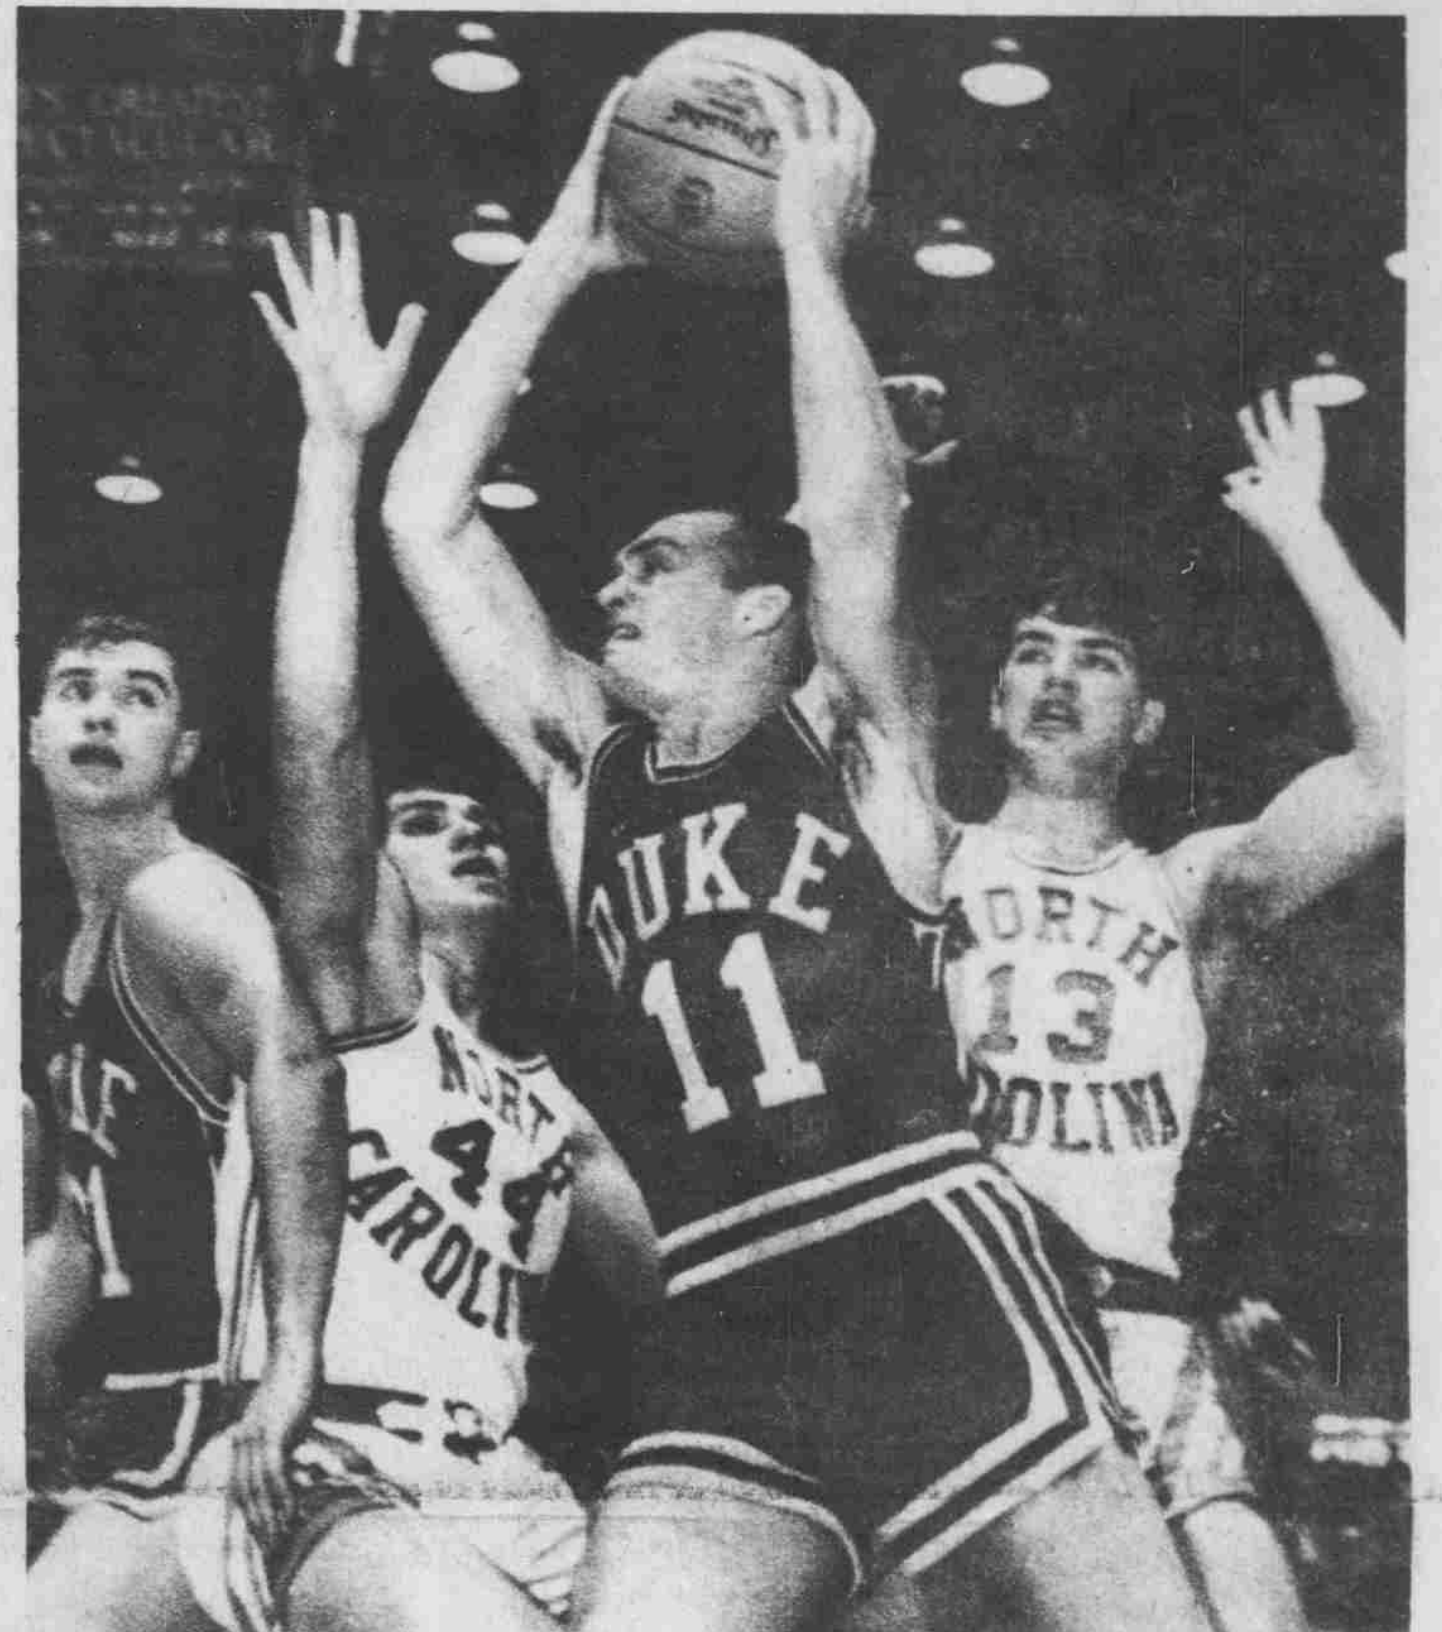

The momentum swayed back and forth with the slow but persistent regularity of a saw in the first half.

Duke played the opening five minutes of the game looking as though they would power their way to the championship. Then the Tar Heels, employing a full court press began to force Duke into numerous offensive errors. They began a drive which tied the score 29-29, with 4:48 left to play in the first half. The Tar Heels stretched their lead to six, 40-34, at the buzzer.

Throughout the second half Carolina was never tied, and throughout most of the final twenty minutes maintained a nine point lead.

A decisive factor throughout the second half was the foul trouble of Duke's finest rebounders, Mike Lewis and Bob Riedy. Riedy left the game with five fouls with 15:15 remaining in the game. Lewis is picked up his fourth foul during the opening minutes of the second half. He was forced to play cautiously until he finally joined Riedy with just over seven minutes to play.

Larry Miller, for the second time in as many nights, was the star of the Tar Heels. He sparked his team's first quarter comeback, and when the

'Black Power' Backs Powell

BIMINI, BAHAMAS (AP)—One of America's most militant civil rights figures injected the Black Power issue yesterday into Adam Clayton Powell's campaign to regain his Congressional seat.

"Beep, Beep! Hup! Hup! Black Power!" exclaimed Stokely Carmichael, who first popularized the term.

Standing beside Powell, Carmichael told a news conference he would do all in his power to help Powell get re-elected in the April 11 special election in New York City's Harlem district.

"I'll strike my Black Power," the 25-year-old head of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) said. "Nothing but Black Power. That is the major theme."

Neither Carmichael nor Powell mentioned James Meredith, the Republican candidate opposing the 58-year-old Democrat in the election.

It was during a 1966 Mississippi Civil Rights March instigated by Meredith, first Negro to enter the University of Mississippi, that Carmichael projected the term "Black Power" into nationwide prominence.

Carmichael, Trinidad - born resident of New York City's Bronx, blamed "pure, unadulterated racism" for Powell's March 1 exclusion from Congress for alleged misuse of government funds.

"Never before has there been such an unholy alliance by white liberals and white racists as that which caused Mr. Powell's exclusion," Carmichael said. "They wanted to get themselves a nigger."

Carmichael said SNCC would campaign actively for Powell in Harlem.

"We will tell them to vote him back in," the Civil Rights leader said. "We will tell them that in the streets, and we'll ring door bells."

His organization, Carmichael said, will work with the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) in the campaign for Powell. CORE Chief Floyd McKissick flew to Bimini early this week to throw support behind Powell.

Powell said other supporters will arrive next week on this British-owned fishing island where he lives. He mentioned Julian Bond, Negro member of the Georgia House of Representatives; Dick Gregory, Chicago entertainer, and Mervyn Dymally, California State Senator.

Carmichael spoke of Powell as an "exile" and asserted: "Mr. Powell doesn't have to campaign."

Stokeley Carmichael Sets Duke Address

DURHAM—Stokeley Carmichael, a ramrod for the Black Power movement in the U. S., will bring his controversial views to Duke University Friday.

Carmichael has agreed to field questions in a closed session at the Duke Law School and later will make a major address in Page Auditorium. His meeting with law students is set for 3 p.m. and his public address is scheduled for 6:15 p.m.

This is Carmichael's first appearance at a predominantly white southern university since he moved into the forefront of the Black Power movement. His visit to Duke is sponsored by the Men's Student Government Association.

John Kinney, secretary of the MSGA, said Carmichael has announced he will offer general remarks on education in the U. S. and has agreed to answer questions from the audience. The public will be admitted.

Carmichael is former director of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee. He is a civil rights activist who has carried him into Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi where he engaged in voter registration drives.

A spokesman for the MSGA reported Carmichael has vetoed a press conference or dinner with Duke student leaders.

Long ECC Fight Seen

(Related Story Page 6)

RALEIGH (AP) — The legislative fight shaping up over independent university status for ECC will be only one in a line of loud and long controversies over education in the North Carolina General Assembly.

Both the squabble over the North Carolina Speaker Ban Law and the struggle over changing the name of North Carolina State were long, drawn out political battles.

The East Carolina request for separate status has split the legislature on a sectional basis.

Dr. Leo Jenkins, president of ECC, leading the crusade, said in a 1966 speech it is "an ancient right of the people to petition directly to their representatives in the legislature."

Gov. Dan Moore has made clear his opposition to separate university status for ECC. State Sen. Robert Morgan, D-Harnett, chairman of the ECC board of trustees, joined in the figure for ECU and now looms as the grand marshall of the parade.

The North Carolina Board of Higher Education, at the request of ECC, named a "blue ribbon" group of out-of-state consultants to study the college and its readiness for university status.

The report has not yet been publicly released, but will be the focal point for the legislative battles.

Morgan demanded a copy of the report, even going to the attorney general's office for a legal ruling. His wishes were granted, but the board of higher education said it had planned all along to send Morgan a copy, and the demand was totally unnecessary.

Many see the independent status as the beginning of the end for the consolidated university system.

When and until the higher education board report is released, the question remains as to the readiness of ECC for university status.

Lady Bird To Tour Appalachia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's first lady will drop in for a look at a planetarium, college campuses, adult evening classes and an isolated mountain school on a 1,500-mile Appalachian journey next week.

She wants to see for herself what millions of federal dollars are doing to promote education, says Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson. And the quest will take the President's wife to West Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee, March 13-15, to six schools and institutions getting over $3 million in under 18 education bills.

The White House has labeled it an "adventure in learning." As to why this three-state area was picked, the White House said it was geographically "within our reach" with a variety of projects that tell the education story, including problems of disadvantaged youngsters from poverty areas.

Mrs. Johnson will join school children on a field trip to a planetarium-cultural center in Charleston, W. Va. She'll travel 70 miles by chartered bus through the Smoky-Blue Ridge mountains to meet Teacher Corps volunteers and sit down for a school lunch with youngsters in remote Canada Township, N.C., where it's 11 miles down the mountain to the nearest telephone.

Three Democratic governors — Buford Ellington of Tennessee, Dan Moore of North Carolina and Hulett C. Smith of West Virginia — will join the first lady on her travels through their states.

Her first stop Monday afternoon will be Charleston, W. Va., for a look at the Sunrises Cultural Center, its planetarium, art gallery, garden and nature center.

Tuesday, she will travel in Western North Carolina from Asheville, boyhood home of author Thomas Wolfe, where she will take in an adult evening class in 8th grade math.
