

The Daily Tar Heel

76 Years of Editorial Freedom

Invitation Sales
Today and tomorrow are the last days for the sale of graduate invitations. Sales are in Y Court from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Volume 75, Number 110

CHAPEL HILL, NORTH CAROLINA, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1968

Leadership Students

All students listed in the Tar Heel as participants or alternates for the Leadership Development program are requested to attend a meeting at 4 p.m. in 105 Gardner today.

Founded February 23, 1893

WRC To Rewrite Visiting Standards

By TODD COHEN
of The Daily Tar Heel Staff

The Women's Residence Council last night unanimously voted to reword some of the regulations concerning visiting in men's residences, because "you can't legislate rules telling women what to do off campus," according to Sharon Rose, chairman of WRC.

The vote came at a joint meeting of the WRC and eight women members of UNC's board of trustees.

The trustees arrived yesterday for a two day visit of Chapel Hill.

Miss Rose says that the purpose of the change was to eliminate wording which required judging personal integrity, responsibility, and a n d

It is also the consensus of WRC that "rules aren't to act as deterrents; they are guidelines for girls to follow."

The old rules, it is felt, act as deterrents.

WRC will hold another meeting tonight to continue vote on the rules. Recommendations will be made to the administration and any change will be effective only upon administration approval.

It was voted to extend visiting hours in men's social and professional fraternities for women not under closing hours to 3 a.m.

It was also voted to delete the regulation which forbids women students to visit men in bedrooms which are rented in Chapel Hill residences.

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

Assistant Dean of Women Heather Ness believes that the change is "not legislating in the sense of encouraging people in bedrooms."

"Instead, the logical realm of enforcement of specific rules is on our own campus. But off campus, it's very difficult to legislate," she believes.

Before the meeting last night, the trustees, WRC members, and administration officials met for dinner.

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

Assistant Dean of Women Heather Ness believes that the change is "not legislating in the sense of encouraging people in bedrooms."

"Instead, the logical realm of enforcement of specific rules is on our own campus. But off campus, it's very difficult to legislate," she believes.

Before the meeting last night, the trustees, WRC members, and administration officials met for dinner.

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

Assistant Dean of Women Heather Ness believes that the change is "not legislating in the sense of encouraging people in bedrooms."

"Instead, the logical realm of enforcement of specific rules is on our own campus. But off campus, it's very difficult to legislate," she believes.

Before the meeting last night, the trustees, WRC members, and administration officials met for dinner.

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to the rules in order to make them more flexible and practical," she says.

The trustees agreed with the ideal behind the change, but were concerned with public reaction to it.

They hope "the press will not blow this thing out of proportion."

This was the change which prompted the most debate from the council members and trustees.

According to Miss Rose, "growth, development, and responsibility are the backbone of WRC's philosophy."

"We want to take a more positive approach to