

52,000 Expected In CU By 1975

RALEIGH (UPI) — President William Friday said Monday the Consolidated University of North Carolina will have 52,119 students in 1975.

Two Chosen For A Year In Goettingen

George Wilkins Jr. of Hendersonville and Marcia Anne Koomen of Raleigh have been selected to represent UNC in the Goettingen Exchange, it was announced by Bill Riggan, Chairman of the Exchange Committee of the ISC.

Under the government sponsored program two Americans will study in Germany, and two Germans will come here for the academic year.

This year for the first time it is hoped that the students will receive academic credit, according to Steve Mueller, Chairman of the International Student Center. In the past only the Lyon program has been able to offer credit, he added.

If programs are unable to offer academic credit for the study, then a serious problem is posed by the draft, Mueller explained.

Many capable students are discouraged from applying for programs which do not offer credit because they may be immediately drafted, he added, citing a personal experience.

Alternates for the program are John Lentz and Clyde Milner.

Selections were made on the basis of academic qualifications, participation in campus activities, attitude, and potential benefit to UNC upon returning, according to Mueller.

Friday also reviewed for the Board of Trustees the legal mandate of the University "to serve as the primary state-supported agency for research in the liberal arts and sciences, pure and applied, and for doctoral programs."

At a press briefing before the trustees meeting, Friday said, "The action of the 1967 General Assembly didn't change the basic purposes of the Consolidated University." Friday was referring to legislation which created a system of regional universities made up of East Carolina, Western Carolina, Appalachian, and North Carolina A & T.

Friday said the first "major phase" of a long-range study of the university's plans is now complete. He gave the trustees "some of the preliminary findings."

He said campus enrollment is 32,989 at the four branches this year, and will reach 34,977 in 1968-69, 44,484 in 1972-73 and 51,229 in 1975.

Friday said advanced graduate and professional programs in agriculture, engineering, forest resources, home economics, journalism, pharmacy, public health, and textiles will not be needed on more than one campus of the university within the planning period of 1975.

"We have found that with normal expansion the university will be able to meet the estimated needs of the state for Ph.D. programs in the fine arts, the humanities, the social sciences, and the natural sciences with the exception of biology where the deficiency is not in capacity but in the number of qualified and motivated students," Friday said.

He said new Ph.D. programs will be developed if support is available in anatomy, library science, nursing, and social work.

"It has been found that the needs of the state in the area of the health sciences should be restudied and an appraisal made of the resources that will be required to support them at an adequate level," he said. "The results of this exceedingly important study will be forthcoming."

Morehead Interviews Set

A total of 111 boys from North Carolina high schools and 26 private preparatory school will come to Chapel Hill this weekend to be interviewed for 1968 Morehead Awards to study at the University of North Carolina here.

The boys will be interviewed Friday through Monday (March 1-4) by members of the Central Selection Committee and the Board of Trustees of the John Motley Morehead Foundation. Winners will be notified by mail after they return to their homes.

A total of 60 boys have been nominated by North Carolina high schools this year. The 26 private preparatory schools nominated 51 boys. Six of the preparatory school nominees also are North Carolina boys.

Morehead Awards provide four-year, all-expense-paid undergraduate educations at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. Among the most valuable undergraduate scholarships in the nation, they are worth $7,000 to North Carolina boys. Out-of-state students receive $8,700 to make up for higher tuition requirements of non-state residents.

The scholarship program was established at UNC in 1951 by the late John Motley Morehead, a graduate of the University and native North Carolinian who resided in Rye, N.Y., until his death in 1965.

The awards are granted on the basis of outstanding merit as reflected in academic ability, character and leadership. Need is not considered.

A member of the Class of 1891, Mr. Morehead wished to attract to Chapel Hill outstanding students who would distinguish themselves as citizens in later life, thereby enhancing the prestige and public service of his alma mater.

Since the first class of undergraduate scholars was graduated in 1957, a total of 198 Morehead Award winners have received degrees from UNC.

Ten Students Participate In Model UN

Ten UNC delegates were involved in two fictitious crises and emergency meetings at the 41st Annual National Model UN held last week in New York.

The delegates, headed by Secretary General Doug Martin of the Middle South Model United Nations Secretariat, attended the sessions at the Statler Hilton to make preparations for the Middle South Model UN to be held at UNC on March 6-10.

Three aspects of the UN—the Economic and Social Council, the General Assembly, and the Security Council—were included in the program.

The UNC delegates represented Algeria on the Security Council whose sessions revolved around Rhodesia and the Middle East Crisis.

The emergency meetings were about the United States' use of nuclear weapons and the sale of U.S. nuclear weapons to South Africa.

Prior to the NMUN, the Carolina delegation visited the Algerian Mission in New York for a briefing on the country's foreign policy.

UNC's official delegates to the Security Council, Fred Hamlet and Dennis Falchy, visited the Arab Information Center and revisited the Algerian Mission for additional interviews concerning the Arab-Israeli dispute.

As the only Arab nation on the Security Council, the UNC delegation worked with the Arab bloc in the General Assembly and represented the Arab viewpoint to the Council.

Language Courses To Start At ISC

By LOUISE JENNINGS of The Daily Tar Heel Staff
Intensive language study sessions sponsored by the International Student Center will begin this week.

The sessions which will be offered for the first time this semester are taught by native speakers during one hour sessions which will be scheduled twice a week.

The classes will be informally structured, and will emphasize only conversation, according to Steve Mueller, Chairman of the ISC.

The classes are designed to supplement regular classes in which there is usually only a very limited opportunity for individual practice in conversation.

The program has the support of the department heads, according to Mueller. It is hoped that the sessions will demonstrate the advantages of 5-day a week language courses, which are used in many major universities, he added.

The sessions are available free of charge to any student, but it is advised that anyone who is interested have at least two semesters of the language so that he will be able to understand the conversation.

Classes currently offered Russian, French, Spanish, Portuguese, German, Italian, Greek, Chinese, Hindi, Urdu, Korean, Japanese, and Swahili.

Classes scheduled this week are Russian which will meet Thursday at 12:00 p.m. and Friday at 3:00 p.m. upstairs in Lenoir Hall; Chinese, Monday and Wednesday at 4:00 p.m. in the ISC Library; and Italian, Tuesday and Thursday at 4:00 p.m. in the ISC Library.

Also German, Tuesday and Thursday at 4:00 p.m. at the ISC; Greek, Wednesday at 5:00 p.m. at the ISC; French, Monday and Wednesday at 4:00 p.m. at the ISC; and Spanish Tuesday and Thursday at 4:00 at the ISC.

UNC Debaters Win First In Tourney

By REBEL GOOD of The Daily Tar Heel Staff

For the second time in the last three years the UNC Debate Team has won the coveted "Uncle's Trophy," given to the strongest team at the annual ACC Tournament.

Carolina's debaters won three trophies and captured three speaker's awards Feb. 23-25 at the University of Maryland.

The topic debated was, Resolved: That the federal government should guarantee a minimum cash income to all citizens.

The novice team of David Lester and Champ Mitchell won first place in the affirmative division with a record of three wins and one defeat.

Lester won the best speaker award and Mitchell placed third.

The novice negative team of Louis Nanny and David Kruse was the only undefeated team in the tournament. Nanny placed second in the speaker's award competition in his division.

The varsity team of Maury Stocks and Tom Foster, which debated both sides of the question, placed third in the negative category.

The strongest varsity team was fielded by the University of South Carolina.

The affirmative teams argued that every family should be guaranteed an annual income of $3000 plus one half their annual earnings, according to James Pence, debate team coach and an assistant professor in the Speech Department.

The also argued that federal administration would be better than the present policy of state direction of welfare programs, said Pence.

The negative teams, whose position was generally more tenable according to Pence, argued that the program was unworkable due to the bureaucracy involved.

Their other major points were the inflationary tendencies of such a program, and its adverse effects on labor-management relations, said Pence.
