

Silent Sam's Dignity Restored

By LOUISE JENNINGS
of The Daily Tar Heel Staff

A group of students from Edwards House of Morrison received both compliments and complaints Monday for "trying to restore Silent Sam's dignity."

Over the weekend some unknown party covered the statue of Silent Sam with orange, green, red and yellow iridescent paint, the Morrison students were trying to remove it with turpentine, rags and small files.

During the five or six hours the group was working passers-by had varied reactions. Many volunteered to donate contributions to the price of turpentine. Two law students went into town and bought rags.

The group said they were "most often accused of being either KA pledges or the persons accused of painting Sam."

To let people know of their "honorable intentions" they placed two small confederate flags on Sam's shoulder and on the butt of his rifle.

A psychology faculty member reportedly asked the Chancellor to have the flags removed.

Later the Assistant Dean of Men approached the group and asked that the flags be removed "so as not to create an embarrassing situation" one of the boys who was cleaning the statue explained.

He then took the flags but told the students they could have them later.

Campus safety director Author J. Beaumont passed by when the students were working and said "if you find out who painted him don't involve us," according to one of the students cleaning the statue.

Otella Connor passing by reportedly "praised her boys" and told them they were "her brothers."

A faculty member in the admissions office gave his approval to the group and said his great grandfather had fought in the Confederacy.

A Chapel Hill businessman offered to let the boys spend the night in his downtown office to look out for anyone else who might try to paint Sam.

A bearded student with orange and green paint on his clothes reportedly told them "Don't worry; it can always happen again."

The students cleaning Sam were mostly freshmen and sophomores from North Carolina. They worked from 11:00 until about 4:30.

Perhaps the best tribute to their labor came from one student who was sitting at the base of the statue studying a notebook. "Because of him I'm going to flunk a psych quiz in forty-five minutes," he said.

Casper's 267 Wins GGO Shoots Final Round 66

GREENSBORO, (UPI) — Billy Casper, playing "Quite well," fired a 5-under par 66 Monday for a total 17-under 267, the lowest four-day tally of this PGA season, to win the $137,500 Greater Greensboro Open.

Casper picked up first prize money of $27,500, bettered George Archer's 268 at the Pensacola Open as this year's lowest 72-hole score, and matched last year's GGO record 267, also posted by Archer, with his performance of 65-67-69-66-267.

"I played quite well today," said a cheerful Caspe. "I'm probably in the best shape I've ever been in going into the Masters."

Casper took the lead in the first nine holes, pulling away from 1967 PGA champion Don January who had tied the 36-year-old golfing superstar at 12-under 201 after the third round earlier in the day.

Casper picked up four more birdies against one bogey on the back nine to withstand a late challenge from defending champion Archer. Archer finished the 31st edition of the GGO at 68-71-67-65 to tie four strokes off the pace at 271 with Gene Littler who carded a 67 and Bobby Nichols who toured the Sedgfield Country Club course with a 65.

During that time he toured the Far East for the Air Force.

"The rest from the tour definitely helped me," he said. The win raised his official money total to $50,819, second only to Tom Weiskopf's $60,742, and was his second victory of the season. The other was at Los Angeles. He had previously won the GGO in 1962, making the 1968 GGO the eighth tournament he has won at least twice.

The GGO ended as it had opened—with rain.

Big Four Sports Day Set April 29

By BOB COLEMAN
of The Daily Tar Heel Staff

Carolina will have the home edge in the Twenty-Second Annual Big four Sports Days to be held here on Monday, April 29th and its a good thing! The Tar Heels have been the undisputed winner only once in the last eleven years. The best recent finish was the first place tie with State in 1966.

Managers are requested to advance the names of any intramural stars in badminton, bowling, handball, horseshoes, golf, table tennis, tennis, softball, volleyball and rod and gun events.

Last year UNC took table tennis, tennis, softball and tied for first in the rod and gun events but finished third behind Duke and State, beating only Wake.

Chapel Hill will also be the site of the First Annual Consolidated University Co-Rec PLAY Day on Tuesday, April 23rd, April 25th in case of rain. Branches of UNC at Chapel Hill, Raleigh, Greensboro and Charlotte will compete.

A sure sign of Spring is this notice form the intramural office: NO BEER OR ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES ARE ALLOWED ON THE PLAYING FIELDS. APPROPRIATE ACTION WILL BE TAKEN.

Applications for residence hall managers will be accepted through April 12th. The sign up sheet for interviews, to be held after Easter, is in the Intramural Office.

Softball and badminton will be played through Wednesday, tennis, golf and water polo will start immediately after the Spring break. Softball will resume Tuesday, April 23rd.

Results from last week's intramural games:

In the white league, DKE survived a Beta Sweat Sox rally for a 4-3 victory and Chi Psi White got a homer and two singles from John Strickland en route to a 9-5 win over the Sig Ep Poles.

The Law Aardvarks nipped Dental III in the final frame, 6-4, in graduate play. Law III Red downed City Planning, 5-1.

Applications for residence hall managers will be accepted through April 12th. The sign up sheet for interviews, to be held after Easter, is in the Intramural Office.
