The wonder of it all! For those not fortunate enough to be pre-registered, it wasn't wonder but drudgery. Believe it or not, all those forms with the endless repetitious blanks are necessary to keep track of the more than 6,000 students here for second session.

Coed Assistant To Leave UNC

By MARY BURCH

"I am distressed by the increasing disposition among students on campus that the administration is here solely to suppress them," said Assistant to the Dean of Women Dershie McDevitt.

"The student seems to feel that the administration is trying to tell him how to run his life," she said. "This is not the case. The administration's role is to lend support when it is needed—to be directional rather than judgmental."

Dershie McDevitt, who has been an Assistant to the Dean of Women for the past three years, will be leaving in September. During her three years here, she has fostered that vital link between the student and the administration through her work with orientation, Panhel, and her personal contacts with students.

Mrs. McDevitt, or "Dershie" as she is known by most students, graduated from UNC in 1964 with a nursing degree. Her husband graduated from UNC Law School in June.

"I'm not sure when or where we will be moving," she said. "We may decide to remain in Chapel Hill. Our plans are indefinite now."

During her final interview, Dershie discussed the changes which have occurred during the past three years here.

"The first year I was here, UNC admitted 350 freshman girls—the largest number ever previously admitted. The changes have come in the adjustment to the increasing enrollment.

"Before the fall of 1965, UNC was a University with a girl's school attached. UNC offered a great deal of freedom to the transfer who had been used to a girl school's restrictions. Freedoms and privileges should come when the coed is ready for them and when she can cope with them."

With the admission of coeds to the liberal arts program, adjustments had to be made in the approach to education, Mrs.

McCarthy Campaigns In N.C. Delegate Bid

By BILL RUSSO
Tar Heel Editor

Senator Eugene McCarthy brought his presidential aspirations to Raleigh this morning in meetings with Governor Moore, the North Carolina Democratic delegation and two public rallies.

(As of deadline time no text of his remarks at either the rally or the press conference was available.)

Senator McCarthy appeared yesterday in Richmond, Virginia. This visit was the first in a series of appeals to the southern states in his bid for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

While in Richmond he spoke to Governor Miles Godwin of Virginia. He made no public address.

However at a press conference McCarthy said that he was making an attempt to persuade the delegates to do away with the unit or block vote rule at the convention. He continued, describing it as thwarting the majority wishes of the Democratic Party. He said that he had no estimate on his present delegate strength.

McCarthy said that his presidential attempt was based more on a response to a public calling than a quest for presidential power.

When asked about the lack of response among Negroes to his campaign, he said that he had always received their support in his home state and would continue to receive it on a national level.

McCarthy, in discussing his talked-about visit to Paris, said that no plans have been made as he had not renewed his vaccinations.

McCarthy was due to arrive at the Raleigh-Durham Airport at 9:00 this morning where he was slated to address a public rally before leaving for the Sir Walter Hotel in Raleigh.

At the Hotel, he plans to meet with the North Carolina delegates before addressing a full caucus of the 131 delegates and alternates.

A news conference is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. in the Hayes-Barton room which is to be followed by a public rally at the MacLaurin parking lot on Fayetteville Street.

After the rally, McCarthy will fly to Charlotte, North Carolina, where he will speak to a gathering at the airport there. Then he will fly to Atlanta, Georgia, to meet with the Georgian delegation and other political figure.

McCarthy hopes that this visit will be influential in swinging the North Carolina delegation, which casts 59 votes in Chicago, to him. They are presently committed to favorite son candidate Governor Moore. It is felt at the present time that the majority favor Vice-President Humphrey. Humphrey declined an invitation to speak to the caucus.

A highlight of today's visit is the motor cavalcade from the airport to the hotel.

Many Chapel Hill residents and Carolina students are expected to be at the series of rallies and working in downtown Raleigh for the Senator during the day. Local McCarthy headquarters expect that at least 2000 people will travel to see McCarthy from Chapel Hill by chartered bus and by private car.

At Memorial Hospital

Additions Underway

By EVIE STEVENSON

The North Carolina Memorial Hospital is in the process of expanding its present facilities. Additions to the existing building plus added construction are being built.

The Ambulatory Patient Care Facility which will be built onto the south and north of the hospital, will add 268,000 square feet of space. It is hoped that the state General Assembly will approve the addition of 6 more stories to the Ambulatory Patient Facility in the fall. This would add space for 250 additional beds.

A new Health Science Library Building is under construction at the present time and will be used by all five of the Health Affairs Schools.

The Medical School will be given a Basic Science Teaching

Facility but will be for the benefit of the Schools of Pharmacy, Public Health, Dentistry, and Nursing as well.

The Basic Educational Facility for the Dental School will make possible larger classes. The new Swing Research Building will house one or more medical school basic science departments as well as temporary lab space for faculty of the School of Medicine.

The Campus Telephone Exchange is being added to improve the telephone system for the main campus and the health affairs area.

Plans for the future include multi-deck parking lots in Victory Village which adjoins the Health Affairs Area. It is hoped that by the end of the summer 400 permanent parking spaces will be open for visitors to the hospital.

A Child Development Center

is in the drawing stage now. Construction should begin this fall for research, faculty offices, and psychiatric care for children.

The Hospital has plans in the making for the expansion of the Medical School's student body from 75 to 100.

A Clinical Sciences Building is being planned to give additional office and laboratory space for the clinical faculty.

At the present time the hospital has a budget of about 12 million dollars. After the addition of the Ambulatory Patient Care Facility, the budget will increase to 17 million.

The hospital now serves 14,000 inpatients from all counties of North Carolina and 125,000 outpatients. The number of outpatients will be increased to 200,000 after the completion of the Ambulatory Patient Care Facility.

Court Cases

Six UNC students were tried and sentenced by the summer court for violations of the campus and honor codes.

In the first case, a coed was tried for violating the campus code when she left her dorm after closing hours. She was found guilty and sentenced with an official reprimand.

An official reprimand was also given to a coed for violation of the campus code when she returned two-and-a-half hours late to her dorm.

A third coed was tried for a violation of both the campus and honor codes when she left her dorm after closing hours and lied to a policeman. She was found guilty on both counts and given a one semester definite probation.

An official reprimand was given to another coed for violating the campus and honor codes when she was found guilty by the court of returning to her dorm an hour-and-a-half late and lying to the dorm vice-president and to the assistant attorney general for women.

In the fifth case, a coed was tried and found guilty of violating the campus and honor codes when she returned to her dorm an hour-and-a-half late and lied to two policemen. She was given an official reprimand.

A male student was found guilty of cheating, a violation of the honor code, in the sixth case and sentenced to definite suspension until September 1, 1968, and then probation for a semester.
