

Group To Aid Biafra Sets Goals In Informal Meeting

By ERICA MEYER
DTH Staff Writer

"A lot of people are going hungry over there," said intense, bearded Joel Polin, organizer of a campus movement to aid Biafra, which met Wednesday.

The tiny African country is engaged in a bloody civil war with Nigeria in which the "big difficulty... is a chain," said Polin, "of getting the food from the producer to the consumers' mouth... and everywhere along the chain there's a hangup."

Biafran native Ndubisi Egemonye gave a brief historical sketch to the nine person meeting. A major organizational meeting will be held at 4 this afternoon in 111 Murphy. All are invited.

The nucleus group meeting Wednesday narrowed its focus down to two major areas. The first encompasses a fund-raising drive with humanitarian aims and the other is a letter writing campaign to urge that this issue be presented to the United Nations.

The group debated whether its aims should be political or humanitarian ones. But the general consensus seemed to be that people might hesitate to contribute for both food and weaponry since "guns don't ever help," in the words of a coed in a yellow sweater.

But, as stated by a slim, red-haired girl, "I don't think anyone would have objections to giving food to hungry children."

Egemonye stated that Biafra now has "so many widows... so many orphans." He told of massacres, assassinations, idealistic aims and futile, broken treaties.

Some of the problems mentioned included not having the "right men in the right jobs" and "nepotism." The results could be seen last October when "200,000 died of malnutrition and related ailments," according to Polin.

He advocated helping "the victims of this war, the noncombatants, women and children." He quoted statistics on the high rate of starvation and malnutrition in Biafra, saying "a four-year-old child doesn't have a political position." "My own priorities," he said, "are for the children, the starving, the needy."

Polin was optimistic and impatient. "There's a lot of things that we can handle," he told the group, "if we can direct the energies on campus, show people that there is a way to reach the situation."

IFC Proposes Guidance System

UAWMF March Planned Saturday

A march in support of freedom of speech for servicemen will be held Saturday Dec. 7, sponsored by the United Anti-War Mobilization Front (UAWMF).

The march will begin at 1:30 in the Morehead Planetarium Parking Lot, proceeding westward on Franklin Street towards Carboro.

will sponsor two offices on campus, to be set up two or three days before formal rush begins. Representatives from each participating fraternity will serve as counsellors to rushees as they make decisions.

Among other business covered at the IFC meeting were a donation of $100 to the Christmas House project, plans for a Christmas party at the Murdoch School for retarded children on Dec. 13, and the establishment of a student faculty commission to study the results of the Conference held Nov. 2-3.

A rush commission reported its interpretation of the rules for rush parties, saying none could be held in fraternity houses during holidays or between terms.

The IFC Court reported its action on a bottle-throwing incident that occurred Saturday night, Nov. 23. The fines levied totaled $175, paid by four fraternities.

IFC President John Callan warned of "much stronger action" in any future incidents of this kind.

Bill Overton, chairman of the Activities Committee, announced the Christmas party to be held at the Murdoch School in Butner. The party is scheduled for 3-5 p.m., Friday, Dec. 13.

Overton asked for one representative from each fraternity to attend the party. The retarded children will be 32 boys aged 9-16.

Overton also announced the Christmas House Project which is an extension of the Empty Stocking Fund. The IFC agreed to contribute $100 as the Panhellenic Council did earlier.

John Callan announced the establishment of a study commission to study the results of the IFC Student Faculty Conference which was held on Nov. 2-3 in Reidsville.

The study commission will contain six or seven students, two faculty members, the Assistant Dean of Men, Dickie Baddour, and IFC Chaplain John Butler.

It was reported by the representative from Phi Sigma Kappa that the building on the house on Finley Golf Course Rd. will be completed after Christmas.

President Callan announced the building plans for the Carolina Inn had originally included plans for a road through the property that now

Wholesale Price Lists Denied

Wholesale prices for Book-Ex merchandise will not be made known to the Student Stores Committee, representatives learned at a meeting with William Geer, Director of the Office of Student Aid, J. A. Branch, enterprise manager, and Tom Shetley, head of Student Stores.

According to Shetley, wholesale prices are being kept "confidential" because of certain deals Shetley has with the wholesalers. Shetley informed the committee that all they (the students) needed was retail price comparisons with other student stores.

During the meeting, Shetley brought out that students were needed to work for the student stores quite frequently. Geer replied that at the Student Aid Office, there were "few calls from Student Stores for people to help." According to Shetley, state laws governing state institutions limit his hiring better personnel for increased wages. Therefore, he is forced in many instances to hire several inferior workers, whose total wages were "too high for the work they do."

Bob Manekin, a representative on the committee, noted that student workers were often more efficient and cheaper than others. He also requested that a "communication hot-line" be set up between Student Stores and the Student Aid Office.

Net Book-Ex profit was about 22.88 cents on the dollar for the year ending June 30, 1968, Shetley reported. He considers this "a fairly good profit."

Over the past four years, Book-Ex net worth has increased nearly 40 per cent. However, according to figures furnished by Branch, net income has decreased to $311,000.

Profit, Shetley explained, is being reinvested into inventory. In 1958, he reported, there was an inventory turnover of 1.9 times the stock on hand at the beginning of the year. In 1968 the figure has increased to 3.4. Shetley stated that Student Stores "has not passed an increased cost of the merchandise to our customers as rapidly as we have incurred those costs."

Manekin asked that a student accountant go over the figures supplied to the committee for interpretation of them. Branch agreed to this and added that the information requested by Ken Day, student body president, in a letter Nov. 29 would become available the next week.

The residence colleges will be contacted by the Student Stores Committee in order that students may register specific complaints with the Student Stores.

violations in many cases because they will constitute interference with personal welfare or academic pursuits.

The clause contained in the first bill concerning double jeopardy was held in committee for further study for the following reasons:

First, by the Judicial committee felt that such a proposal would strip the student body of all authority to regulate itself if action was taken by the civil authorities.

Secondly, the proposal only eliminated dual penalties, not dual trials. Thus, if the student body voted on the issue at the proposed referendum they would probably think that they were voting to abolish something while in reality they were not.

Finally, the committee felt that such limitations in the proposal could be accomplished by other means, such as court procedures.

Concerning the revisions, Student Body President Ken Day made the following statement:

"I'm very pleased with the speed with which the Judicial Committee has worked to frame a set of options for final decision by the Student Body before Christmas.

"I urge most strongly that the committee exercise great care in making final revision so we will have intelligent, coherent choices on the ballot Dec. 17.

"The Legislature must exercise a thoughtful judgment in providing meaningful options. Furthermore, we, as a student body, must be prepared to undertake a thorough discussion of the changes proposed and demonstrate a strong support for the bill we adopt by a large and thoughtful referendum on Dec. 17.

"In this way, we can maintain the respect of the rest of the University community as we work to improve our judiciary."

Copies of the revised bill will be available to legislators today in the Student Government offices so that they may study them for the session this evening.

"Fortunately, I possess two of each."

When THE INSTANT BUTTON BOOK ripped off sales of 14 copies in Seal River, Maine and 22 in Bladder, Arkansas I knew that it wouldn't be long before the literary public would be screaming for more. Hence, my second book of hilarious button sayings, which after much hair searching and soul pulling I decided to entitle SON OF THE INSTANT BUTTON BOOK.

Each button saying is printed on pressure sensitive paper with a tenacious, sticky backing. You get a blank button to stick them on, or you can stick them on any non-protesting object. Some of the sayings will make you angry. Some will make you laugh. All will make you sick if you eat them. None will grow hair.

You can pick up both books for a dollar each at some book stores. Others may throw you out.
