

NORTH CAROLINA SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Symphony To Celebrate 25 Years With Concert

The North Carolina Symphony will present a concert Sunday at 4 p.m. in Memorial Hall for the University community in appreciation for its many services over the years. Sunday's concert, given under the sponsorship of the Chapel Hill Chapter of the N. C. Symphony Society, is part of the celebration of the Symphon's 25th anniversary as a professional touring orchestra.

"professionals" because they are highly trained musicians performing full time and on salary.

(Although actually founded in 1932 by the late composer Lamar Stringfield, the Symphony did not engage in extensive touring with professional musicians until 14 years later.)

Every year for six and a half months North Carolina becomes "home" to the 60 men and women who gather to perform under the direction of the Symphony's well known director, Benjamin Swalin. Many travel great distances to do so. For the second straight season, three have come from Guatemala, C. A., and two from Canada. Among the other players, 24 states are represented, as well as Korea and Japan.

During the months that the North Carolina Symphony is not on tour, the orchestra disbands, and employment takes several forms. Many of the musicians teach during the off-season months, others join touring music shows and participate in summer music camps.

The 1969-70 orchestra is a young one. The average age is 32, with ages ranging from 21 to 72. Over half the musicians are in their twenties.

Vince Simonetti, tuba player now in his third season with the North Carolina Symphony, is a typical member of the 1969-70 orchestra. He is under 30, talented, well educated and has played with numerous well known professionals.

A native of New Jersey,

TUBA PLAYER, VINCE SIMONETTI

Vince received both a B. M. and a master's in music education from the Manhattan School of Music in New York. His credentials include being a member of the Moiseyev Ballet Orchestra, the Martha Graham Ballet Orchestra and Paul Lavalle's Band of America.

Vince will join with the 59 other professionals on the stage at Memorial Hall Sunday to perform an hour program of both light and classical music.

Included in the program are: two overtures by Mozart; Prelude to "The Afternoon of a Faun" by Debussy; a movement of Tchaikovsky's "Symphony No. IV in F minor, Opus 36"; the Finale of Franck's "Symphony in D minor"; selections from the musical "The Sound of Music"; and "Polovetsian Dances" from the opera "Prince Igor" by Borodin.

"Stuff'n Nonsense" will hit you with the full force of Jonathan's naked mind. It's all improvisation. Audience tosses up situations, and, without a moment's pause, Jonathan Winters . . . uh . . . runs amok. Perhaps you will find it amusing that a man's mind can, on the instant, discharge such lunacy.
