

A Great Crowd ...!

By Art Chansky

The credit for that beautiful Tar Heel victory over State's Wolfpack Monday night must go to not only Smith, Scott, Wuycik, Fogler, Previs and Chadwick but also to those frenzied fanatics that occupy Carmichael Auditorium during home games.

It's doubtful that without the 8800 Tuesday morning sore-throaters whether the Tar Heels could have successfully overcome hot State shooting, poor UNC free-throwing and the ten-point deficit to deal the Wolfpack its second loss of the season.

If Carolina is decidedly weaker in manpower than over the past three seasons, then Tar Heel fans are well on their way to bridging the gap. Evidence was in plentitude right from the beginning that the pompous Wolfpack was not going to get out of Carmichael alive.

Although it was tight, they didn't. Immediately following the freshmen final buzzer, more banners per square foot popped up than at Shea Stadium during the World Series.

—Same Old Theme Again ...

The perennial theme of another State-Carolina game was replayed with redundancy (Moo U.) and redressed with originality (Culture vs. Agriculture). The intensity of the ever-growing rivalry was demonstrated through personalized messages to the opposition that were both subtle (Axe the Hatchet) and blatant (Wells is a Redneck).

Major John Yesuaitus' pep band was in perfect key from the outset, and the cheerleaders needed only the slightest request to rattle the rafters.

With nearly ten minutes to go in the game and Carolina down ten to the seemingly uncatchable Pack, the crowd clutched out with its best performance of this—any maybe any—year.

When Dennis Wuycik raced across the key and rammed Paul Coder's "easy" 10-footer back at the State pivotman, an 8800-megaton scream began that did not subside until the score was tied at 74.

Pausing for short intervals to breathe only, the crowd greeted Fogler's tying jump shot, Delany's go ahead free throws and Scott's two dippy-doo layups with high pitch pellets that were strictly Vesuvian in nature.

And when it was over a large number flowed onto the floor but had to watch in frustration as their heroes escaped into the dressing room.

—Crowds Should Have Own Tourney

Dean Smith has often said that a Carmichael crowd makes far more noise than a full house at any larger college arena he has seen. Monday night illustrated his very point.

Maybe Atlantic Coast Conference home crowds should meet in a post-season tournament of their own in Charlotte. Pairings would be determined by a seismograph at regular season home games, and the winners of the dual meets would advance as far towards the finals as possible.

There would be two halves to each contest, during which the two contending crowds would scream as loud as possible for the twenty minute periods. The judging would be done by ACC basketball referees to guarantee incentive. The tournament champion would then move on to the Eastern Regional Home Crowd Tourney.

But, of course, that's a little far fetched, and most of the Carmichael people need the Scotts, Millers and Lewises to inspire their most vociferous vocal attempts.

The two remaining ACC games in the Blue Heaven provide perfect subject matter for continued verbosity. Enough signs, slogans and screams in the next two weeks should send Lefty home to Maryland a little less pugnacious and could send South Carolina back to Columbia a lot less 'Cocky.

The Crowd Was At Its Best

Foilsmen Lead Escape From Clemson Fencers

Only a strong performance by the UNC Foil team Saturday enabled the Tar Heels to escape their Death Valley match with the Clemson Tigers with a still unblemished record. The foilsmen swept to a 7-2 victory over the Tigers after the epee and sabre teams had split with 9-9 marks combined. The Citadel, also in the tri-meet, was little match for the experienced Heels as they succumbed by way of a 23-4 score. The five point win in foil in the Clemson contest was the exact margin of Carolina's 16-11 victory against the Tigers.

Coach Ron Miller expressed his surprise at the improvements over last year that both Clemson and The Citadel had made, especially in epee and sabre. He admitted that "the only consistent weapon on the team was the foil, and I was well pleased with their performances, both as individuals and as a team." Four of the five leading fencers for Carolina for the day were on the foil team, the only other being sabreman Press Ruddell who was 4-1 on both matches.

Denver Haynes and Brad Vesilick both had perfect 4-0 marks in foil. It was Vesilick's first match in varsity competition. Tom Ruff and Charlie Potat chipped in 4-1 totals to add to the strength of the foil squad season.

Saturday's double victory boosted the team's record to 4-0 for the season. They see action next on February 14 in Carmichael Auditorium in a match beginning at 10:00 when they entertain St. Augustine's.

... A Woman's View

By CELIA BENTON

It was worth it. If all exams, labs and drop-add lines are the only way to be in that roaring Carolina crowd, they are the most wonderful things in the world.

To hear the pep band playing and feel the bleachers shake as the Heels run onto the floor make everything else in the world secondary.

The Wolfpack looked forbidding, but their bright read against the soft blue of Carmichael made them appear like banjo pickers at a Poetry Forum.

Culture will triumph... can farmers play gentlemen? A plea to the great referee in the sky brings hope that the Heels won't be robbed this time. Before it's answered, the enemy has the lead that brings back memories of halves gone by.

But Scott is there. When he has done the impossible—missed a shot—the heart of faithful men stop everywhere. If he is not stop, where will we be?

The first Tar Heels points drives away painful thoughts of Raleigh newspaper headlines—State Shuts out UNC.

But that foul on Wuycik! Why he never fouled in his life. He's just a victim of cruel and unseeing refs. Anyone that cute can't do anything wrong... can't you see that, ref? Hey, that guy is giving Fogler a backrub. Go to the dressing room, ref, and consider the things you've done to some pretty nice guys.

But the Heels are a second half team. They are going wild now. Scott is himself again, beautiful as ever... no redcoat can look him in the eye and still dribble without a fumble.

The Heels are making more points than State, but why are they still behind? Wait. Only 10 minutes remain.

The break comes. Willford's third foul. He remind's me of an old song, "Baby Face... there's not another one to take your place."

A fever begins to fill the auditorium. The team suddenly responds to the crowd (or vice versa), and the game has turned around. Delany comes in, noticeable as a blur with a shadow of hair. Maybe he can put in some of his swishers.

Finally, that three point lead. Four corners, alas! Now, four points and four seconds, nothing can stop us now.

Any nearby student is a target for instant celebration... a four second love-in. We're the Tar Heels born and bred, and ref, if you raise your hand...

We won. They are playing our song... "Hark the sound of Tar Heel voices singing hoarse and tired..."

'Fouls'—Sloan; 'Tremendous'—Smith

Coaches Differ On Analysis

By RUSTY CARTER
DTH Asst. Sports Editor

Though both perspired heavily amid a throng of anxious reporters, UNC's Dean Smith and N.C. State's Norman Sloan had little else in common as they described Monday night's ACC thriller.

The Carolina skipper dressed in a jubilant smile looked none like the dejected Sloan who had watched a 14 point lead dwindle to a final two point deficit. State's captain was frank and somewhat bitter in his explanation of the 10th consecutive Tar Heel win over the Raleigh team and the second loss this season—the only two.

The substitute officials were the controversial subject as Smith congratulated the duo on their "difficult job" and Sloan, though not directly accusing the officials, stated "the foul situation was the entire turning point of the game."

"We lost on fouls," State's mentor claimed. "We made more field goals than they did and took several good shots at the end that would not fall. Coder was knocked loose from the ball with 23 seconds left and there was no foul, just as Anheuser was fouled three times before that fifth foul was called on him."

In reference to a psychological jinx the Wolfpack might have had due to nine straight losses, Sloan denied any.

"Not one guy wearing red and white is worried about a jinx," he said. "Those in black and white may have felt the jinx."

"It was a typical Big Four game," Smith noted, "and I congratulate these boys for another splendid comeback. Scott's two drives near the end were great, but this was a team effort and it took a tremendous group to come back as they did."

After being down 13 at Wake and make such a comeback and still lose, it would have really hurt us had we not won after coming from 14 back tonight," Smith continued.

While praising the poise of his winning cagers, now standing at 15-4, the enthusiastic UNC coach claimed he was greatly impressed with the fifth-ranked State group. He applauded the team, the individuals and the coach.

"State was as good a team as we've played all year tonight," he praised. "They shot really well and Coach Sloan has done a tremendous job. If any coach deserves Coach of the Year, he does."

"Coder was better than before, I thought, and Willford played a great game," he continued. "When Anheuser fouled out it really helped us because he was doing a fine job."

Admitting that he feared a flattness in the State game due to the hard-luck loss at Wake Forest, the "Carolina Dean" was inspired by his own team's performance. The "shot of confidence" gained in the State game could give the determined Tar Heels enough momentum to "carry it on from here."

"State was ranked fifth and I am now confident we can beat anyone," Smith said.

"Wuycik continues to shoot well, Fogler and Scott are playing really smart ball, and Dedmon picked up in the second half. I repeat, it was a team victory and it has to help us to go on from here."

technical foul, this one by Scott, for a moment brought back Wake Forest memories. Smith summed it up best since the previous one was charged to him.

"Charles is a smart basketball player and I'd hire him as an assistant. But neither of us can referee."

The tense bout had many critical moments, but another
