

Teachers Inc. Recently Formed In Chapel Hill

as a result of low pay, frustration of struggling through the school system, or some other reason, he said. One of Teachers Inc.'s primary objectives is to attract worthy teachers and to place them in concentrated patterns, Timm continued. This way, he added, there will be 15-20 teachers to stand up for each other and work with each other, whereas one teacher standing alone would fail. The second primary objective of Teachers, Inc., according to Timm, is to change the image of the teacher's role.

"The teacher should have community-based concerns within the community and should live and be part of the community in which he is teaching," Timm explained.

The idea behind this, he said, is that public schools are a productive part of the community, therefore the teachers who teach in a certain community should also live in that community. As a result of this, the teachers will be more appreciative and sensitive to students in the community, Timm added.

Teachers Inc. began in March, 1968 with support from various foundations and federal grants. There were three such projects in New York City which opened the school term 1968-69, one in Washington, D.C., and one in Chapel Hill.

One of the New York districts failed, while the others prospered fairly well. But from the one project which failed, Teachers Inc. learned much about what can go wrong with their plan of education, according to Timm.

People coming from outside the city in which they are going to teach must not be arrogant, "I know the answer" types, he said.

Study in Guadalajara, Mexico

The Guadalajara Summer School, a fully accredited University of Arizona program, will offer, June 29 to August 8, art, folklore, geography, history, political sciences, language and literature courses. Tuition, $160; board and room, $155. Write Dr. Juan B. Roel, Office of Summer Session, University of Arizona, Tucson, Arizona 85721.

Rather, Timm suggested that these people come into a new area with no answers to the problems of that community, but with their first objective to become good teachers. Then, they can become acquainted enough with the community to attempt to solve some of its problems.

"This doesn't mean backing down from issues, said Timm. "It means first becoming a skilled person within the classroom, then using that skill to meet the needs of the people in the community."

UNC Students To Attend German Exchange In '70

By GREG LLOYD
DTH Staff Writer

Two UNC students have been chosen to attend the German Exchange held in Gottingen, Germany during the fall semester 1970 and the spring semester 1971.

The selections committee chose Carolyn McAllister and Keith Bridges from UNC to spend a year in Germany, sponsored by student government funds. Tommy Bello of Raleigh, N.C. was the committee's choice for first alternate.

Keith Bridges, 20, a junior from Hickory N.C., explained that going abroad is simply something he has always wanted to do—to see different places and find out what the people are like.

"The Exchange gives me the opportunity to be more than simply a tourist. It will allow me to know a lot of people first-hand," Bridges said.

He also wants to continue his academic studies, become more familiar with German literature, history, and language, and spend as much time traveling as he possibly can.

Upon returning to UNC after this year in Germany, Bridges plans to get a BA in English, then, perhaps, to study English in graduate school. Bridges has been a member of Student Legislature and a participant in the Freshman and Sophomore Honors Program. Carolyn McAllister, 20, a sophomore from Gouverneur, N.Y., said she applied for the German Exchange "to gain international awareness through learning to know the German people and their language."

Carolyn also plans to travel to many different places in Germany and Europe during her stay at Gottingen. She is presently in the school of nursing, but her plans for the future are uncertain.

Miss McAllister has been active in many campus organizations. She is co-director of the Committee for the Advancement of Minority and Disadvantaged Students, Project Chairman for the Walk Against Hunger, involved in the Y's tutoring program and secretary of the American Field Service Club at UNC.

Evidence Stolen In Theft Case

The Honor Court case of a student charged with cheating on an Economics 31 quiz was abruptly recessed due to the theft of the quiz papers from the attorney general's office files. The theft is currently under investigation.

The case involved four students, all fraternity brothers, who were observed by two monitors as displaying recommendaion to the Chancellor. He added, "I have a strong feeling that those who are requesting 24 hour-a-day, seven-day-a-week visitation will be unhappy... I have no sympathy for those requesting 24-hour-a-day visitation."

Asked if the University as a state institution is entitled to discriminate on the basis of sex, Cansler replied, "There are allkinds of discrimination on this campus, by sex, by wealth... There is always going to be preferential treatment... It is a question of whether a specific policy can be justified."

UNC Medics Probe Mono

Three-Year Study Begins

Medical researchers at UNC are beginning a three-year study that is expected to yield the answers to some well-kept secrets about infectious mononucleosis, popularly known as the kissing disease.

The project will be financed by a $149,369 grant from the John A. Hartford Foundation, Inc., New York.

Announcement of the grant was made March 5 by Harry B. George, president of the John A. Hartford Foundation, Inc., and J. Carlyle Sitterson, chancellor of UNC.

Principal investigator in the project is Dr. Joseph S. Pagano, a virologist and co-director of the Division of Infectious Diseases and an associate professor in the departments of medicine and bacteriology and immunology, UNC School of Medicine. Co-investigator is Dr. James H. McCutchan, also a virologist and an assistant professor, department of medicine and UNC student infirmary physician.

The primary aim of the three-year study is to determine exactly how infectious mononucleosis is transmitted.

"Mononucleosis is widely known as the kissing disease," Dr. McCutchan and Pagano said, "but very few hard facts have been established on precisely how mono is transmitted from one person to another."

"The disease is obviously very contagious especially for college students and young children," they explained, "but the virus that causes it is not infectious as it has been observed in the laboratory."

"This is the chief question we will attempt to answer: How does the virus of mono (in an infectious state) pass from one person to another?"

"The virus that causes mono is a defective virus in that its ability to infect cells in the laboratory is defective. Unlike many other viruses which are highly infectious when studied in the laboratory, the mono virus is not able to transfer readily from one cell to another," Drs. McCutchan and Pagano said.

"But we know that it must be infectious at some time and under some conditions since the disease is certainly contagious. We are going to try to catch the virus in that state in which it is most ready to transmit the disease."

A second phase of the Hartford Foundation research project will be to improve diagnostic procedures so that infectious mononucleosis can be accurately identified and clearly linked with or separated from diseases that appear to be similar or related.

A preliminary aim of the research will be to confirm whether the virus in question does in fact cause mono. This is important because the same virus has been repeatedly isolated from (but is not the cause of) the Burkitt's lymphoma (a malignant tumor common in Africa).

"A casual relation between the mono virus and Burkitt's lymphoma has not been scientifically established," Drs. McCutchan and Pagano said. "But it is interesting to speculate—and this is pure speculation—that under one circumstance the virus causes harmless infectious mononucleosis whereas, very rarely, in another it causes a form of cancer."

"Because of the connection by association of this virus with a cancer, any information about how the virus is transmitted from person to person will be of considerable interest. There may be possible implications in the infectious process not only of mononucleosis, but also certain tumors," Drs. McCutchan and Pagano said.

The source of patients with infectious mononucleosis will be UNC's student infirmary which handles 110,000 outpatient visits a year and admits 1,700 patients per year.

To help determine whether or not mono really is a "kissing disease" as suspected, mono virus from several sources and in different states will be given to various experimental animals, including subhuman primates in an attempt to transmit the disease.

Dracula Begins Blood Drive

Minus fangs, Roger Howell doesn't look much like the Count Dracula he portrays in the Carolina Playmakers production of "Dracula," but then, this was not exactly a dark alley. Howell and his victim, actress Mary Poe of Oak Ridge, began a two-day Red Cross blood drive at the General Telephone Company in Durham. Mrs. E.H. Johnson of Durham assisted. To encourage donations, Miss Pope and Howell of Weaverville gave out coupons good for two "Dracula" reserved seats tomorrow through March 10 at the Playmakers Theatre in Chapel Hill.

Daughtry Picked

By TIMOTHY KNOWLTON
Fu Magga Crud Press Secretary

Fu Magga Crud, campus elitist fraternity for cynics and Nietzschean intellectual snobs, today officially endorsed the candidacy of Timothy Daughtry for president of the Student Body.

At a high-level breakfast conference in the Pine Room, Daughtry said the coveted endorsement came as "a complete and total surprise."

Daughtry is president of Fu Magga Crud. Timothy Knowlton, former presidential candidate and presently Daughtry's campaign manager, made the announcement in his capacity as Fu Magga Crud rush chairman.

Knowlton said the endorsement came as a result of Daughtry's statement that "We need more of my fraternity brothaahs in stooht gov'mint."

In his acceptance speech, Daughtry promised handout appointments for all his fraternity brothers, campaign staff and anyone who votes for him.

Along a more serious tone, Daughtry said he plans to address his campaign to that 70 per cent of the student body which sees the recent student governments as ludicrous attempts by a few politicians to play ruling class supported by the funds of other students.

Daughtry promised an administration seeing student government realistically—as a meeting point for students with common interests, not as a closed club with its own miniature power structure.

In the endorsement contest, Daughtry won out over M. Mouse, the Traditionalist Party nominee.
