

The girls in Cobb Dorm looked out of their windows late Sunday night to face the fall's second pantie raid in three days. The group at left responded in unison to the appearance of DTH photographer John Gellman at a second floor window in Cobb. The girls in Spencer (center) met the roving band at about midnight with a brief shower of nylon from the sky, and Jim Minnotte (right) proudly displayed his prizes at the end of the night's work.

Presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger and former Supreme Allied Commander of Europe Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer are featured speakers at this week's "Conference on the Relations Among North Atlantic Nations" to be held at the University.

The conference begins today for more than 500 leaders in business, education, finance and government through out the Southeast.

UNC is hosting the conference, one of two to be held on the campus and one of five to be held throughout the state during the observance of October as International Month.

The conference is being held in the Carolina Inn and is restricted to those holding passes for the three-day event.

Lemnitzer is the conference's first speaker. He will discuss "Cooperation Among the North Atlantic Nations for Mutual Security" at 12:30 p.m. today.

Also appearing on the program are Consolidated University President William C. Friday, chairman of the conference; Gov. Robert Scott and Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson.

This afternoon an address on the "Allied Defense Posture and the United States" will be delivered by John H. Morse, deputy assistant secretary of defense for NATO affairs.

UNC professor James L. Godfrey, chairman of the Department of History, will preside.

Francois Duchene, director of the Institute for Strategic Studies in London, will address the dinner session tonight. He will discuss "The Atlantic Allies and the Warsaw Pact Nations: Problems and Prospects of a Meaningful Detente."

Presiding at this session will be Joseph E. Johnson, president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace and vice president of the Institute for Strategic Studies.

Featuring Wednesday's session of the conference will be Ralf Dahrendorf, member of the Commission of the European Communities; Phillip Mosely, director of the European Institute, Columbia University and John H. Tuthill, director of the Atlantic Institute, Paris, and former U.S. ambassador to the European Economic Community.

Kissinger will address the concluding session of the conference on Thursday. His topic is the "American Role of Promoting Mutual Political Interest Among the North Atlantic Nations." The conference is being sponsored by UNC, N.C. State, Duke University and the Research Triangle Foundation.

The focus of the conference will be the problems of military and political collaboration of the North Atlantic nations, the economic cooperation of the U.S. with these nations and the ways the U.S. can promote better understanding among the people of the North Atlantic Nations.

The next conference at the University concerns population and will be held Oct. 21-23. Three other conferences, to be held in Raleigh, will concern international finance, trade and exchange of technology.

Ad Hoc University Formed

The Invisible University of North Carolina (IUNC), offering courses ranging from graffiti analysis to pumpkin carving, will hold open house at noon Wednesday on the steps of South Building.

"We just want to get people together at the open house," said organizer and "dictator" Nyle Frank, a University graduate student in political science.

"Everybody should bring something to drink, something to eat, something to read, something to fly, something to make love to and somebody to say hello to," Frank said.

Frank said he hopes everybody in Chapel Hill comes to the open house, and, by the end of the semester, "I hope I can get everybody in North Carolina together at one time."

"But if only one other person shows up that's okay as long as she's nice," he said.

Faculty members of IUNC will be wearing robes during the open house and will try to meet interested students, Frank said.

Frank organized the "invisible" school about three weeks ago, saying, "if you really want to be free, you have to finance yourself and be dictator of your own school."

"The idea of the school is to get everybody together," he said. "People have been apart too long, making excuses for being hostile and suspicious of other people."

"If we all get together, we can do just about anything we want. I want North Carolina to be the first united state."

Among the 37 courses offered by IUNC are those in anti-crime, communal living, football analysis and history of rock music.

The anti-crime course, taught by-Chapel Hill Police Chief Arthur Beaumont, is titled "Cooperation Between the Fuzz and the Fuzzies." The class will meet at 3 p.m. Wednesday in the Y-Court.

Communal living, taught by Bob Joesting, will meet at 8 p.m. Oct. 22 on the back steps of South Building and football analysis, taught by Larry Pulley, will meet at 8 p.m. Oct. 21 in the second floor lounge of Morrison dorm.

The history of rock music, taught by Scott Taylor and Charles Neal, will meet at 11:30 p.m. Nov. 13 at 331 Avery.

IUNC will also conduct a tour of small towns in North Carolina Oct. 24-25. This activity, conducted in cooperation with the UNC Liberation Service, will include parades and conversations with people.
