Letters, points increase for Chadwick

by Mark Whicker Sports Writer

"Look at that," needled Dale Gipple, pointing at Dave Chadwick's fistful of fan letters earned after his brilliant 19-point performance in Carolina's recent win over Duke.

"One good game and he's already reading his fan mail."

Having bridged his disappointments at bench-warming his sophomore year, Chadwick finds himself enjoying just about everything these days-his personal improvement, his religion, his sportscasting job at WCAR, the campus radio station, and most of all the development of C. rolina's basketball team.

"I personally thought we wouldn't jell until later in the year," says the 6-7 senior forward. "But our sophomores are playing brilliantly, and everyone's working together."

"Most of all, Coach Smith's strategy for every game has been superb. He presented a challenge to us before the season started, and everyone's come through so far."

Dave's own story involves a reconciliation between basketball and religious committments. His father is a Presbyterian minister and his Lrother recently graduated from Vanderbilt divinity school.

His high school life was devoted to basketball. As his family moved from Charlotte to Kansas City-where he once found himself guarding a high-school All-American named Lucius Allen-to Orlando, Fla., Chadwick kept improving. At Orlando. Dave set state scoring and rebounding records that still stand, and finally picked Carolina out of 130 schools that wanted his talents.

Then Chadwick scored 19 points a game his freshman year to lead the team and also pulled down 12 rebounds per outing. He was looking forward to a big year as a sophomore on the Carolina varsity-and then found himself warming up at the beginning of each half and returning to the bench to watch the rest of the games.

"That was really a shock," Chadwick relates.

"I wanted to play ball more than anything, and I started looking for other places to go to school."

Confused and hurt by the situation, he experienced a summer of deep introspection, which he described in a recent article in Billy Graham's "Decision" magazine.

"That was about the first time I really understood all those Christian expressions," he says. "I had been permeated with Christianity ever since I was a kid, but I didn't grasp what it was about until then."

Finally he decided to return to Chapel Hill and gradually got more playing time each game.

Smith put Chadwick into trying games against Florida State and Wake Forest, but spectators didn't really notice him until he scored 19 points to help beat Maryland 90-83.

Last summer in Orlando, Chadwick added 15 pounds to his slender frame through weight-lifting, and also acquired better jumping ability. He won a starting job in pre-season practice and scored 22 in an opening win over East Tennessee.

It wasn't long before Bill Chamberlain took Chadwick's starting job, but Dean Smith is a great believer in using his bench.

Gamecock guard Kevin Joyce, thinking that Chadwick had dropped a contact lens on the floor, tried earnestly to stomp it to pieces, invoking a "Go to hell, Joyce" chant from the Carmichaei Auditorium crowd.

"Actually, I hadn't lost it, it was still in my eye." Chadwick recalls. "But I called time out and started feeling around my eye for it.

"I was amazed when I saw him stomping the floor, because I worked with Kevin in New York and he's really a good guy."

"But then I found the lens and decided to let him make a fool out of himself by stomping around on the floor."

And one less contact lens wouldn't matter that much anyway. Not when Dave Chadwick's mail keeps rolling in-and the Tar Heel wins keep mounting.

Huband fills underdog role

By Chris Cobbs

It hasn't been much of a year for invincible teams so far.

Texas has already choked on its Wishbone and Ohio State has gone ker-Plunkett in the Rose Bowl. You never figured Notre Dame would win by using mirrors, but the Irish stopped Texas by mirroring the Longhorn's Wishbone-T offense. And Ohio State, which lost one game in three years, was beaten by a team that lost three games as recently as this year-a team that had the best passer in America.

Good old "Sports Illustrated" put the whammy on college football's two finest regular season teams by sticking with them in the magazine's bowl predictions Then the notorious fellows at SI ruined San Francisco's chances by tabbing the 49ers to win the Super Bowl. The gold rush was over before it began.

After spoiling 1971 for this trio, SI sent one of the three Carolina graduates on its staff down among the palmettos, and what he did to Frank McGuire, Catholicism's gift to basketball, was more disheartening than a papal encyclical on birth control.

Gamecocks doomed

The Gamecocks of South Carolina had no more chance than Ft. Sumter after "Sports Illustrated" called them a serious threat to win the national championship.

McGuire annually recruits the toughtest white kids from the streets of New York-the kids who would never have become cardinals anyway. He takes them south, hones their considerable basketball talents, and invites Ring magazine down to cover their games.

But then again, sports writers are nothing if not prone to error and those fellows in New York just might be interested after all if they ever get wind of the way this guy shoots a basketball.

Carolina probably hasn't had anyone with his classic shot since Bob Lewis and Tom Gauntlett. Now that may sound crazy, but did you see the way he was throwing them in against South Carolina and then against Duke the other night?

How many times in a single game do you recall a Tar Heel hitting 20-foot jumpers without flinching? Once, maybe a couple of times. Not Huband. Four times against Duke in a 10-minute span in the second half.

Coach Dean Smith let him sit down before he got a chance to miss. It looks like Huband is going to become what rock singer Elton John calls "a well-known gun." In spite of his background and disposition.

Huband spent his high school days averaging 20 points a game for New Hanover High in Wilmington. Although his team won the state championship when he was a senior, Kim wasn't exactly the Tom McMillen of his day when it came time to decide on a college.

By his own admission, Huband was greatly influenced by a coach, who although he worked with football greats Sonny Jurgenson and Roman Gabriel, didn't do much to make him a flashy, highly recruited player.

Coach Leon Brogden, now retired, wasn't a flamboyant

Another big decision is facing him upon graduation this spring. "I don't want to be a minister," he says, "but I would like a job in some Christian vocation. And then there's sportscasting." Chadwick has done some play-by-play in basketball, football and baseball games

This was the team "Sports Illustrated" said we should keep our eye on-no matter that it would probably get blackened. McGuire taught his team survival of the fightingest. But with SI on its side, it only lasted nine rounds.

In a week's time the Gamecocks were sacked three times, in Chapel Hill, College Park and Charlottesville, places they never heard of in New York. It was a long way from the Time-Life building to Carmichael Auditorium and Cole Field House.

As Kurt Vonnegut Jr. would say, So it goes. If a team suddenly looks a corpse, it is alive and flourishing in other moments.

And now, I would like to take this opportunity to beg SI to refrain from saying anything about this kid from Wilmington named Kim Huband, who is a junior guard for Carolina.

Since he's from an innocuous place like Wilmington and since he looks nondescript and unassuming, I really think Kim is safe. SI doesn't figure to consign him to any glory spot within its pages.

dresser and wasn't a "game" coach (he didn't have to be) says Huband. So he was guite a bit different from the staff Huband found at UNC.

Huband played, as they say, sparingly last year, when he averaged 2.2 points a game. He was spared the necessity of leaving his padded Carolina blue folding chair, which is what the Tar Heel bench has evolved into.

Although he could probably have hit from the bench, he wasn't getting the ball too frequently there. So Huband worked on his strength, stamina and quickness afoot last summer and earned a chance to get his hands on the ball more often this winter.

He has made 60.9 per cent of his shots for a 5.6 per game average. He's only just begun, too. He demonstrated his ball handling ability by running UNC's four corners offense for several minutes against South Carolina and he knows more than enough about defense to stick his hand in your face at the right moment.

Unheard of guys like Kim Huband make life miserable for the experts who make their living talking about invincible
