

Those who made it out of the utter chaos of the book-ex Tuesday after waiting in line to pay for their second semester books carried their loads in varying styles.

Those who carried them over the shoulder should retrace their steps-they've probably lost some. Others found out about the his and hers bags, he carries hers and she carries his. Some coeds had to carry their own and most found it easier to use two bags to balance the load. (Staff photos by Cliff Kolovson)

Drugs are subject of alumni seminar

Clarence Whitefield, alumni director, said a good representation of alumni will register for the seminar beginning at noon Friday at the Carolina Inn.

Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson will welcome the alumni participating at an opening luncheon at 12:30 p.m. in the Inn's new ballroom. Dean George P. Hager of the Pharmacy School is aiding with the seminar.

Sessions will be held at Beard Hall, headquarters of the Pharmacy School.

Hager will make the keynote speech on "Drug Abuse Education in North Carolina." Head of the Pharmacy School since 1966, Hager has received the American Pharmaceutical Association Foundation Achievement Award in the Advancement of Pharmacy in 1968.

Dr. Robert Senior of Chapel Hill will speak Friday on "People Involved in Drug Abuse." Dr. Senior, 1970 Chapel Hill Father of the Year, is respected for his work in drug abuse in the local area.

Dr. Louis Harris of the Medical School will discuss "rugs That Are Abused." His recent research in the use of certain marijuana derivatives as a pain killer has gained national attention.

Charles Dunn, State Bureau of Investigation director, will speak at the dinner at the Inn Friday night. Dunn is a graduate of UNC.

Dr. Arthur J. McBay, pathologist in the Medical School, will speak Saturday morning on the "Hazards of Drug Abuse." In 1969 Dr. McBay, became Chief Toxicologist of the State Board of Health.

Two fifth-year students in the School of Pharmacy will speak Saturday on "Education in Combatting Drug Abuse." James C. MacAllister and Jesse M. Pike, Jr., have been active in the Pharmacy School's Student to Student Program. This program allows a number of advanced pharmacy students to visit N.C. secondary schools to discuss drug abuse. Pike received a personal letter of appreciation from President Nixon for outstanding work in drug abuse to the youth of this state.

This is the first of three seminars for alumni to be held at UNC this year. Other seminars will be conducted in the spring on "The Environment" and "Art and
