The financial assistance plan for some 600 North Carolina residents who attend public as well as private colleges and universities in the state, will be outlined Friday at 2 p.m. in Gerrard Hall by J. Earle Harper, coordinator of scholarships for the State Department of Instruction.

Although designed for less affluent students, figures compiled from a reporting of the Prospective Teachers Scholarship Loan Fund awards for the current academic year indicates that the median family income of this year's recipients is approximately $8,000 and

Applications, which are due March 1, may be obtained from the Student Aid Office in Vance Hall or at Friday's meeting in Gerrard

This year's scholarships will go primarily to students who report an intention to teach on the kindergarten or fourth to eighth grade levels in the state's public schools upon graduation. Other students "probably won't get the scholarships," notes William M. Geer, director of Carolina's Student Aid Office.

IFC slates buses for upcoming rush

Inter Fraternity Council (IFC) will run a free bus service during the hours of fraternity rush for men participating in rush.

Rush hours are 2 to 6 p.m. Sunday; 7 to 10 p.m. Monday and Tuesday; and 7 to 9:30 p.m. Wednesday. Buses will start running about 15 minutes before rush times and continue until about 15 minutes after rush hours end.

The buses will begin and end their routes at Chase Cafeteria before and after rush hours. During actual rush hours, the buses will follow a three-stop route from Finley Golf Course to Morehead Planetarium parking lot to the Scuttlebutt.

Rush books were delivered Tuesday night to all freshman men. Any student who did not get one, or upperclassmen who desire one may obtain a copy in the Dean of Men's office, 01 Steele.

Preference cards are also available in the Dean of Men's Office. Rushes may visit any house with or without receiving an invitation or signing a preference card. Rushes are neither obliged to nor restricted from visits to any fraternity house.

"Rushes may stay as long or as short as they like," explained Todd Llewellyn, IFC rush chairman. "Rush is simply an open house to meet the people involved."

Under limited contact rules, freshman rushes may not converse with fraternity men other than in formal greeting or during rush hours. Fraternity men may call or visit freshmen rushes in their dorm rooms only.

"The idea is to allow all fraternities to be able to contact rushes on an equal basis," said Llewellyn.

Limited contact rules begin after women's closing hours Saturday night and run until rush is over Wednesday night.

Freshman Council formed by Bello

A freshman council to help inform those who want to be student leaders is being established by Student Body President Tommy Bello.

"In the past," Bello said, "freshmen have often made the legitimate complaint they never know what's happening around campus." He added that many freshmen want to involve themselves with student politics, but are handicapped by a lack of knowledge of the administrative and academic processes.

"One of the problems of Student Government has been a lack of continuity," the student body president said.

By setting up a seminar-type discussion group, Bello hopes to achieve continuity by providing the freshmen knowledge from his experience and the experience of others.

"Hopefully, the freshman council will serve as a brain drain, where myself and other speakers will tell the council all we know about everything in the University, academically and politically, and about everything else the council chooses to embark upon."

Funding for the project will come from Bello's discretionary fund.

Student Government is presently seeking interested freshman students who are interested in student politics, Bello said. Anyone interested should write Tommy Bello, Student Body President, Box 47, Carolina Union.

Debaters see action

The UNC Debate Team of Joe McGuire and Dave Kruse saw action at the William and Mary Debate Tournament during the last week in January. They went through to the quarter-finals, where they dropped the debate, 2-1, to Oberlin. The team debated in the preliminaries and emerged with a 7-1 record. In the octo-finals, Kruse and McGuire defeated the University of New Hampshire, 3-0, with a cost of dying case.

McGuire won the third place speaker award in the tournament.

At the Harvard tournament, last weekend, Loveland and Joe McGuire lost in the quarter-finals to MIT, which went on to win the tournament. The case argued was an unemployment-inflation trade-off. The team came out of the preliminaries with a 1-7 record, and then defeated Boston College in the octo-finals.

Loveland was named second speaker and McGuire was fifth speaker at the tournament.

Carolina group backs hunger march

Lt. Gov. Pat Taylor issued a proclamation for International Walk Day at the Governor's Office in Raleigh Tuesday.

Bill Brieger, junior from Bel Air, Md. and regional director of the Youth World Development, was present with other YMCA members from the University for the proclamation.

May 7 through 9 was announced as the time for the Walk Against Hunger-Act for the Development weekend.

Brieger said Chapel Hill will not participate in the walk that weekend because the date is too near the end of the semester, and the students would leave for home before funds for the walk could be collected. He said there would be a substitute activity relating to the fight against hunger that weekend.

The five towns in North Carolina participating in International Walk Day are Greensboro, Raleigh, Winston-Salem, Charlotte and Newton-Conover.

The Daily Tar Heel is published by the University of North Carolina Student Publications Board, daily except Sunday, examination periods, vacations and summer periods. Offices are at the Student Union building, Univ. of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N.C. 27514. Telephone numbers: News, Sports-933-1011, 933-1012; Business, Circulation, Advertising-933-1163.
