

Theater of Deaf to do 'Woyzeck'

Ticket sales begin today at the Union for the Thursday, March 4 performance by the National Theatre of the Deaf. Reserved seats cost $2.25 and $1.75 for the 8 p.m. show in Memorial Hall.

Theatre of the Deaf started with the notion that deaf people are born actors. From birth, much of their lives is taken up by a struggle to communicate which in turn develops an intense concentration, a brilliance at a charade-like language imitation and a remarkable sense of the expansion of language into images expressed by the entire body. This language has all the color and beauty of pantomime and dance. It is highly intelligible to general audiences, probing and expanding knowledge of the nature of theatrical experience. It is a theatre where gesture, rather than oral communication, counts heavily.

Theatre of the Deaf not only tours this country but has also performed in Italy, France, Israel, England and Yugoslavia. In 1969, the company played a two-week stand on Broadway to excellent press notices. The company is composed entirely of deaf actors along with two readers.

One of the many unique features of their production is the background and decor provided by unconventional musical instruments designed by French sculptor Francois Baschet. The instruments, recognized for aesthetic qualities, are played for the benefit of hearing audiences as accompaniment to the actors and the narration. They also serve as cues since some vibrations are felt by the deaf actors.

Theatre of the Deaf is a division of the Eugene O'Neill Memorial Theatre Foundation. It incorporates an acting school and the Little Theatre of the Deaf which performs poetry and dramatic literature for children. From their broad repertoire the company will present "Woyzeck" and "Journeys" at UNC.

"Woyzeck" is one of the first modern tragedies, a precursor of Theatre of the Absurd and deals with specific social problems as well as more universal themes of the futility of existence and the senseless wandering of life. "Journeys" is a superb collection of writings by children.

Women's Lib group rewrites fairy tales

LIVERPOOL, England—UPI—If Snow White had known what was good for her, says a liberation group in Liverpool, she never would have washed dishes for anyone—not even seven kindly dwarfs. And not only that. With even a bit of self-respect, she'd never have let herself get carted off by any domineering prince to decorate his castle—or boudoir—for the rest of her days.

The way a group within the Liverpool Women's Lib chapter sees it, fairy stories have always made "sex objects" out of women.

The group, therefore has rewritten the Snow White story as pilot for a project of total refashioning of the familiar childhood tales, time-honored indoctrinators of the young.

Snow White still bites the poisoned apple and passes out. But this time, the hunter saves her because he hates to see all that intellectual potential go down the drain. Along comes Prince Charming, and Poof! The happy couple spend the rest of their days toiling shoulder-to-shoulder with the dwarfs down in their mine.

Fairy tales, say the women, always have stereotyped feminine virtues and vices. Self-determining women always are represented as ugly and evil. A pretty girl always can trade on her beauty to win riches, smart clothes and other superficials. Nary a thought goes to such allegedly male virtues as ideas, creativity or moral and ethical values.

Men, by contrast, always are brave, rich, active, and handsome. What's more, they always, but always, win out in the end.

No more. In fairy tales, Women's Lib style, the princess sometimes use brains and wits to bail a floundering he-man out of trouble—usually of his own making—a group statement said.

Marriage is mentioned only when it is crucial to mention it. The group said it planned to approach the publisher when it had revamped a sufficient quantity of material.

DOES THIS MAKE SENSE?

- 1 Does it make sense to disengage from the Vietnam war by extending it to country after country? To protect the withdrawal of our troops from Vietnam, we are massively increasing our air activity throughout the area and supporting South Vietnamese troops as they range widely beyond their borders. Does that make sense?
- 2 Are we protecting our national honor and credibility by destroying without limit? Twenty-five percent of our allies in South Vietnam alone are now homeless refugees; hundreds of innocent people are killed weekly by our air attacks in Indo-China. Is that what we stand for?
- 3 The morale and the ethics of our army are disintegrating as the war drags on; drug-taking is rampant; authority is being undermined as men threaten their officers; innocent civilians are being killed out of fear, frustration and hate.
- 4 After 10 years of fighting and the loss of 50,000 American lives alone, we believe that our military obligations to South Vietnam are at an end.
- 5 Since South Vietnamese national elections have been scheduled definitely for October 1971, we advocate the announcement, now of a specific date for total withdrawal of all American forces from the Indo-China area, that date to be on, before, or closely after the date of the Vietnam elections.

If you are in agreement with the sense of this statement, we urge you to sign below. We would also like to ask you to make a donation to help with the costs of publication of this statement. Send to Virginia Carson, "Y" Building, Campus.

Without disrupting the business, educational or any community process, we are planning a visit to Washington for February 23 and subsequent dates. We will be urging Senators and Congressmen to support specific legislation to end the war.

If you want to come to Washington with us on Tuesday, February 23, buy your bus ticket in the "Y" today, Monday, February 23, before 2 p.m. Cost: $12; depart Morehead Planetarium Parking Lot 4:30 a.m. sharp; arrive back same place, midnight. We will meet with Senators McGovern, Javitz, Humphrey; the N.C. Congressional delegation; and several "new" senators and congressmen.
